As we swept away from the shore I cast back a wistful eye upon the moss grown roofs and ancient elms of the village and prayed that the inhabitants might long retain their happy ignoprovements—their respect for the fiddle and their contempt for the Almighty Dollar.

¹⁵ I took thought, and invented what I conceived to be the appropriate title of "agnostic." It came into my head as suggestively antithetic to the "Gnostic" of Church history who professed to know so much about the very things of which I was ignorant, and I took the earliest opportunity of parading it at our society, to show that I, too, had a tail like the other foxes. To my great satisfaction, the term took; and when the Spectator had stood godfather to it, any suspicion in the minds of respectable people that a knowledge of its parentage might have awakened was, of course, completely lulled.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Candidate, l. 784.

¹⁹ Dreams in their development have breath,
And tears, and tortures, and the touch of joy;

They leave a weight upon our waking thoughts;

They take a weight from off our waking toils;

They do divide our being; they become

A portion of ourselves as of our time,

And look like heralds of eternity.

BYRON, The Dream, St. 1.

²⁰ All dreams, as in old Galen I have read,
Are from repletion and complexion bred,
From rising fumes of indigested food,
And noxious humours that infect the blood.

DAYDEN, Fables; The Cock and the Fox, l. 140.

²¹ Dreams are but interludes which fancy makes:
When Monarch-Reason sleeps, this mimic wakes;
Compounds a medley of disjointed things,
A mob of cobblers and a court of kings:
Light fumes are merry, grosser fumes are sad;
Both are the reasonable soul run mad:
And many monstrous forms in sleep we see,
That neither were, nor are, nor e'er can be.

DAYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 325. The fourth line is probably a misprint for "A court of cobblers and a mob of kings."

²² Two diverse gates there are of bodiless
dreams,

These of sawn ivory, and those of horn.

Such dreams as issue where the ivory gleams
Fly without fate, and turn our hopes to scorn.
But dreams which issue through the burn-ished horn,

What man soe'er beholds them on his bed,
These work with virtue and of truth are born.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 562. (Worsley, tr.)

Two gates of Sleep there are, whereof the one is said to be of horn, and thereby an easy outlet is given to true shades; the other gleaming with the sheen of polished ivory, but false are the dreams sent by the spirits to the world above.
(Sunt geminæ Somni poræ; quarum altera

Altera candenti perfecta nitens elephanto,
Sed falsa ad cælum mittunt insomnia Mænes.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 893.

Sleep gives his name to portals twain:

One all of horn they say,

Through which authentic spectres gain

Quick exit into day,

And one which bright with ivory gleams,
Whence Pluto sends delusive dreams.

VERGIL, Æneid, vi, 893. (Conington, tr.)

Two gates the silent house of Sleep adorn:
Of polished ivory this, that of transparent horn;
True visions through transparent horn arise;
Through polished ivory pass deluding lies.

VERGIL, Æneid, vi, 893. (Dryden, tr.)

Till their own dreams at length deceive 'em,
And oft repeating, they believe 'em.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alms. Canto iii, l. 13.

That children dream not the first half-year;
that men dream not in some countries, with many more, are unto me sick men's dreams; dreams out of the ivory gate, and visions before midnight.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, On Dreams.

Some dreams I confess may admit of easy and feminine exposition: he who dreamed that he could not see his right shoulder, might easily fear to lose the sight of his right eye. . . . But why to dream of lettuce should presage some ensuing disease, why to eat figs should signify foolish talk, why to eat eggs great trouble, . . . I shall leave unto your divination.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 19.

After a dream of weddings comes a corse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 236. (1639)

A Friday night's dream on the Saturday told,

Is sure to come true be it never so old.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, 252.

After midnight, when dreams are true. (Post mediam noctem visus, cum somnia vera.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 33.

Those dreams are true which we have in the morning as the lamp begins to flicker. (Namque sub aurora, jam dormitante lucerna, Somnia quo cerni tempore vera solent.)

OVIN, Heroides. Epist. xix, l. 195.

Off morning dreams presage approaching fate,
For morning dreams, as poets tell, are true.

MICHAEL BRUCE, Elegy on Spring.

At break of day when dreams, they say, are true.

DRYDEN, Spanish Friar. Act iii, sc. 2.

And all the morning dreams are true.

BEN JONSON, Love Restored, last line.

This morn, as sleeping in my bed I lay,
I dreamt (and morning dreams come true they say).

W. B. REXFORD, Bombastes Furioso.

In the morning, there happen more pleasant and certain dreams.

REGINALD SCOT, Witchcraft. Bk. x, ch. 7.

Dreams are the true interpreters of our inclinations, but art is required to sort and understand them.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

There is some ill a-brewing towards my rest,

For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 5, l. 17.

I have had a dream past the wit of man to say what dream it was.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 211.

The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report,
what my dream was.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 216.

If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 1.

IV—Dreams: The Land of Dreams

Let us go in and dance once more
On the dream's glimmering floor,
CONRAD AIKEN, *Nocturne of Remembered
Spring*.

When to soft Sleep we give ourselves away,
And in a dream as in a fairy bark
Drift on and on through the enchanted dark
To purple daybreak—little thought we pay
To that sweet bitter world we know by day.
T. B. ALDRICH, Sonnet: Sleep.

Sweet sleep be with us, one and all!
And if upon its stillness fall
The visions of a busy brain,
We'll have our pleasure o'er again,
To warm the heart, to charm the sight.
Gay dreams to all! good night, good night.
JOANNA BAILLIE, The Phantom: Song.

If there were dreams to sell,
Merry and sad to tell,
And the crier rung his bell,
What would you buy?
THOMAS LOVELL BEDDOES, Dream-Pedlary.

But I jumped to feel how sharp had been
The pain when it did live,
How the faded dreams of Nineteen-ten
Were Hell in Nineteen-five.
RUPERT BROOKE, The One Before the Last.

Nosegays! leave them for the waking,
Throw them earthward where they grew;
Dim as such, beside the breaking Amaranths he looks unto:
Folded eyes see brighter colours than the open ever do.
E. B. BROWNING, A Child Asleep. St. 2.

We shall start up, at last awake
From Life, that insane dream we take
For waking now, because it seems.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter-Day. Canto xiv.

We wake in a dream, and we ache in a dream,
And we break in a dream, and die!
ROBERT BUCHANAN, *Balder the Beautiful:
Proem*.

[Her] sweet lips murmur'd like a brook

A wordless music, and her face so fair Stirr'd with her dream, as rose-leaves with the air.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 29.

And a hundred streams are the same as
one;

And the maiden dreameth her love-lit dream;
And what is it all, when all is done?
The net of the fisher the burden breaks,
And always the dreaming the dreamer wakes.

ALICE CARY, The Lover's Diary.

² Ah, how the years exile us into dreams.
JAMES CASSIDY, Fire Island.

³ Into the land of dreams I long to go.
Bid me forget!

MARY E. COLERIDGE, Mandragora.

In the music-land of dreams.
FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Sleeper.

Ah, give us back our dear dead Land of Dreams!
HENRY MARTYN HOYT, The Land of Dreams.

⁴ This tale's a fragment from the life of dreams.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Phantom or Fact?

⁵ A crooked street goes past my door, entwining love of every land;

It wanders, singing, round the world, to Ashkelon and Samarkand.

To roam it is an ecstasy, each mile the easier it seems,

And yet the longest street on earth is this—the Street of Dreams.

CHARLES DIVINE, The Crooked Street of Dreams.

⁶ There's a long, long trail a-winding
Into the land of my dreams,

Where the nightingales are singing,
And a white moon beams.

There's a long, long night of waiting

Until my dreams all come true,

Till the day when I'll be going down

That long, long trail with you.

STODDARD KING, There's a Long, Long Trail.
(1915) Music by Zo (Alonzo) Elliott.

⁷ Whence comes Solace? Not from seeing What is doing, suffering, being;

Not from noting Life's conditions,

Not from heeding Time's monitions;

But in cleaving to the Dream

And in gazing at the Gleam

Whereby grey things golden seem.

THOMAS HARDY, On a Fine Morning.

⁸ In thoughts from the visions of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men.

Old Testament: Job, iv, 13.

In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men.

Old Testament: Job, xxxiii, 15.

⁹ O Thou, the Father of us all,
Whose many mansions wait,

To whose dream welcome each must come
A child, at Heaven's gate:

In that fair house not made with hands

Whatever splendor beams,

Out of Thy bounty keep for me

A little room of dreams.

R. U. JOHNSON, The Little Room of Dreams.

¹⁰ A house of dreams untold,

It looks out over the treetops,

And faces the setting sun.

EDWARD MACDOWELL, From a Log Cabin:

Heading. These lines are inscribed on a memorial tablet at MacDowell's grave.

¹¹ The dream that fires man's heart to make,
To build, to do, to sing or say

A beauty Death can never take,

An Adam from the crumbled clay.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Fragments.

¹² But that a dream can die will be a thrust
Between my ribs forever of hot pain.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Here is a Wound.

¹³ A thousand creeds and battle-cries,

A thousand warring social schemes,

A thousand new moralities,

And twenty thousand thousand dreams!

ALFRED NOYES, Forward.

Enough of dreams! No longer mock

The burdened hearts of men!

Not on the cloud, but on the rock.

ALFRED NOYES, The Secret Inn.

¹⁴ That holy dream—that holy dream,

While all the world were chiding,

Hath cheered me as a lovely beam

A lonely spirit guiding.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, A Dream.

¹⁵ All that we see or seem

Is but a dream within a dream.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, A Dream Within a Dream.

And did not dream it was a dream.

TENNISON, The Two Voices, l. 213.

¹⁶ I shall be satisfied

If only the dreams abide.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, If Only the Dreams Abide.

Yet after brick and steel and stone are gone,

And flesh and blood are dust, the dream lives on.

ANDERSON M. SCRUGGS, Only the Dream is Real.

Dream abides. It is the only thing that abides;

vision abides.

MIQUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,

p. 237.

¹⁷ I'll dream no more—by manly mind

Not even in sleep is will resigned.
My midnight orisons said o'er,
I'll turn to rest, and dream no more.
SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 35.

¹
To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 65.

²
Ah, the strange, sweet, lonely delight
Of the Valleys of Dream.
WILLIAM SHARP, Dream Fantasy.

From the dim blue Hills of Dream
I have heard the west wind blow.
WILLIAM SHARP, From the Hills of Dream.

³
A dream
Of youth, which night and time have quenched forever,
Still, dark, and dry, and unremembered now.
SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 669.

⁴
Dreams and the light imaginings of men,
And all that faith creates, or love desires,
Terrible, strange, sublime and beauteous shapes.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act i, l. 200.

⁵
In an ocean of dreams without a sound.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 26.

⁶
A place of dream, the Holy Land
Hangs midway between earth and heaven.
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, The Holy Land.

⁷
In the world of dreams I have chosen my part.
To sleep for a season and hear no word
Of true love's truth or of light love's art,
Only the song of a secret bird.
SWINBURNE, A Ballad of Dreamland: Envoi.

I have put my days and dreams out of mind,
Days that are over, dreams that are done.
SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 7.

⁸
Moreover, something is or seems,
That touches me with mystic gleams,
Like glimpses of forgotten dreams.
TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 379.

⁹
The chambers in the house of dreams
Are fed with so divine an air,
That Time's hoar wings grow young therein,
And they who walk there are most fair.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Dream-Tryst. St. 3.

¹⁰
A pleasing land of drowsyhed it was,
Of dreams that wave before the half-shut eye;
And of gay castles in the clouds that pass,

For ever flushing round a summer sky.
JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto i, st. 6.

¹¹
In dreams the exile cometh home;
In dreams the lost is found;
In dreams the captive's feet may roam
The world around.
WILLIAM WATSON, In Dreams.

¹²
Don't you ever try to go there—
It's to dream of, not to find.
Lovely things like that is always Mostly in your mind.
JOHN V. A. WEAVER, Legend.

¹³
You might as well
Hunt half a day for a forgotten dream.
WORDSWORTH, Hart-Leap Well. Pt. ii, st. 9.
Whither is fled the visionary gleam?
Where is it now, the glory and the dream?
WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 56.

V—Dreams: Pleasant Dreams

¹⁴
It was a dream of perfect bliss
Too beautiful to last.
T. H. BAYLY, It Was a Dream.

¹⁵
One of those passing, rainbow dreams,
Half light, half shade, which Fancy's beams
Paint on the fleeting mists that roll
In trance or slumber round the soul!
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers. Pt. iii, l. 273.
Oh! that a dream so sweet, so long enjoy'd,
Should be so sadly, cruelly destroy'd!
MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Veiled Prophet of Khorassan. Pt. ii, l. 404.

None thrives for long upon the happiest dream.
COVENTRY PATMORE, Tired Memory.

¹⁶
O dream, how sweet, too sweet, too bitter
sweet,
Whose wakening should have been in Paradise.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Echo.

¹⁷
This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep
Did mock sad fools withal.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act v, sc. 1, l. 164.
All this is but a dream,
Too flatteringly-sweet to be substantial.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 140.

¹⁸
If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 1, l.
67.

Is this a dream? Oh, if it be a dream,
Let me sleep on, and do not wake me yet!
LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act iii, sc. 5.

¹⁹
The dream
Dream'd by a happy man, when the dark
East,

Unseen, is brightening to his bridal morn.
 TENNYSON, The Gardener's Daughter, l. 71.

VI—Dreams: Unpleasant Dreams

¹ Hence, babbling dreams! you threaten here in vain!

COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (Alt.). Act v, sc. 3.

² Dreams that bring us little comfort, heavenly promises that lapse
 Into some remote It-may-be, into some forlorn Perhaps.

S. R. LYSACHT, A Confession of Unfaith.

³ Dreams affright me, that mimic real dangers, and my senses wake to my misfortunes.
 (Somnia me terrent verus imitantia casus, Et vigilant sensus in mea damna mel.)
 OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 43.

⁴ Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there, wondering, fearing, Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream before.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven.

⁵ 'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen
 Tongue, and brain not.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 146.

⁶ O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 260.

But as the fierce vexation of a dream.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
 Act iv, sc. 1, l. 72.

In the affliction of these terrible dreams
 That shake us nightly.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 17.

O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
 So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
 That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
 I would not spend another such a night,
 Though 't were to buy a world of happy days.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 2.

For never yet one hour in his bed
 Have I enjoy'd the golden dew of sleep,
 But have been waked by his timorous dreams.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 83.

Lord! Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
 What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 21.

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
 And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
 Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
 Of healths five-fathom deep; and then anon
 Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,
 And being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two
 And sleeps again.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 4, 82.

⁷ May the dream never prove true which an evil sleep brought me yesternight. (Nec sint mihi somnia vera, Quæ tulit hesternæ pessima nocte quies.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 4, l. 1.

VII—Dreams of Love

⁸ Come to me in my dreams, and then
 By day I shall be well again.

For then the night will more than pay
 The hopeless longing of the day.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Longing. St. 1.

Come to me, darling; I'm lonely without thee;
 Daytime and nighttime I'm dreaming about thee.

JOSEPH BRENNAN, The Exile to His Wife.

⁹ The glory dropped from their youth and love,

And both perceived they had dreamed a dream.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust.

¹⁰ That just as her young lip began to ope
 Upon the golden fruit the vision bore,
 A bee flew out and stung her to the heart.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 77.

¹¹ A damsel with a dulcimer
 In a vision once I saw:

It was an Abyssinian maid,
 And on her dulcimer she played,
 Singing of Mount Abora.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan.

Adieu! adieu!

Love's dreams prove seldom true.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Il Zopolya. Act ii, sc. 1.

¹² The house of dreams in which I live
 Has beamed old ceilings high,

It sits far back amid the trees
 And a brook runs laughing by;

It has a quaint old-fashioned hall,
 Where soft light filters through,

Red roses on the newel-post

And on the staircase, You.

ELIZABETH GORDON, House of Dreams.

¹³ Thou lovest what thou dreamest her;
 I am thy very dream!

THOMAS HARDY, The Well-Beloved. St. 13.

¹⁴ In blissful dream, in silent night,
 There came to me, with magic might,
 With magic might, my own sweet love,
 Into my little room above.

HEINE, Youthful Sorrows. Pt. iv, st. 1.

¹⁵ In dreams she grows not older
 The lands of Dream among,

Though all the world wax colder,
 Though all the songs be sung,

In dreams doth he behold her
Still fair and kind and young.
ANDREW LANG, Lost Love.

¹ Ever of thee I'm fondly dreaming,
Thy gentle voice my spirit can cheer.
GEORGE LINLEY, Ever of Thee.

² With the first dream that comes with the first sleep,
I run, I run, I am gathered to thy heart.
ALICE MEYNELL, Renouncement.

We that are twain by day, at night are one.
A dream can bring me to your arms once more.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Compensation.

Thou comest as the memory of a dream,
Which now is sad because it hath been sweet.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1.

And all my days are trances,
And all my nightly dreams
Are where thy gray eye glances
And where thy footstep gleams—
In what ethereal dances
By what eternal streams.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, To One in Paradise.

⁴ Still on that breast enamour'd let me lie,
Still drink delicious poison from thy eye,
Pant on thy lip, and to thy heart be press'd;
Give all thou canst—and let me dream the
rest.
POE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 121.

⁵ I arise from dreams of thee
In the first sweet sleep of night,
When the winds are breathing low,
And the stars are shining bright.
SHELLEY, Lines to an Indian Air.

⁶ Meet me in Dreamland, sweet dreamy
Dreamland,
There let my dreams come true.
BETH SLATER WHITSON, *Meet Me To-night in
Dreamland*. (1909)

⁷ But I, being poor, have only my dreams.
I have spread my dreams under your feet;
Tread softly, because you tread on my dreams.
W. B. YEATS, Wind Among the Reeds.

VIII—Dreams: The Dreamer

⁸ Back of the Job—the Dreamer
Who's making the dream come true.
BEATON BRADLEY, The Thinker.

⁹ The soul hath need of prophet and redeemer:
Her outstretched wings against her pris-oning bars,
She waits for truth; and truth is with the dreamer.—

Persistent as the myriad light of stars!
FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Dream the Great Dream.

¹² Yet to have greatly dreamed precludes low ends.
J. R. LOWELL, Columbus.

¹³ Dreamer of dreams, born out of my due time,
Why should I strive to set the crooked straight?
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Apology.

¹⁴ For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.
JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, The Cry of the Dreamer.

¹⁵ He whom a dream hath possessed knoweth
no more of doubting.
SHAMMAS O'SHEEL, He Whom a Dream Hath Possessed.

¹⁶ Some must delve when the dawn is nigh;
Some must toil when the noonday beams;
But when night comes, and the soft winds sigh,
Every man is a King of Dreams.
CLINTON SCOLLARD, The King of Dreams.

IX—Dreams: Day-Dreams

¹⁷ Thou shalt make castles then in Spain,
And dream of joy all but in vain.

¹⁸ My eyes make pictures, when they are shut.
S. T. COLERIDGE, A Day-Dream.
Divert her eyes with pictures in the fire.
POPE, Epistle to Mrs. Blount.

¹⁹ I walked beside the evening sea
And dreamed a dream that could not be;
The waves that plunged along the shore
Said only: "Dreamer, dream no more!"
GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Ebb and Flow.

²⁰ I strongly wish for what I firmly hope;
Like the day-dreams of melancholy men,
I think and think on things impossible,
Yet love to wander in that golden maze.

Honest mean habiliments.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 172.

⁸ Dress doth make a difference, David. 'Tis all in all, I think.

SERRIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 4.

⁹ As for Clothing, . . . perhaps we are led oftener by the love of novelty and a regard for the opinions of men, in procuring it, than by a true utility.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

¹⁰ Costume is not dress.

J. McNEILL WHISTLER, "Ten O'Clock."

III—Dress: Its Vanity

¹¹ Thy clothes are all the soul thou hast.

BAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act v, sc. 3, l. 170.

The soul of this man is his clothes.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well That Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 45.

All his reverend wit Lies in his wardrobe.

JOHN WHISTLER, The White Devil. Act ii, sc. 1.

¹² Our bravery's but a vain disguise, To hide us from the world's dull eyes,

The remedy of a defect, With which our nakedness is deckt.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satire Upon the Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 88.

¹³ Let him wear brand-new garments still, Who has a threadbare soul, I say.

BLISS CARMAN, The Mendicants.

No man ever stood the lower in my estimation for having a patch in his clothes; yet I am sure that there is a greater anxiety, commonly, to have fashionable, or at least clean and unpatched clothes, than to have a sound conscience.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

¹⁴ And just when evening turns the blue vault grey,

To spend two hours in dressing for the day.

COWPER, Hope, l. 81.

Let the world go dine and dress.

LAMAN BLANCHARD, Dolce far Niente.

¹⁵ We sacrifice to dress, till household joys And comforts cease. Dress drains our cellar dry,

And keeps our larder lean; puts out our fires, And introduces hunger, frost, and woe, Where peace and hospitality might reign.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 614.

Many a one, for the sake of finery on the back, has gone with a hungry belly, and half-starved their families. "Silks and satins, scarlets and velvets, put out the kitchen fire," as Poor Richard says.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth.

¹⁶ Fond pride of dress is sure a very curse; Ere fancy you consult, consult your purse.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth.

¹⁷ He that is proud of the rustling of his silks, like a madman, laughs at the rattling of his fetters. For indeed, Clothes ought to be our remembrances of our lost innocence.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: Apparel.

¹⁸ Those who make their dress a principal part of themselves, will, in general, become of no more value than their dress.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On the Clerical Character.

Not caring, so that sumpter-horse, the back Be hung with gaudy trappings, in what coarse, Yea, rags most beggarly, they clothe the soul.

J. R. LOWELL, Cambridge Thirty Years Ago. Quoted. This essay was originally called Fire-side Travels.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 180.

²⁰ What madness to carry whole incomes on one's body! (Quis furor est census corpore ferre suos!)

OWEN, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 172.

A silk suit which cost me much money, and I pray God to make me able to pay for it.
SAMUEL PEPPY, Diary, 1 July, 1660.

1 Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor;
For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich;
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,

So honour peereth in the meanest habit.
What is the jay more precious than the lark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act IV, sc. 3, l. 173.

2 The tulip and the butterfly
Appear in gayer coats than I:
Let me be dressed fine as I will,
Flies, worms, and flowers exceed me still.
ISAAC WATTS, Against Pride in Clothes.

IV—Dress: For Women

3 There is not so variable a thing in Nature
as a lady's head-dress.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 98.

4 Miss Flora McFlimsey, of Madison Square,
Has made three separate journeys to Paris,
And, her father assures me, each time she was there,

That she and her friend, Mrs. Harris . . .
Spent six consecutive weeks without stopping

In one continuous round of shopping . . .
For all manner of things that a woman can put

On the crown of her head or the sole of her foot,

Or wrap round her shoulders, or fit round
her waist,

Or that can be sewed on, or pinned on, or laced,

Or tied on with a string, or stitched on with
a bow,

In front or behind, above or below;
For bonnets, mantillas, capes, collars, and shawls;

Dresses for breakfasts and dinners and balls;
Dresses to sit in and stand in and walk
in;

Dresses to dance in and flirt in and talk in;
Dresses in which to do nothing at all;
Dresses for winter, spring, summer, and fall; . . .

And yet, though scarce three months have passed since the day

This merchandise went, on twelve carts, up
Broadway,

This same Miss McFlimsey, of Madison Square,

The last time we met was in utter despair
Because she had nothing whatever to wear!

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Nothing to Wear.
Authorship claimed without foundation by Hattie (?) Peck. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

5 I for one venerate a petticoat.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 26.

A petticoat is no great shakes after all, when it hangs fluttering on a clothes line.

LORENZO DOW, Potent Sermons, iii, 133.

Without a whole tatter to her tail, but as ragged
as one of the Muses.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. I.

6 Th' adorning thee with so much art
Is but a barbarous skill;

'Tis like the poisoning of a dart

Too apt before to kill.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Waiting-Maid.

7 The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxii, 5.

8 Each ornament about her seemly lies,
By curious chance, or careless art composed.

EDWARD FAIRFAX, Godfrey of Bullogne. (From TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered.)

9 If you wear your cambric ruffles as I do, and take care not to mend the holes, they will come in time to be lace; and feathers, my dear girl, may be had in America from every cock's tail.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to his Daughter,
3 June, 1779.

10 They sewed fig-leaves together and made themselves aprons.

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 7.

All the costumes since Adam's, right or wrong,
From Eve's fig-leaf down to the petticoat,
Almost as scanty, of days less remote.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 66.

11 But when those charms are past,—for charms are frail,—

When time advances, and when lovers fail,
She then shines forth, solicitous to bless,
In all the glaring impotence of dress.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 291.

12 A sweet disorder in the dress
Kindles in clothes a wantonness.

ROBERT HERRICK, Delight in Disorder.

A winning wave, (deserving note,)

In the tempestuous petticoat,

A careless shoe-string, in whose tie

I see a wild civility,—

Do more bewitch me than when art

Is too precise in every part.

ROBERT HERRICK, Delight in Disorder.

¹ Whenas in silks my Julia goes,
Then, then, methinks, how sweetly flows
That liquelation of her clothes!

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Julia's Clothes.

And ye sall walk in silk attire,
And siller hae to spare,
Gin ye'll consent to be his bride,
Nor think o' Donald mair
SUSANNA BLAINE, The Siller Crown.

To show the form it seemed to hide.
SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles, Canto i, st. 5.

Silk was invented so that women could go naked in clothes.

MAHOMET.

² 'Tis not the robe or garment I affect;
For who would marry with a suit of clothes?

THOMAS HEYWOOD, *Royal King and Loyal
Subject*, Act ii, sc. 2.

³ For gowns, and gloves, and cups, and tippets,
Are beauty's sauces, spice, and sippets.

THOMAS HOOD, A Recipe.

⁴ Plain in neatness. (Simplex munditiis.)

HORACE, Odes Bk i, ode 5, l. 5

We are charmed by neatness. (Munditiis capimur.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria Bk iii, l. 133.

Still to be neat, still to be drest,
As you were going to a feast;
Still to be powder'd, still perfum'd:
Lady, it is to be presumed,
Though art's hid causes are not found,
All is not sweet, all is not sound.

Give me a look, give me a face,
That makes simplicity a grace;
Robes loosely flowing, hair as free:
Such sweet neglect more taketh me
Than all th' adulteries of art;
They strike mine eyes, but not my heart.

BEN JONSON, Epicæne, or, The Silent Woman.
Act i, sc. 1. An imitation of a Latin poem commencing "Semper munditiis," printed at the end of the variorum edition of Petroniæ. See p. 2298.

⁵ It's not the skirt that breaks papa, it's the chiffon ruffles.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

⁶ Dwellers in huts and in marble halls—
From Shepherdess up to Queen—
Cared little for bonnets, and less for shawls,
And nothing for crinoline.

But now simplicity's not the rage,
And it's funny to think how cold
The dress they wore in the Golden Age
Would seem in the Age of Gold.

H. S. LEIGH, The Two Ages, St. 4.

In tea-cup times of hood and hoop,
Or while the patch was worn.

TENNYSON, The Talking Oak, l. 63.

⁷ A bevy of fair women, richly gay
In gems and wanton dress.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. xi, l. 578.

A lady so richly clad as she—
Beautiful exceedingly.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel, Pt. i, l. 67.

⁸ But who is this, what thing of sea or land?
Female of sex it seems.

That so bedeck'd, ornate, and gay,
Comes this way sailing
Like a stately ship

Of Tarsus, bound for th' isles

Of Javan or Gadier

With all her bravery on, and tackle trim.

Sails fill'd, and streamers waving,

Courted by all the winds that hold them play.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 710.

⁹ Let him be inflamed by the love of your dress. (Uratur vestis amore tuæ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria, Bk iii, l. 448.

We are captivated by dress; all is concealed by gems and gold; a woman is the least part of herself. (Auferimur cultu; gemmis auroque tegetur Omnia; pars minima est ipsa puella sui.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 343.

¹⁰ Who wishes to give himself an abundance of business let him equip these two things, a ship and a woman. These two things are never sufficiently adorned, nor is any excess of adornment enough for them.

(*Negoti sibi qui volet vim parare,
Navem et mulierem, hæc duo comparatu*.)

Neque unquam satis hæc duæ res ornatur,
Neque cis ulla ornandi satis satietas est.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudus, l. 210. (Act i, sc. 2.)

A ship is sooner rigged by far than a gentlewoman made ready.

UNKNOWN, Lingua; or, The Five Senses Act
iv, sc. 5. Often erroneously attributed to Anthony Brewer.

Clothes introduced sewing, a kind of work which you may call endless; a woman's dress, at least, is never done.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden Ch 1.

¹¹ To fifty chosen sylphs, of special note,
We trust th' important charge, the petticoat;

Of late have we known that sev'n-fold fence to fail,

Tho' stiff with hoops, and arm'd with ribs of whale.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock, Canto ii, l. 117.

¹² At sermons, too, I shone in scarlet gay;
The wasting moth ne'er spoil'd my best array:
The cause was this, I wore it every day.

POPE, Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 287.

1 No longer shall the bodice aptly laced
From thy full bosom to thy slender waist,
That air and harmony of shape express,
Fine by degrees, and beautifully less.

2 She hears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, Act i, sc. 3, l. 83.

See where she comes, apparell'd like the spring.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, Act i, sc. 1, l. 12.

3 Set not thy sweet heart on proud array.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act iii, sc. 4, l. 84.

4 So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,
And may not wear them.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 28.

With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs, and cuffs, and farlineales, and
things;

With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,

With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 55.

5 Thy gown? Why, ay, come, tailor, let us see't.
O mercy, God! what masquing stuff is here?
What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon:
What, up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart?

Here's snip and nip and cut and slash and slash,

Like to a censer in a barber's shop:
Why, what i' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 86.

6 Lawn as white as driven snow.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act iv, sc. 4, 220.
Her cap, far whiter than the driven snow,
Emblem right meet of decency does yield.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, The Schoolmistress, St. 6.

7 Never teach false morality. How exquisitely absurd to tell girls that beauty is of no value, dress of no use! Beauty is of value; her whole prospects and happiness in life may often depend upon a new gown or a becoming bonnet, and if she has five grains of common sense she will find this out.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, Vol.
i, ch. 11, p. 297.)

8 She wears her clothes as if they were thrown on her with a pitchfork.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. i.
Will she pass in a crowd? Will she make a figure in a country church?

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 9 Feb., 1710.

Looked as if she had walked straight out of the Ark.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, i, 7.)

9 So for thy spirit did devise
Its Maker seemly garniture,
Of its own essence parcel pure, . . .
Which woven vesture should subserve.
For outward robes in their ostents
Should show the soul's habiliments.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Gilded Gold.

10 By God, those are bastard-concealers!

BRIAND DE VALLEU, referring to hoopskirts.
(LAMANDIÉ, Montaigne, p. 22.)

11 All such dresses are forbidden, which incite irregular desires.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 6.

12 Bloomers.

Named from Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer, an American dress reformer, who first wore them in 1851. The garment consisted of a skirt reaching to the knees, over trousers cut full and gathered at the ankle.

Rainy-day skirt.

A skirt ending at the ankle for street wear in bad weather. Hence "rainy-daisies" (1900)

V—Dress: Beauty Unadorned

13 Who seems most hideous when adorned the most. (Che quanti' era più ornata, era più brutta.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso, Canto xx, st. 116.

14 A gaudy dress and gentle air,
May slightly touch the heart,
But it's innocence and modesty
That polishes the dart.

BURNS, My Handsome Nell

She just wore

Enough for modesty—no more.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, White Rose and Red.

15 Lack of adornment is said to become some women (Mulieres esse dicuntur nonnullæ inornatæ.)

CICERO, De Oratore, Ch. xxiii, sec. 78.

Ornate for the very reason that ornaments had been neglected. (Ornata hoc ipso, quod ornamenta neglexerunt.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum, Bk. ii, epis.
1, sec. 1.

16 Beauty when most unclothed is clothed best.
PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides, Act ii, sc. 4.

In naked beauty more adorn'd,
More lovely than Pandora.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. iv, l. 713.

17 If she is beautiful, she is overdressed. (Si pulchra est, nimis ornata est.)

PLAUTUS, Mossellaria, Act i, sc. 3, l. 134.

2 Attired to please herself: no gems of any kind
She wore, nor aught of borrowed gloss in Nature's stead.
(Sine auro; tum ornatum ita uti quæ ornatur sibi, Nolla mala re interpollatam mulierbri)
TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, I 288.

3 O fair undress, best dress! it checks no vein,
But every flowing limb in pleasure drowns,
And heightens ease with grace
THOMSON, Castle of Indolence, Canto i, st. 26

4 Her polished limbs,
Veiled in a simple robe, their best attire,
Beyond the pomp of dress; for Loveliness
Needs not the foreign aid of ornament,
But is, when unadorned, adorned the most.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, I 202.

5 She's adorned
Amplly, that in her husband's eye looks lovely,—
The truest mirror that an honest wife
Can see her beauty in!
JOHN TOBIN, The Honeymoon, Act iii, sc. 4.

VI—Dress: For Men

His two-year coat so smooth and bare,
Through every thread it lets in air.
SWIFT, Progress of Poetry.

Be faithful to me, O poor coat that I love! Together we are growing old. For ten years I myself have brushed thee—Socrates would have done no better. Should fate make fresh assaults upon your thin cloth, imitate me, resist like a philosopher: old friend of mine, let us never part.
(Sois-moi fidèle, O pauvre habit que j'aime!
Ensemble nous devenons vieux.
Depuis dix ans je te brosse moi-même,
Et Socrate n'eût pas fait mieux.
Quand le sort à mince étoffe
Livraît de nouveaux combats,
Imite-moi, résiste en philosophe;
Mon vieux ami, ne nous séparons pas.)
PIERRE JEAN DE BÉRANGER, Mon Habit.

"Ah, now, Laigle of the funeral oration, your coat is old." "I should hope so," retorted Laigle.

"That's why we agree so well, my coat and I. It has got all my wrinkles, it doesn't bind me anywhere, it has fitted itself to all my deformities, it is complaisant to all my movements, I am only conscious of it because it keeps me warm. Old coats are just like old friends."

VICTOR HUGO, Les Misérables: Saint Denis.
Bk. xii, sec. 11.

9 Take great care always to be dressed like the reasonable people of your own age, in the place where you are; whose dress is never spoken of one way or another, as either too negligent or too much studied.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746.

Any affectation whatsoever in dress implies, in my mind, a flaw in the understanding.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Dec., 1748.

A man of sense carefully avoids any particular character in his dress.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Dec., 1748.

10 A wig that flowed behind.

A hat not much the worse for wear,

Each comely in its kind

COWPER, John Gilpin, St. 46.

11 They [the English] think him the best dressed man, whose dress is so fit for his use that you cannot notice or remember to describe it.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 89.

I hold that gentleman to be the best dressed whose dress no one observes.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Thackeray, Ch. 9.

12 That garment best the winter's rage defends,
Whose shapeless form in ample plaits depends;

By various names in various counties known,
Yet held in all the true Surtout alone;

Be thine of kersey firm, though small the cost,
Then brave unwet the rain, unhill'd the frost.

JOHN GAY, Trivia, Bk. i, l. 55.

Be thou, for every season, justly drest,
Nor brave the piercing frost with open breast;
And when the bursting clouds a deluge pour,
Let thy surtout defend the drenching shower.

JOHN GAY, Trivia, Bk. i, l. 128.

13 I'd a swallow-tail coat of a beautiful blue,
A hrief which I bought of a booby,

A couple of shirts, and a collar or two,

And a ring that looked like a ruby.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

14 Wear seemly gloves; not black, nor yet too light,
And least of all the pair that once was white; . . .

Shave like a goat, if so your fancy bids,
But be a parent,—don't neglect your kids.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 444.

15 A vest as admired Vortiger had on,

Which from this Island's foe his grandsire won,

Whose artful colours pass'd the Tyrian dye,
Obliged to triumph in this legacy.

EDWARD HOWARD, The British Princes, p. 96. (1669)

A painted vest Prince Vortiger had on,
Which from a naked Pict his grandsire won.

This burlesque of Howard's lines is said to have been attributed to Sir Richard Blackmore by his enemies, as from his epic, The Creation, suppressed by him because of the outcry it occasioned. Boswell and Johnson discussed it (29 Oct., 1769), Boswell defending "Blackmore's supposed lines," as "a poetical conceit. A Pict being painted, if he is slain in battle, and a vest made of his skin, it is a painted vest won from him, though he was naked." They were quoted by Maria Edgeworth as an example of an Irish bull by an English writer. For discussion of authorship see The European Magazine, April, 1792.

They were attempting to put on Raiment from naked bodies worn

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen. Referring to the parody attributed to Blackmore

If the Kings of Mexico changed four times a day, it was but an upper vest which they used to honour some meritorious servant with.

JOHN EVERLYN, Tyrannus.

Let thy attire be comely but not costly.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 39 (1579)

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not expressed in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act i, sc. 3, l. 70.

Neat, not gaudy.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Wordsworth, 11 June, 1806. A meaningless misquotation of a good phrase

The admiration of the "neat but not gaudy," which is commonly reported to have influenced the devil when he painted his tail pea-green.

JOHN RUSKIN, Architectural Magazine, Nov., 1838.

A negligent dress is becoming to men.
(Forma viros neglecta decet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria Bk. i, l. 509.

An old suit, a battered hat, a perfect tie, and a good collar—that's what makes a well-dressed man

BARON DE MEYER, International style expert, Newspaper Interview, 1930

The essential thing for a necktie is style. A well-tied tie is the first serious step in life.

WILDS, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

Let your person please by cleanliness and be made swarthy by the campus; let your toga fit and be spotless; do not let your shoe-strap be wrinkled; let your teeth be free of rust, and your foot not float about in a shoe too large for you; nor let your stub-born locks be spoiled by bad cutting; let hair and beard be dressed by a skilled hand. Do not let your nails project, and keep them free of dirt, nor let any hair be in the hollow of your nostrils. Let not your breath be sour, nor permit the lord and master of the head to offend the nose.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 513.

My galligaskins, that have long withstood
The winter's fury, and encroaching frosts,
By time subdued (what will not time subdue?)

An horrid chasm disclosed

JOHN PHILLIPS, The Splendid Shilling, l. 121

Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 127.

King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them sixpence all too dear,

With that he call'd the tailor down.

He was a wight of high renown.

And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis pride that pulls the country down;

Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act ii, sc. 3, l. 92. This is a variation of an old ballad, Take Thy Auld Cloak About Thee, given in Percy, Reliques. "Lown" is probably a misprint for "clown," as given in the Percy manuscript.

He will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors, and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 216.

Where did you get that hat?

Where did you get that tie?

Isn't it a nobby one,

And just the proper style?

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33.

Under a bad cloak there is often a good drinker.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33.

It seems to me that that rule which holds in the feasts of the Greeks, is to be observed, too, in life: "Either let him drink," they say, "or depart." And with justice. For either let a man enjoy with others the pleasure of drinking; or let him first depart. (Aut bibat, aut abeat.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. 5, ch. 41, sec. 118. The Greek proverb to which Cicero refers is: "H wibē ē kribē."

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 175.

Some men are like musical glasses,—to produce their finest tones you must keep them wet.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

He seldom went up to town without coming down "three sheets in the wind."

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 20.

Did you ever hear of Captain Wattle?

He was all for love and a little for the bottle.

CHARLES DIDDIN, Captain Wattle and Miss Rol.

Said Aristotle unto Plato,

"Have another sweet potato?"

Said Plato unto Aristotle,

"Thank you, I prefer the bottle."

OWEN WISTER, Philosophy 4. Quoted.

And I wish his soul in heaven may dwell,

Who first invented this leathern bottle!

UNKNOWN, The Leathern Bottle.

That which belongs to another.

DIOGENES, when asked which wines he liked best to drink. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Dio-genes. Sec. 6.)

The rapturous, wild, and ineffable pleasure
Of drinking at somebody else's expense.

HENRY SAMBROOKE LEIGH, Stanzas to an Intoxicated Fly.

Among the Indians of the extreme north . . . there is a liquor made which . . . is called hoochinoo. The ingredients . . . are simple and innocent, being only yeast, flour, and either sugar or molasses.

EDWARD R. EMERSON, Beverages, Past and Present. (Hence, hooch.)

Here, tapster, broach number 1706, as the saying is.

Sir, you shall taste my Anno Domini.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

He is drinking at the Harrow when he should be at the plough.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2456.

You can have some home-brew, if you want to, you know.

THOMAS HARDY, Mayor of Casterbridge. Bk. i, p. 119.

Some say three fingers, some say two;
I'll leave the choice to you.

JOHN HAY, The Mystery of Gheed. St. 5. (1871)

Said to have been coined by Hay in Jack's Bar, in Paris.

I pray thee let me and my fellow have
A hair of the dog that bit us last night.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, l. 11. Inebriates were always advised to drink in the morning some of the same liquor they had drunk to excess the night before.

'Twas a hot night with some of us last night,
John: shall we pluck a hair of the same wolf to-day, proctor John?

BEN JONSON, Beritholomew Fair. Act I.

If they, in the morning, did fall to drinking again, taking a hair of the old dog.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, English Rogue, iii, 91.

A hair of the same dog next morning
Is best to quench our feverish burning.

EDWARD WARD, Brit. Wonders, 17.

He poured out a large bumper of brandy, exhorting me to swallow "a hair of the dog that bit me."

SCOTT, Rob Roy, Ch. 12.

If any so wise is, that sack he despises,
Let him drink his small beer and be sober;
And while we drink and sing, as if it were spring,
He shall droop like the trees in October.
But be sure overnight, if this dog do you bite,
You may take it henceforth for a warning;
Soon as out of your bed, to settle your head,
Take a hair of his tail in the morning.

UNKNOWN, Song, (1650)

The flowing bowl--whom has it not made eloquent? Whom has it not made free, even amid pinching poverty? (Fecundi calices quem non fecere disertum? Contracta quem non in paupertate solutum?)

HORACE, Epistles, Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 19.

Come landlord fill a flowing bowl until it does run over,

Tonight we will all merry be--tomorrow we'll get sober.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother, Act ii, 2.

Be in their flowing cups freshly remembered.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 55.

It is rarely seldom that I seek consolation in the Flowin Bole.

ARTEMUS WARD, On "Forts."

There are some sluggish men who are improved by drinking, as there are fruits that are not good till they are rotten.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 42.)

And man that boozed of that,

Fourpence a gallon.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: Vision of the Seven Sins: Avarice, (1370)

Booze and the blowens cop the lot. (Tout aux tavernes et aux fiells.)

W. E. HINLEY, Willow's Straight Tip to All Crass Coves.

If a man has a bit of conscience, it always takes him when he's sober; and then it makes him low-spirited. A drop of booze just takes that off and makes him happy.

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion, Act iii.

Over their cups. (Inter pocula.)

PERSRUS, Satires, Sat. i, l. 30.

There St. John mingles with my friendly bowl

The feast of reason and the flow of soul.

I can drink like a fish.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Works, Vol. vi, p. 321. (1646)

Where I may drink like a fish, and swear like a devil.

FARQUHAR, Sir Harry Wildair, Act ii. (1701)

I shall have nothing to do but go to Bath and drink like a fish.

HANNAM MORE, (Garrick Correspondence, Vol. ii, p. 320. 1778.)

We can drink till all look blue.

JOHN FORD, Lady's Trial, Act iv, sc. 2.

To drink like a funnel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1670)

Fifteen men on the Dead Man's Chest—

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum!

Drink and the devil had done for the rest—

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum!

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Formerly believed to be the refrain of an old chanty, but stated by Lloyd Osbourne to be incontestably by R.L.S. Used by Young E. Allison as refrain for his poem Derelect. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.) The Dead Man's Chest is one of the Virgin Islands.

Fifteen men on the Dead Man's Chest—

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum!

Young E. Allison done all the rest!

Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Letter, to Allison.

^{5a} Shun not the mead, but drink in measure;
Speak to the point or be still.

UNKNOWN, The Elder Edda: Hovamöl, Sec. 19. (HENRY ADAMS BELLOW, tr., Poetic Edda.)

⁶ It's a long time between drinks.

The expression, "It is too long between drinks," "It's a long time between drinks," is undoubtedly an invention. There is no record of its having occurred in any conference between governors of the Carolinas. My guess is that when a convivial party was having a good time one night and matters became a little slow, some booster of the party asked the question, "What did the governor of North Carolina say to the Governor of South Carolina?" And when they all gave it up, he furnished the answer, "It is too long between drinks."—A. S. Salley, Secretary Historical Commission of South Carolina, in a letter to the compiler, 28 May, 1932. The expression antedates the Civil War, and many stories have been invented to explain it, but none of them has any historical foundation. John Motley Morehead states that there is a legend in his family that his grandfather was the governor of North Carolina who made the historic remark. Another legend credits it to Zebulon B. Vance, governor of North Carolina at the time Wade Hampton was governor of South Carolina.

II—Drinking: Its Pleasures

⁷ Fill up the goblet and reach to me some!

Drinking makes wise, but dry fasting makes gium.

W. R. ALGER, Oriental Poetry: Wine Song of Kailmas.

⁸ The thirsty Earth soaks up the Rain,
And drinks, and gapes for Drink again;
The Plants suck in the Earth, and are
With constant drinking fresh and fair. . . .

Nothing in Nature's sober found,
But an eternal Health goes round.
Fill up the Bowl then, fill it high,
Fill all the Glasses there; for why Should every Creature drink but I?
Why, Men of Morals, tell me why?

ANACREON, Odes. No. 21. (Cowley, tr.)

⁹ Weak withering age no rigid law forbids,
With frugal nectar, smooth and slow with balm,

The sapless habit daily to bedew,
And give the hesitating wheels of life
Gliblier to play.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health. Pt. ii, l. 484. (1744)

¹⁰ We also had drink of three kinds, all wholesome and good; wine of the grape; a drink of grain, such as is with us our ale but more clear; and a kind of cider made of a fruit of that country, a wonderful pleasing and refreshing drink.

FRANCIS BACON, New Atlantis. Sec. 3.

¹¹ We'll tak' a right gude-willie waught
For Auld Lang Syne.

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne. Frequently misquoted "gude willie-waught." "Gude-willie waught" means good-will draught. The other is nonsense.

Just a wee deoch-an-doris, just a wee yin, that's a'.

Just a wee deoch-an-doris before we gang a-wa',
There's a wee wifie waitin', in a wee but-an-ben;
If you can say "It's a braw bright moon-light night,"

Y're a 'richt ye ken.

HARRY LAUDER, Just a Wee Deoch-an-Doris.

¹² Food fills the wame, an' keep us livin'; . . .
But, oiled by thee,

The wheels o' life gae down-hill screevin',
Wi' rattlin' glee.

ROBERT BURNS, Scotch Drink. St. 5.

Leeze me on drink! It gies us mair
Than either school or college:

It kindles wit, it waukens lair,
It pangs us fou o' knowledge.

ROBERT BURNS, The Holy Fair. St. 19.

¹³ Fill the goblet again! for I never before Felt the glow which now gladdens my heart to its core;

Let us drink!—who would not?—since,
through life's varied round,

In goblet alone no deception is found.
BYRON, Fill the Goblet Again.

¹
To drink is a Christian diversion,
Unknown to the Turk or the Persian.
CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 2.

²
Then trust me there's nothing like drinking
So pleasant on this side the grave;
It keeps the unhappy from thinking,
And makes e'en the valiant more brave.
CHARLES DIBDIN, Nothing Like Grog.

³
"Mrs. Harris," I says, "leave the bottle on the chimley-piece, and don't ask me to take none, but let me put my lips to it when I am so disposed."

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 19.

⁴
The peculiar charm of alcohol lies in the sense of careless well-being and bodily and mental comfort which it creates. It unbur-dens the individual of his cares and his fears. . . . Under such conditions it is easy to laugh or to weep, to love or to hate, not wisely but too well.

DR. HAVEN EMERSON, Alcohol and Man.

⁵
The jolly god in triumph comes;
Sound the trumpets; beat the drums:
Flush'd with a purple grace
He shows his honest face:
Now give the hautboys breath; he comes,
he comes!

Bacchus ever fair and young,
Drinking joys did first ordain;
Bacchus' blessings are a treasure,
Drinking is the soldier's pleasure:
Rich the treasure, Sweet the pleasure,
Sweet is pleasure after pain.
DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 49.

⁶
The man that isn't jolly after drinking
Is just a drivelling idiot, to my thinking.
EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 169. Quoted by Rabelais, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 65.

⁷
Drink to-day, and drown all sorrow;
You shall perhaps not do it to-morrow:
Best, while you have it, use your breath;
There is no drinking after death.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother. Act ii,
sc. 2.

⁸
Let's warm our brains with half-a-dozen healths,
And then, hang cold discourse; for we'll speak fireworks.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Elder Brother. Act I, sc. 2.

⁹
Let schoolmasters puzzle their brain,
With grammar, and nonsense, and learning;
Good liquor, I stoutly maintain,

Gives genus a better discerning.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act I, sc. 2.

¹⁰
There are bonds of all sorts in this world
of ours,
Fetters of friendship and ties of flowers, . . .
But there's never a bond, old friend, like this,
We have drunk from the same canteen.

Beyond the bliss of dreams.

MILTON, Comus, l. 811.

6
Friend of my soul, this goblet sip,
'Twill chase that pensive tear;
'Tis not so sweet as woman's lip,
But, oh! 'tis more sincere.

Like her delusive beam,
'Twill steal away thy mind;
But, truer than love's dream,
It leaves no sting behind

THOMAS MOORE, Anacreontic

If with water you fill up your glasses,
You'll never write anything wise;
For wine is the horse of Parnassus,
Which hurries a bard to the skies.

There are two reasons for drinking: one is,
when you are thirsty, to cure it; the other,
when you are not thirsty, to prevent it. . . .
Prevention is better than cure.

T. L. PEACOCK, Malmcourt. Ch. 16.

If all be true that I do think,
There are five reasons we should drink;
Good wine—a friend—or being dry—

Or lest we should be by and by—

Or any other reason why.

(Si bene commemini, cause sunt quinque bi-bendi,

Hospit's adventus, prevens siccis, atque futura,

Aut vini bonitas, aut quolibet altera causa.)

A Latin epigram attributed to PÈRE SIM-MOND, 16th century (Ménages, Menagiana,
i, 172.) Trans. by Henry Aldrich. (PLAY-FORD, Banquet of Music, 1680.)

There are, unless my memory fail,

Five causes why we should not sail:

The fog is thick, the wind is high;

It rains, or may do by-and-by;

Or—any other reason why

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

There is no money, among that which I have spent since I began to earn my living, of the expenditure of which I am less ashamed, or which gave me better value in return, than the price of the liquids chronicled in this booklet.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Notes on a Cellar-Book,
p. 14.

There is absolutely no scientific proof of a trustworthy kind, that moderate consumption of sound alcoholic liquor does a healthy body any harm at all; while on the other hand there is the unbroken testimony of all history that alcoholic liquors have been used by the strongest, wisest, handsomest, and in every way best races of all times.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Notes on a Cellar-Book,
p. 17.

I cannot eat but little meat,
My stomach is not good,
But sure I think that I can drink
With him that wears a hood
JOHN STURT, Gammer Gurton's Needle Act ii, l. 1. Said to be from a song older than the play. It is also uncertain whether Bishop Sturt wrote the play, which has been attributed to Nicholas Udall and to John Bridges, Dean of Salisbury. The authorship of the song has been claimed for William Stevenson, of Durham

I'll look in thy purse by and by,
And if thou have any money in it,
We'll drink the devil dry.
ROBERT WILSON, Cobbler's Prophecy, l. 106

He that drinks well, sleeps well.
THOMAS WILSON, Rule of Reason. (1551)

He that eateth well, drinketh well; he that drinketh well, sleepeth well, he that sleepeth well, sinneth not, he that sinneth not goeth straight through Purgatory to Paradise.

WILLIAM LITTON, Rare Adventures (1609)
He that drinks well, does sleep well;
He that sleeps well, doth think well;

He that thinks well, doth do well;
He that does well, must drink well.
UNKNOWN, Loyal Garland. Song 65. (1686)

UNKNOWN. Introduced into the third act of Vanbrugh's The Provoked Wife, apparently by Fowler, the printer of the play, and called a Scotch medley.

III—Drinking: Its Penalties

10
Beware the deadly fumes of that insane elation
Which rises from the cup of mad impiety,
And go, get drunk with that divine intoxication

Which is more sober far than all sobriety.
W. R. ALGER, Oriental Poetry: The Sober Drunkenness

12
There's Death in the cup—so beware!
Nay, more—there is danger in touching;
But who can avoid the fell snare?
The man and his wine's so bewitching!
BURNS, On a Casket.

For though within this bright seductive place
My dollars go not far,
I never more shall see them face to face,
When they have crossed the bar!
BLISS CARMAN, Crossing the Bar.

14
Ha! see where the wild-blazing Grog-Shop

15
Ten thousand casks,
Forever dribbling out their base contents,
Touch'd by the Midas finger of the state,

Bleed gold for ministers to sport away.
Drink, and be mad then; 'tis your country
bids!

COWPER, The Task, Bk. iv, l. 304.

1 Drink not the third glass, which thou canst not tame,
When once it is within thee; but before Mayst rule it, as thou list; and pour the shame,

Which it would pour on thee, upon the floor.

It is most just to throw that on the ground,
Which would throw me there, if I keep the round.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch, St. 5.

2 But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink.

What the soul loveth is not all food for the body.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: The Vision of Holy Church, l. 29.

5 Touch the goblet no more!
It will make thy heart sore
To its very core!
Its perfume is the breath
Of the Angel of Death,
And the light that within it lies
Is the flash of his evil eyes.
Beware! Oh, beware!
For sickness, sorrow, and care
All are there!

6 Long quaffing maketh a short life.

JOHN LELY, Euphuus.

7 Soon as the potion works, their human countenance,

Th' express resemblance of the gods, is chang'd

Into some brutish form of wolf or bear,
Or ounce or tiger, hog, or bearded goat,
All other parts remaining as they were;
And they, so perfect is their misery,
Not once perceive their foul disfigurement.

MILTON, Comus, l. 68.

O madness, to think me of strongest wines
And strongest drinks our chief support of health,

When God with these forbidden made choice to rear

His mighty Champion, strong above compare,
Whose drink was only from the liquid brook.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 553.

8 Indeed the Idols I have loved so long
Have done my credit in the World much wrong;

Have drown'd my Glory in a shallow Cup,
And sold my Reputation for a Song.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyat, St. 93. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

9 It has passed into a proverb that wisdom is clouded by wine. (In proverbium cessit, sapientiam vino obumbrari.)

10 They never taste who always drink.

MATTHEW PRIOR, On a Passage in the Scaligerana.

11 In vain I trusted that the flowing bowl
Would banish sorrow, and enlarge the soul.
To the late revel, and protracted feast,
Wild dreams succeeded, and disorder'd rest.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon, Bk. ii, l. 106.

And in the flowers that wreath the sparkling bowl

Fell adders hiss and poisonous serpents roll.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon, Bk. ii, l. 140.

Thou sparkling bowl! thou sparkling bowl!

Though lips of bards thy brim may press . . .
I will not touch thee; for there clings
A scorpion to thy side, that stings!

JOHN PIERPONT, The Sparkling Bowl.

14 I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking; I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act ii, sc. 3, l. 35.

15 O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, piteance, revel and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act ii, sc. 3, l. 291.

16 Much drinking, little thinking.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 26 Feb., 1711.

¹ The vials of summer never made a man sick, but those which he stored in his cellar. Drink the wines, not of your bottling, but Nature's bottling; not kept in goat-skins or pig-skins, but the skins of a myriad fair berries.

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. lxxiii, 18.

10 Drunkenness does not create vice; it merely brings it into view. (Non facit ebrietas vitia, sed protrahit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epis. lxxiii, 20.

There is more of truth than of truth in a saying of Seneca, 'That drunkenness does not produce but discover faults.' Common experience teaches the contrary. Wine throws a man out of himself, and infuses qualities into the mind which she is a stranger to in her sober moments.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 569.

11 His two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince,
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 63.

Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne
And fall of many kings.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 66.

Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 280.

To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 309.

12 Olivia: What's a drunken man like, fool?
Clown: Like a drowned man, a fool and a mad man: one draught above heat makes him a fool; the second mads him; and a third drowns him.

Olivia: Go thou and seek the crowner, and let him sit o' my coz; for he's in the third degree of drink, he's drowned.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 136.

13 No fool is silent over his cups.

SOLOM, when asked whether he was silent over his cups for want of words, or because he was a fool. (EPICETUS, Fragments, lxxvi.)

14 Drunkenness is an immoderate affection and use of drink. That I call immoderation that is besides or beyond that order of good things for which God hath given us the use of drink.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living: Of Drunkenness. Pt. ii, ch. 2.

IV—Drunkenness: The Morning After

15 A dark brown taste, a burning thirst,
A head that's ready to split and burst.

GEORGE ADE, Remorse, from The Sultan of Sulu.

The water-wagon is the place for me!
Last night my feelings were immense;
Today I feel like thirty cents!

No time for mirth, no time for laughter—
The cold gray dawn of the morning after.

GEORGE ADE, Remorse, from The Sultan of Sulu.

16 Who drinks one bowl hath scant delight; to poorest passion he was born;

Who drains the score must e'er expect to rue the headache of the morn.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kashah. Pt. viii, st. 11.

17 Man, being reasonable, must get drunk;
The best of life is but intoxication:
Glory, the grape, love, gold, in these are sunk
The hopes of all men and of every nation;

him damned ere I'd have challenged him.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 311.

¹ When you meet your antagonist, do everything in a mild and agreeable manner. Let your courage be as keen, but at the same time as polished, as your sword.

DUTY

² Thanks to the gods! my boy has done his duty.
JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

I've done my duty, and I've done no more.
FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 3.

It is my duty, and I will.
W. S. GILBERT, Captain Reece.

Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty.

SIR HENRY LAWRENCE, Epitaph. Lawrence,
one of the heroes of the defence of Lucknow, desired this sentence engraved on his tomb.

I am quite happy, thank God, and, like Lawrence,
I have tried to do my duty.

GENERAL CHARLES GEORGE GORDON, Postscript, to his last letter from Khartoum, 29 Dec., 1884.

Thank God, I have done my duty.

GÖTTER, Sprüche in Prosa, III, 151.

No one will consider the day as ended, until the duties it brings have been discharged.

GENERAL JOSEPH HOOKER, Order, assuming com-

- mand of the Dept. of the Northwest, 1865.
- 1 He were n't no saint,—but at judgment
I'd run my chance with Jim,
'Longside of some pious gentlemen
That wouldn't shook hands with him.
He seen his duty, a dead-sure thing,—
And went for it thar and then;
And Christ ain't a-going to be too hard
On a man that died for men.

VERGIL, Æneid, Bk. vi, l. 885.

8 A sense of duty pursues us ever. It is omnipresent, like the Deity. If we take to ourselves the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, duty performed or duty violated is still with us, for our happiness or our misery. If we say the darkness shall cover us, in the darkness as in the light our obligations are yet with us.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument on the Murder of Captain White.

Simple duty hath no place for fear.

WHITTIER, Abraham Davenport, Last line.

9 Duty is what one expects from others.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance,

11 A light of duty shines on every day
For all; and yet how few are warmed or cheered!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion, Bk. v, l. 383.

The primal duties shine aloft like stars.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion, Bk. ix, l. 236.

12 Stern Daughter of the Voice of God!
O Duty! if that name thou love:
Who art a light to guide, a rod
To check the erring, and reprove;
Thou, who art victory and law
When empty terrors overawe;
From vain temptations dost set free;
And calm'st the weary strife of frail humanity!

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, St. 1.

Left that command Sole daughter of his voice.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. ix, l. 652.

13 There are who ask not if thine eye
Be on them; who, in love and truth,
Where no misgiving is, rely
Upon the genial sense of youth:
Glad Hearts! without reproach or blot;
Who do thy work, and know it not:
Oh! if through confidence misplaced
They fail, thy saving arms, dread Power!
around them cast.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, St. 2.

Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be,
When love is an unerring light,
And joy its own security.
And they a blissful course may hold
Even now, who, not unwisely bold,
Live in the spirit of this creed;
Yet seek thy firm support, according to their need.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, St. 3.

Stern Lawgiver! yet thou dost wear
The Godhead's most benignant grace;
Nor know we anything so fair
As is the smile upon thy face:
Flowers laugh before thee on their beds
And fragrance in thy footing treads;
Thou dost preserve the stars from wrong;
And the most ancient heavens, through Thee, are fresh and strong.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, St. 6.

The confidence of reason give;
And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me live!

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, St. 7.

¹ And 'tis an added grief that with my own feathers I am slain. (Kai rot'ro moi trépa línn, ro' rois línnis p'rois épanothénen.)

Æsop, Fables; The Eagle and the Arrow. The idea of the eagle slain by a feather from his own wing is repeated many times in classical literature.

So, in the Libyao fable it is told
That once an eagle, stricken with a dart,
Said, when he saw the fashion of the shaft,
"With our own feathers, not by others' hand
Are we now smitten."

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments, Frag. 63.

² So the struck eagle, stretch'd upon the plain,
No more through rolling clouds to soar again,
View'd his own feather on the fatal dart,
And wing'd the shaft that quiver'd in his heart:

Keen were his pangs, but keener far to feel
He nursed the pinion which impell'd the steel,
While the same plumage that had warm'd his nest

Drank the last life-drop of his bleeding breast.
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
1. 841.

Like a young eagle, who has lent his plume
To fledge the shaft by which he meets his doom,
See their own feathers pluck'd, to wing the dart
Which rank corruption destined for their heart!

THOMAS MOORE, Corruption, 1. 95.

That eagle's fate and mine are one,
Which, on the shaft that made him die,
Espied a feather of his own,
Wherewith he wont to soar so high.

EDMUND WALLER, To a Lady Singing a Song of His Composing.

³ The eagle never lost so much time as when he submitted to learn of the crow.

COLLEY CIBBER, Birthday Ode.

Fool that I was! upoo my eagle's wings
I bore this wren, till I was tired with soaring,
And now he mounts above me.

DRYDEN, All for Love, Act ii, sc. 1.

Thus the fable tells us, that the wren mounted as high as the eagle, by getting upoo his back.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler, No. 224.

⁶ As if an eagle flew aloft, and then—

Stoop'd from his highest pitch to pounce a

11 So simple is the earth we tread,
So quick with love and life her frame:
Ten thousand years have dawned and fled,
And still her magic is the same.

STOFFORD A. BROOKE, The Earth and Man.

12 Earth's crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God;
And only he who sees takes off his shoes;
The rest sit round it and pluck blackberries.

EARTHQUAKE

⁴ I remember when our whole island was shaken with an earthquake some years ago, there was an impudent mountebank who sold pills, which, as he told the country people, were very good against an earthquake.

ADDISON, The Teller. No. 240.

⁵ The earthquake that had the honour to be noticed by the Royal Society.

MAKIA EDGEWORTH, Essay on Irish Bulls. Ch.

2. Quoted as "the exquisitely polite expression" of a correspondent of the English
Royal Society.

⁶ Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth
In strange eruptions; oft the teeming earth
Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd
By the imprisoning of unruly wind Within her womb; which, for enlargement striving,
Shakes the old beldam earth and topples down
Steeple and moss-grown towers.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 27.

¹² The farther I journey towards the West, the more convinced I am that the wise men came from the East.

WILLIAM DAVY, KING'S SERJEANT, 1762.
(WOOLRYCH, Lives of Eminent Serjeants at Law. Vol. ii, p. 621.)

When I hear of high Devonian pretensions, I confess I am reminded of the celebrated saying of Serjeant Davy, that "the oftener he went into the West, he better understood how the Wise Men came from the East."

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chief Justices of England. Vol. i, p. 155.

I think it was Jekyll who used to say that the farther he went west, the more convinced he felt that the wise men came from the East.

SYDNEY SMITH (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol.
i.) The reference is to Joseph Jekyll, wit and politician, but the epigram undoubtedly belongs to Serjeant Davy.

¹³ Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet,

Till Earth and Sky stand presently at God's great Judgment Seat;

But there is neither East nor West, Border,
nor Breed, nor Birth,

When two strong men stand face to face, though they come from the ends of the earth!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ballad of East and West.

¹⁴ An' I'm leearnin' 'ere in London what the ten-

EASTER

4 The golden gates are lifted up,
The doors are opened wide;
The King of Glory is gone in Unto His Father's side.
CECIL FRANCES ALEXANDER, Lift Up Our Hearts.

5 The Son of David bowed to die,
For man's transgression stricken;
The Father's arm of power was nigh,
The Son of God to quicken.
Praise Him that He died for men:
Praise Him that He rose again.
JOSEPH ANSTICE, Victor Funeris.

6 Awake, thou wintry earth—
Fling off thy sadness!
Fair vernal flowers, laugh forth
Your ancient gladness!
Christ is risen.

THOMAS BLACKBURN, An Easter Hymn.

7 Tomb, thou shalt not hold Him longer;
Death is strong, but Life is stronger;
Stronger than the dark, the light;
Stronger than the wrong, the right;
Faith and Hope triumphant say
Christ will rise on Easter Day.
PHILLIPS BROOKS, An Easter Carol.

That Thy peace, which evermore passeth human knowing.

JOHN OF DAMASCUS, Come, Ye Faithful
(Neale, tr.)

The day of resurrection! Earth tell it out abroad;
The Passover of gladness, the Passover of God.
From death to life eternal, from this world to
the sky,

Our Christ hath brought us over, with hymns of victory.

JOHN OF DAMASCUS, The Day of Resurrection.
(Neale, tr.)

14 Thou art the Sun of other days,

Drink, sport, for life is mortal, short upon earth our days;

But death is deathless, once a man is dead.
AMPHIS, Gynæcecratia: Fragment.

Eat, drink, and love; the rest's not worth a fillip.

BYRON, Sardanapalus, Act i, sc. 1.

"Eat, drink, and love, what can the rest avail us?"

So said the royal sage, Sardanapalus.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto ii, st. 207.

"Eat, drink, and sport; the rest of life's not worth a fillip," quoth the King;

Methinks the saying saith too much: the swine would say the selfsame thing.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah, Pt. ii, st. 15.

Eat, drink, and play, and think that this is eat, and to drink, and to be merry: for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, viii, 15.

Take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

New Testament: Luke, xii, 19.

Yet some must swim when others sink;
And some must sink when others swim;

Make merry, comrades, eat and drink—

The lights are growing dim.

A. L. GORDON, Sunlight on the Sea.

Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we shall die

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxii, 13.

Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, xv, 32

Eat thou and drink; to-morrow thou shalt die.

D. G. ROSSINI, The House of Life: The Choice.

Drink and dance and laugh and lie,

Love, the reeling midnight through,

For tomorrow we shall die!

(But, alas, we never do.)

DOROTHY PARKER, The Flow in Paganism.

It is good to be merry at meat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18.

IV—Eating: Its Pleasures

Irks care the crop full bird? Frets doubt the maw-crammed beast?

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra, St. 4.

No prince fares like him; he breaks his fast with Aristotle, dines with Tully, drinks tea at Helicon, sups with Seneca.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love Makes the Man, Act i, l. 1.

He breaks his fast

With Aristotle, dines with Tully, takes

His watering with the Muses, sups with Livy.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Elder Brother, Act i, l. 2.

Taking food and drink is a great enjoyment for healthy people, and those who do not enjoy eating seldom have much capacity for enjoyment or usefulness of any sort.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, The Happy Life.

1 Plain fare gives as much pleasure as a costly diet, while bread and water confer the highest possible pleasure when they are brought to hungry lips.

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 130.)

We have water and porridge; let us rival Jove himself in happiness. (Habemus aquam, habemus polentam, Jovi ipsi controversiam de felicitate facimus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. cx, 18.

2 Not in the costly savour lies the greatest pleasure [in eating], but in yourself. So earn your sauce with sweat. (Non in caro nidore voluptas Summa, sed in te ipso est. Tu pulmentaria quære Sudando.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 19.

3 The whole of nature, as has been said, is a conjugation of the verb to eat, in the active and passive.

WILLIAM RALPH INGE, Outspoken Essays: Ser. II, Confessio Fidei.

4 They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet Quaff immortality and joy.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 637. (Ed. 1674)

5 Timid roach, why be so shy?
We are brothers, thou and I.
In the midnight, like thyself,
I explore the pantry shelf!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Nursery Rhymes for the Tender-Hearted.

6 Fame is at best an unperforming cheat;
But 'tis substantial happiness to eat.

POPE, Prologue for Mr. D'Urfley's Last Play.

7 Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things;
so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.
Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 5.

8 Breakfast makes good memory. (Le déjeuner fait bonne mémoire.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. I, ch. 21.

A good, honest, wholesome, hungry breakfast.
WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 5.

A meagre, unsubstantial breakfast causes a sinking sensation of the stomach and bowels. Robert Browning truly remarks that

"A sinking at the lower abdomen Begins the day with indifferent omen."

PYE HENRY CHAVASSER, Advice to a Wife.

9 And men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act I, sc. 1, l. 239.

10 Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act I, sc. 4, l. 28.

11 There is no love sincerer than the love of food.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act I.

V—Eating: Abstemiousness

12 And famish'd people must be slowly nurst,
And fed by spoonfuls, else they always burst.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 158.

13 I'm not voracious; only peckish.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 41.

14 Just enough food and drink should be taken to restore our strength, and not to overburden it. (Tantum cibi et potionis adhibendum, ut reficiantur vires, non opprimantur.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 11, sec. 36.

15 If, after exercise, we feed sparingly, the digestion will be easy and good, the body light-some, the temper cheerful, and all the animal functions performed agreeably.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Art of Procuring Pleasant Dreams.

16 To lengthen thy life, lessen thy meals.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

A little in the morning, nothing at noon, and a light supper doth make to live long.

UNKNOWN, Reliq. Antiquæ. Vol. i, p. 208. (c. 1550)

17 We never repent of having eaten too little.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 111.

If you wish to grow thinner, diminish your dinner,

And take to light claret instead of pale ale;
Look down with an utter contempt upon butter,
And never touch bread till it's toasted—or stale.

H. S. LEIGH, A Day for Wishing.

18 Many dishes make many diseases.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Healths Improvement, 272.

19 Stop short of your appetite; eat less than you are able. (Desine citra Quam capis; es paulo quam potes esse minus.)

OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 757.

20 Their best and most wholesome feeding is upon one dish and no more and the same plain and simple; for surely this huddling of many meats one upon another of divers tastes is pestiferous. But sundry sauces are more dangerous than that.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xi, ch. 53.

VI—Eating: Gluttony

- 1 He who eats too much know not how to eat.
BRILLAT-SAVARIN, Physiologie du Gout. Ch. 36.
- 2 To kindle and blow the fire of lechery,
That is annexed unto gluttony.
CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 153.
O gluttony, full of cursedness,
O cause first of our confusion,
O original of our damnation.
CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 170.
- 3 He needs no more than birds and beasts to think,
All his occasions are to eat and drink.
DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 423.
- 4 Who dainties love, shall Beggars prove.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.
- 5 He that banquets every day never makes a good meal.

Born but to banquet and to drain the bowl.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 622. (Pope, tr.)
- 9 Clogged with yesterday's excess, the body drags the mind down with it, and fastens to the ground this fragment of divine spirit.
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 77.
- 10 Greediness closed Paradise; it beheaded John Baptist. (Gula paradisum clausit; decollavit Baptistam.)
POPE INNOCENT III, De Contemptu Mundi.
Bk. ii, ch. 18.
Herodes, (whose well the story sought,) When he of wine was replete at his feast,
Right at his own table he gave his best
To slay the baptist John full guiltless.
CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 160.
- 11 I will eat exceedingly, and prophesy.
BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i, sc. 1.
I eat and eat, I swear.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 50.
- 12 O what gluttony is his who has whole boers served up for himself, an animal born for banquets. (Quanta est gula que sibi totos Ponit apros, animal propter convivium natum!)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 140.

- 13 Afterward he wisheth that he had neck of crane and belly of cow, that the morsels might remain longer in the throat and be digested more.
FRÈRE LORENS, Le Somme des Vices et des Vertus. (1279)
I do not know who it was, in ancient days, who wished for a gullet lengthened out like a goose's neck, so that he might taste for a longer space of time what he devoured. (Je ne sçais qui, anciennement, desiroit le gosier allongé comme le col d'une grue, pour savourer plus longtemps ce qu'il avalloit.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.
- 14 Although Annius has almost three hundred tables, he has servants instead of tables, dishes run hither and thither and plates fly about. Keep such banquets to yourselves, ye pompous! We are annoyed by a dinner that walks.
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, epig. 48.
Ingenuous is gluttony! (Ingenuosa gula est.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xlii, epig. 62.
- 15 Swinish gluttony
Ne'er looks to heav'n amidst his gorgeous feast,
But with besotted base ingratitude
Crams, and blasphemes his feeder.
MILTON, Comus, l. 776.
- 16 Ever a glutton, at another's cost,
But in whose kitchen dwells perpetual frost.
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 58. (Dryden, tr.)
- 17 Greediness is rich and shame poor. (Est avidulus dives, et pauper pudor.)
PILGRIMUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 1, l. 12.
- 18 When the tired glutton labours thro' a treat,
He finds no relish in the sweetest meat;
He calls for something bitter, something sour,
And the rich feast concludes extremely poor.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 31.
- 19 A greedy man God hates.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.
- 20 Let him herd with the dumb brutes—an animal whose delight is in fodder. (Mutis adgregetur animal pabulo latum.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. xcii, 7.
What is a man
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 33.
- 21 They are as sick that surfeit with too much,
as they that starve with nothing.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 6.
A surfeit of the sweetest things

The deepest loathing to the stomach brings.

X—Eating: Food for the Gods

¹⁴ Food for the gods. (Βρώμα θεῶν.)

EMPEROR NERO, referring to mushrooms, by means of which Agrippina killed Claudius. The Latin form is "Deorum cibus."

A dish fit for the gods.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 173.

Oh, dainty and delicious!

Food for the gods! Ambrosia for Apicius!
Worthy to thrill the soul of sea-born Venus,
Or titillate the palate of Silenus!

W. A. CROFFUT, Clam Soup.

There's food for gods!

There's nectar! there's ambrosium!

There's food for Roman Emperors to eat!

THOMAS HOOD, The Turtles.

¹⁵ For he on honey-dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan.

To eat the lotus of the Nile
And drink the poppies of Cathay.

WHITTIER, The Tent on the Beach.

¹⁶ The pet of the harem, Rose-in-Bloom,
Orders a feast in his favorite room—
Glittering squares of colored ice,
Sweetened with syrup, tintured with spice,
Creams, and cordials, and sugared dates,
Syrian apples, Othmanee quinces,
Limes and citrons and apricots,
And wines that are known to Eastern princes.

T. B. ALDRICH, When the Sultan Goes to Ispahan.

¹⁷ Yielding more wholesome food than all the messes

That now taste-curious wanton plenty dresses.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 1. (Sylvester, tr.)

¹⁸ When I demanded of my friend what viands
he preferred,
He quoth: "A large cold bottle, and a small hot bird!"

EUGENE FIELD, The Bottle and the Bird.

¹⁹ What will not luxury taste? Earth, sea, and air,
Are daily ransack'd for the bill of fare.
Blood stuffed in skins is British Christian's food,

And France robs marshes of the croaking brood.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 199.

Yet shall you have, to rectify your palate,
An olive, capers, or some better salad
Ushering the mutton; with a short-legged hen,
If we can get her, full of eggs, and then,
Limons, and wine for sauce. to these a coney
Is not to be despaired of for our money;
And though fowl now be scarce, yet there are clerks,

The sky not falling, think we may have larks.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 92

When I can have a fat turtle-dove, good-bye, lettuce, and keep the snails for yourself I have no wish to spoil my appetite. (Cum pinguis mihi turtur erit, lactuca, valesis; Et cocleus tibi habeo. Perdere nolo famem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 53.

Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. i, l. 27.

Though we eat little flesh and drink no wine,
Yet let's be merry: we'll have tea and toast;
Custards for supper, and an endless host
Of syllabubs and jellies and mince-pies,
And other such lady-like luxuries.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 302

Now to the banquet we press;
Now for the eggs, the ham,
Now for the mustard and cress,
Now for the strawberry jam!
Now for the tea of our host,
Now for the rollicking fun,
Now for the mufin and toast,
Now for the gay Sally Lunn!

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i.

XI—Eating: Individual Foods

Asparagus

C—holds that a man cannot have a pure mind who refuses apple-dumpling. . . . Only I stick to asparagus, which still seems to inspire gentle thoughts.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Grace Before Meat.

Beans

If pale beans bubble for you in a red earthenware pot, you can often decline the dinners of sumptuous hosts. (Si spumet rubra conchis tibi pallida testa, Lutorum cenis sæpe negare potes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 7.

9

Beef

When mighty roast beef was the Englishman's food

It ennobled our hearts and enriched our blood—

Our soldiers were brave and our courtiers were good.

Oh! the roast beef of England,

And Old England's roast beef.

HENRY FIELDING, Grub Street Opera. Act iii, sc. 2.

10

What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 23.

There's nothing picturesque in beef!

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xiv.

11

One fat Sir Loin possesses more sublime
Than all the airy castles built by rhyme.

JOHN WILCOX, Bobby and Pudding. Pt. ii

For its merit, I will knight it and make it su-loin!

CHARLES II., on being told that a piece of beef which particularly pleased him was called the loin. Attributed also to James I. A humorous invention, for the word is derived from sur-loin, the upper part of the loin.

Bouillabaisse

This Bouillabaisse a noble dish is—

A sort of soup, or broth, or brew,

Or hotchpotch of all sorts of fishes,

That Greenwich never could outdo;

Green herbs, red peppers, mussels, saffron,

Soles, onions, garlic, roach, and dace;

All these you eat at Terré's tavern

In that one dish of Bouillabaisse.

THACKERAY, Ballad of Bouillabaisse.

13

Butter

She brought forth butter in a lordly dish.

Old Testament: Judges, v, 25.

Cheese

Cheese, that the table's closing rites denies,
And bids me with the unwilling chaplain rise.
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 255.

As after cheese, nothing to be expected.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. vi, 5.

Digestive cheese.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis. Sig. F3 (1577) Cress was supposed to help the memory.

Duck

Let a duck certainly be served up whole; but it is tasty only in the breast and neck. the rest return to the cook (Tota quidem ponatur anas, sed pectore tantum Et cervice sapit: cetera reddo coco)

MARTIAL, Epigrams Bk. xiii, epig. 52.

4
Leeks

Well loved be garlic, onions, and eke leeks. And for to drincken strong wine, red as blood.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 634

5 As often as you have eaten the strong-smelling shoots of Tarentine leeks give kisses with shut mouth (Fila Tarentini graviter redolentia porri Edisti quotiens, oscula clusa dato)

MARTIAL, Epigrams Bk. xiii, epig. 18 Nero ate them in oil to improve his voice (PLINY, Historia Naturalis, xix, 33)

Lettuce

After wine, lettuce rises on the acid stomach (Lactuca immutat acri Post vinum stomacho)

HORACE, Satires Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 59

7 Tell me, why is it that lettuce, which used to end our grandsires' dinners, ushers in our banquets? (Cludere quae cenas lactuca solebat avorum, Dic mihi, cur nostras inchoat illa dapex?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 14.

First, there will be given you lettuce, useful for relaxing the bowels (Prima tibi dabitur ventri lactuca movendo Utilis)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 52.

If the bowels be costive, limpet and common shell-fish will dispel the trouble, or low-growing sorrel. (Si dura morabitur alvus, Mitulus et voles pelent obstantia conchae Et lapathi brevis herba.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 27.

8
Liver

See how the liver is swollen larger than a fat goose! In wonder you will say, "Where, I ask, did this grow?" (Aspice quam tument magno jecur anseris majus! Miratus dicēs "Hoc, rogo, crevit ubi?")

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 58.

9
Meat

And nearer as they came, a genial savour Of certain stews, and roast-meats, and pilaus, Things which in hungry mortals' eyes find favour.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 47.

Yet smelt roast meat, beheld a clear fire shine, And cooks in motion with their clean arms bared.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 50.

10 A friendly swartry, consisting of a boiled leg of mutton with the usual trimmings.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers Ch. 37.

There are wholesale eaters who can devour a leg of mutton and trimmings at a sitting.

A man will pass his summers in health, who will finish his luncheon with black mulberries (Ille salubris Aestates peraget, qui nigris prandia moris Finiet.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 21.

16
Mutton

Of all birds give me mutton

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3695.

Partridge

Whether woodcock or partridge, what does it matter, if the flavor be the same? A partridge is dearer, and thus has better flavor. (Rustica sim an perdix quid refert, si sapor idem est? Carior est perdix; sic sapit illa magis)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 76.

18 An honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 1, l. 58.

Pheasant

Pheasant exceedeth all fowls in sweetness and wholesomeness, and is equal to capon in nourishment.

SIR THOMAS ELVOR, The Castle of Helth. Ch. 8. (1530)

1 Pudding

I sing the sweets I know, the charms I feel,
My morning incense, and my evening meal,
The sweets of Hasty Pudding.

JOEL BARLOW, The Hasty Pudding. Canto i.

Hallel! A great deal of steam! the pudding was out of the copper. A smell like a washing-day! That was the cloth. A smell like an eating-house and a pastrycook's next door to each other, with a laundress's next door to that. That was the pudding.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol: Stave Three.

One solid dish his week-day meal affords,
An added pudding solemniz'd the Lord's.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 345.

"Live like yourself," was soon my lady's word,
And lo! two puddings smok'd upon the board.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 359.

4 Salad

According to the Spanish proverb, four persons are wanted to make a good salad: a spendthrift for oil, a miser for vinegar, a counsellor for salt, and a madman to stir all up.

ABRAHAM HAYWARD, The Art of Dining.

5
Salad, and eggs, and lighter fare,
Tune the Italian spark's guitar;
And, if I take Dan Congreve right,
Pudding and beef make Britons fight.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 246.

6

Oh, herbaceous treat!

'Twould tempt the dying anchorite to eat;
Back to the world he'd turn his fleeting soul,
And plunge his fingers in the salad bowl.

SYDNEY SMITH, A Receipt for a Salad.

7 Tripe

How say you to a fat tripe finely broil'd?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 20.

Turbot

However wide the dish that bears the turbot, yet the turbot is wider than the dish. (Quamvis lata gerat patella rhombum, Rhombus latus est tamen patella.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 81.

9

Turtle

A plate of turtle green and glutinous.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper of Hamelin.

10

"Of all the things I ever swallow,—

Good well-dress'd turtle beats them hollow,—

It almost makes me wish, I vow,
To have two stomachs, like a cow!"

And lo! as with the cud, an inward thrill Upheaved his waistcoat and disturb'd his frill,

His mouth was oozing, and he work'd his jaw—

"I almost think that I could eat one raw."

THOMAS HOOD, The Turtles.

11

Venison

Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 202.

One cut from ven'son to the heart can speak
Stronger than ten quotations from the Greek.

JOHN WOLCOT, Bozzy and Pizzini. Pt. ii.

13

Vermicelli

Ceres presents a plate of vermicelli,—

For love must be sustained like flesh and blood,—

While Bacchus pours out wine, or hands a jelly:

Eggs, oysters, too, are amatory food.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 170.

14

Wood-pigeon

Wood-pigeons check and blunt the manly powers: let him not eat this bird who wishes to be amorous. (Inguina torquati tardent hebetantque palumbi: Non edat hanc volucrem qui cupit esse salax.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 67.

XII—Eating: Vegetarianism

15

I once ate a pea.

GEORGE (BEAU) BRUMMELL, when asked at dinner if he never ate vegetables.

16

If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.

New Testament: I Corinthians, viii, 13.

17

But from the mountain's grassy side

A guiltless feast I bring;

A scrip with herbs and fruits supplied,

And water from the spring.

GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield, ch. 8.)

Oh, how criminal it is for flesh to be stored away in flesh, for one greedy body to grow fat with food gained from another, for one live creature to go on living through the destruction of another living thing! And so in the midst of the wealth of food which Earth, the best of mothers, has produced, it is your pleasure to chew the piteous flesh of slaughtered animals!

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 88.

Kill creatures that work you harm, but even in the case of these let killing suffice. Make not their flesh your food, but seek a more harmless nourishment. (Perdite signa nocent, verum hæc quoque perdita tantum: Ora vacent epulis alimentaque milia carpant.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 477.

Take not away the life you cannot give:
For all things have an equal right to live,
Kill noxious creatures, where 'tis sin to save;
This only just prerogative we have:
But nourish life with vegetable food,
And shun the sacrilegious taste of blood.

OVID, Metamorphoses, xv, 477. (Dryden, tr.)

It engenders cholera, planteth anger;
And better 'twere that both of us did fast,
Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,
Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 175.

But man is a carnivorous production,
And must have meals, at least one meal a day; . . .

Although his anatomical construction
Bears vegetables in a grumbling way,
Your labouring people think, beyond all question,

Beef, veal, and mutton, better for digestion.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 67.

ECHO

Let echo, too, perform her part,
Prolonging every note with art;
And in a low expiring strain,
Play all th' concert o'er again.

ADDISON, Ode for St. Cecilia's Day.

In shade affrighted Silence melts away,
Not so her sister.—Hark! for onward still,
With far-heard step, she takes her listening way,
Bounding from rock to rock, and hill to hill:
Ah, mark the merry maid, in mockful play,
With thousand mimic tones the laughing forest fill!

SIR EGERTON BRYDGES, Echo and Silence.

Hark! to the hurried question of Despair:
"Where is my child?" An Echo answers—
"Where?"

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto ii, st. 27.

I came to the place of my birth and cried: "The friends of my youth, where are they?"—And an echo answered, "Where are they?"

SAMUEL ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. 1, l. 17, note. Quoted from an Arabic manuscript.

Mysterious haunts of echoe, old and far,
The voice divine of human loyalty.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv, l. 149.

Echo waits with art and care
And will the faults of song repair.

EMERSON, May-day, l. 439.

Echo the mimic, the lees of the voice, the tail of a word. (Ἠχὴ μιμολόγον, φωνῆς τρυγα, ῥήματος οὐρήν.)

EVODUS, On a Statue of Echo. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 155.)

Echo is the voice of a reflection in the mirror.
HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books.

And when the echoes had ceased, like a sense of pain was the silence.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, l. 56.

Sweet Echo, sweetest Nymph, that liv'st unseen

Within thy airy shell,
By slow Meander's margin green,
And in the violet-embroidered vale.

MILTON, Comus, l. 230.

How sweet the answer Echo makes
To music at night,
When, roused by lute or horn, she wakes,
And far away, o'er lawns and lakes,
Goes answering light.

THOMAS MOORE, Echo.

And all with pearl and ruby glowing
Was the fair palace door
Through which came flowing, flowing, flowing,
And sparkling evermore,

A troop of Echoes, whose sweet duty
Was but to sing,

In voices of surpassing beauty,
The wit and wisdom of their king.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Haunted Palace.

And more than echoes talk along the walls
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 306.

It seemed the harmonious echo
From our discordant life.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, A Lost Chord.

Even Echo speaks not on these radiant moors.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Ses in Calm. Pt. iii.

True as the echo to the sound.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. ii, l. 8.

But her voice is still living immortal,
The same you have frequently heard,
In your rambles in valleys and forests,
Repeating your ultimate word.

J. G. SAXE, The Story of Echo.

¹ Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction, Sc. 2, l. 47.

The babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, Act ii, sc. 3, 17.

² Halloo your name to the reverberate hills,
And make the babbling gossip of the air
Cry out, "Olivia."

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, Act i, sc. 5, 291.

³ Lost Echo sits among the voiceless mountains,
And feeds her grief.

SHELLEY, Adonais, St. 15.

⁴ The shadow of a sound,—a voice without a mouth, and words without a tongue.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet: Echo.

⁵ Never sleeping, still awake,
Pleasing most when most I speak;
The delight of old and young,
Though I speak without a tongue.

SWIFT, An Echo.

⁶ I heard . . . the great echo flap
And buffet round the hills from bluff to bluff.

TENNYSON, The Golden Year, l. 75.

And a million horrible bellowing echoes broke
From the red-ribb'd hollow behind the wood,
And thunder'd up into Heaven.

TENNYSON, Maud, Pt. ii, sec. 1, l. 24.

⁷ Our echoes roll from soul to soul,
And grow for ever and for ever.
Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,
And answer, echoes, answer, dying, dying,

TENNYSON, The Princess, Pt. iv, l. 362.

⁸ What would it profit thee to be the first
Of echoes, tho' thy tongue should live forever.

A thing that answers, but hath not a thought
As lasting but as senseless as a stone.

FREDERICK TENNYSON, Isles of Greece: Apollo, l. 367.

⁹ Like,—but oh how different!
WORDSWORTH, Yes, It Was the Mountain Echo.

¹⁷ In enterprises like theirs parsimony is the worst profusion.

MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam's Constitutional History.

¹⁸ Frugality is good, if liberality be joined with it. The first is leaving off superfluous expenses; the last bestowing them to the benefit of others that need. The first without the last begets covetousness; the last without the first begets prodigality.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

I—Education: Definitions

⁴ What sculpture is to a block of marble, education is to the soul.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 215.

Then take him to develop, if you can,
And hew the block off, and get out the man.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. IV, l. 269. Pope is referring to a notion of Aristotle's that every block of marble contained a statue, which would appear when the superfluous parts were chipped away.

⁵ Education makes a people easy to lead, but difficult to drive; easy to govern, but impossible to enslave.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, House of Commons, 29 Jan., 1828.

⁶ The secret of education lies in respecting the pupil.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Education.

⁷ Most Americans do value education as a business asset, but not as the entrance into the joy of intellectual experience or acquaintance with the best that has been said and done in the past. They value it not as an experience, but as a tool.

W. H. P. FAUNCE, Letter, 16 Jan., 1928, to Abraham Flexner. (FLEXNER, Universities.)

⁸ Without ideals, without effort, without scholarship, without philosophical continuity, there is no such thing as education.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 97.

⁹ Technical education is the exaltation of manual labour, the bringing of manual labour up to the highest excellence of which it is susceptible.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, Chester, 12 Sept., 1890.

¹⁰ The true purpose of education is to cherish and unfold the seed of immortality already sown within us; to develop, to their fullest extent, the capacities of every kind with which the God who made us has endowed us.

ANNA JAMESON, Education.

¹¹ Finally, education alone can conduct us to that enjoyment which is, at once, best in quality and infinite in quantity.

HORACE MANN, Lectures and Reports on Education. Lecture I.

¹² That's what education means—to be able to do what you've never done before.

GEORGE HERBERT PALMER, Life of Alice Freeman Palmer. The above sentence was the exclamation of the cook when Mrs. Palmer went to the kitchen, and baked a loaf of bread, without previous experience.

¹³ Education is the only interest worthy the deep, controlling anxiety of the thoughtful man.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speeches: Idols.

¹⁴ The essence of education is that it is a change effected in the organism to satisfy the desires of the operator.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 210.

¹⁵ True education makes for inequality; the inequality of individuality, the inequality of success; the glorious inequality of talent, of genius; for inequality, not mediocrity, individual superiority, not standardization, is the measure of the progress of the world.

GEORGE ADE, Bang! Bang! The Steel Box.

Can a girl's trained intelligence be trusted to learn how to wash, feed, or clothe a baby?
Certainly not: there is apparently no fund of experience upon which an educated person may draw! The girl's education may therefore be interrupted, suspended, or confused, in order that under artificial conditions she may be taught such things, probably by spinsters. Can the trained intelligence of a young man be trusted to learn salesmanship, marketing or advertising? Certainly not: the educational process has once more to be interrupted, suspended or confused, in order that he may learn the "principles" of salesmanship from a Ph.D. who has never sold anything, or the "principles" of marketing from a Ph.D. who has never marketed anything.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 71.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 302.

⁹ Next in importance to freedom and justice is popular education, without which neither freedom nor justice can be permanently maintained.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Letter, accepting nomination for Presidency, 12 July, 1880. For an account of the origin of the phrase, "My definition of a University is Mark Hopkins at one end of a log and a student at the other," attributed to Garfield, see 2069:4.

The most significant fact in this world today is, that in nearly every village under the American flag, the school-house is larger than the church. R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, at Thirteen Club Dinner, 13 Dec., 1886.

Still sits the school-house by the road,

A ragged beggar sleeping;

Around it still the sumachs grow

And blackberry-vines are creeping.

WHITTIER, In School-Days. St. 1.

¹⁰ By far the most important bill in our whole code, is that for the diffusion of knowledge among the people. No other sure foundation can be devised for the preservation of freedom and happiness. If anybody thinks that kings, nobles, priests are good conservators of the public happiness, send him here [to Europe].

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 394.

Enlighten the people generally and tyranny and oppressions of both mind and body will vanish like evil spirits at the dawn of day.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Du Pont de Nemours, 1816. (Works, xiv, 491.)

¹¹ I desire to see the time when education, and by its means, morality, sobriety, enterprise and industry, shall become much more general than at present.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Communication, Sangamon Journal, 1832.

¹² But it was in making education not only common to all, but in some sense compulsory on all, that the destiny of the free republics of America was practically settled.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

¹³ In our country and in our times no man is worthy the honored name of statesman who does not include the highest practicable education of the people in all his plans of administration.

HORACE MANN. Inscribed beneath his bust in Hall of Fame.

¹⁴ Public instruction should be the first object of government.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

¹⁵ Slavery is but half abolished, emancipation is but half completed, while millions of freemen with votes in their hands are left without education. Justice to them, the welfare of the States in which they live, the safety of the whole Republic, the dignity of the elective franchise,—all alike demand that the still remaining bonds of ignorance shall be unloosed and broken, and the minds as well as the bodies of the emancipated go free.

ROBERT C. WINTERBORN, Yorktown Oration, 19 Oct., 1881.

VI—Education: Public Education: Its Faults

1 Public schools are becoming a nuisance, a pest, an abomination; and it is fit that the eyes and noses of mankind should, if possible, be open to perceive it.

COWPER, Tirocinium: Preface.

Would you your son should be a sot or dunce, Lascivious, headstrong, or all these at once; That, in good time, the strippling's finish'd taste For loose expense and fashionable waste, Should prove your ruin, and his own at last, Train him in public with a mob of boys.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 201.

2 The microcosm of a public school.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey Bk. i, ch. 2.

3 With universal cheap education, we have stringent theology, but religion is low.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

4 The cult of the public schools, and the curious sentiment now attached to them, are fruits of the complicated emotionalism of the mid-Victorian epoch.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Anthology of Inveictive and Abuse, p. 108.

5 The idea that going to college is one of the inherent rights of man seems to have obtained a baseless foothold in the minds of many of our people.

A. LAWRENCE LOWELL, Address, Haverford College, 17 April, 1931.

6 He was the product of an English public school and university. . . . He had little education and highly developed muscles—that is to say, he was no scholar, but essentially a gentleman.

H. S. MERRIMAN, The Sowers. Ch. 1.

7 Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 37.

Public schools are the nurseries of all vice and immorality.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

8 There is nothing on earth intended for innocent people so horrible as a school. To begin with, it is a prison. But it is in some respects more cruel than a prison. In a prison, for instance, you are not forced to read books written by the warders and the governor. . . . In prison they may torture your body; but they do not torture your brains.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

9 You call this education, do you not?

Why, 'tis the forced march of a herd of bullocks

Before a shouting drover. The glad van Move on at ease, and pause awhile to snatch A passing morsel from the dewy greensward, While all the blows, the oaths, the indignation, Fall on the croupe of the ill-fated laggard That cripples in the rear.

³ Their own eloquence is fatal to many. (Sua mortifera est facundia)
JUVENAL, Satires Sat. x, l. 9.

⁴ Profane eloquence is transferred from the Bar, where it has become obsolete, to the Pulpit, where it is out of place. (L'Eloquence profane est transposée, pour ainsi dire, du Barreau, . . . à la Chaire où elle ne doit pas être.)
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De la Chaire.

The deep soul-moving sense
Of religious eloquence.
WORDSWORTH, Odes No. 45.

⁵ Till the sad breaking of that Parliament
Broke him, as that dishonest victory
At Chæronæa, fatal to liberty.
KILL'D with report that old man eloquent.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Lady Margaret Ley
Milton's reference is to Isocrates, the Athenian orator, who died four days after hearing of the defeat of the Athenians at Chæronæa. The term was afterwards applied to John Quincy Adams and to W. E. Gladstone.

⁶ Everyone was eloquent in behalf of his own cause. (Proque sua causa quisque disertus erat.)
OVID, Fasts. Bk. iv, l. 112.

In an easy cause any man may be eloquent. (In causa facili cuius licet esse disertus)
OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 21.

⁷ He is eloquent enough for whom truth speaks. (Satis est disertus, e quo loquitur veritas.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 651.

He who has the truth at his heart need never fear the want of persusion on his tongue.

JOHN RUSKIN, Stones of Venice. Vol. ii, ch. vi, sec. 99.

Can there be a more horrible object in existence than an eloquent man not speaking the truth?
CAMYLE, Address, University of Edinburgh, 1866.

⁸ There would be no eloquence in the world if we were to speak only with one person at a time.

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, 2.

⁹ It is the heart which makes men eloquent. (Pectus est quod disertos facit.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. x, sec. 7. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

¹⁰ So much the more eloquent as I was less sincere. (D'autant plus éloquent que j'étais moins sincère.)
EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act iii, sc. 1.

¹¹ Plenty of eloquence, but little wisdom. (Satis eloquentia sapientia parum.)
SALLUST, Catiline. Sec. 5.

Eloquence may exist without a proportionable degree of wisdom

FOMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

III—Eloquence: Its Power

¹² Tully was not so eloquent as thou.
Thou nameless column with the buried base.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 110.

¹³ Such was his force of eloquence, to make
The hearers more concerned than he that spake;

Each seemed to act the part he came to see,
And none was more a looker-on than he.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, On the Earl of Strafford's Trial and Death, l. 11.

¹⁴ Him of the Western dome, whose weighty sense
Flows in fit words and heavenly eloquence.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 868.

¹⁵ Eloquence a hundred times has turned the scale of war and peace at will.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

¹⁶ A man whose eloquence has power
To clear the fullest house in half an hour.
SOAME JENYNS, Imitations of Horace. Bk. ii, epis. 1.

¹⁷ A woman, no less than a populace, a grave judge, or a chosen senate, will surrender, defeated, to eloquence. (Quam populus iudexque gravis lectusque senatus, Tam dabit eloquio victa puella manus)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. 3, l. 461.

Ulysses was not beautiful, but he was eloquent. (Non formosus erat, sed erat facundus Ulixes.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 123.

¹⁸ Pour the full tide of eloquence along,
Serenely pure, and yet divinely strong.

Pope, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. ii, l. 171.

¹⁹ I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,

To stir men's blood: I only speak right on.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 225.

Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,

That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc.
1, l. 72.

Every tongue that speaks
But Romen's name speaks heavenly eloquence.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 32.

A full-cell'd honeycomb of eloquence
Stored from all flowers. Poet-like he spoke.
TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 26.

How the heart listened while he pleading spoke!
While on the enlightened mind, with winning art,
His gentle reason so persuasive stole,
That the charmed hearer thought it was his own.

THOMSON, To Memory of Lord Talbot, l. 103.

While listening senates hang upon thy tongue,
Devolving through the maze of eloquence
A roll of periods, sweeter than her song.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 15.

But to a higher mark than song can reach,
Rose this pure eloquence.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 24.

EMERSON, RALPH WALDO

O monstrous, dead, unprofitable world,
That thou canst hear, and hearing, hold thy way!

A voice oracular hath peal'd to-day,
To-day a hero's banner is unfurled
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Written in a Volume of Emerson's Essays.

Voice of the deeps thou art! . . . Light of the deeps thou art!
CRAVEN LANGSTROTZ BETTS, Emerson.

His thought rounded the spheres, his dreams topped the Cosmos. He walks in ether and is part of the barred and crimson sunset.
BENJAMIN DE CASSERES, Emerson. (The Phil-istine. Vol. xx, No. 10.)

Dry lighted soul, the ray that shines in thee,
Shot without reflex from primeval sun.
ELLEN HOOPER, To R. W. E.

There comes Emerson first, whose rich words,
every one,
Are like gold nails in temples to hang trophies on.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 527.

For though he builds glorious temples, 'tis odd
He leaves never a doorway to get in a god.
'Tis refreshing to old-fashioned people like me
To meet such a primitive Pagan as he,
In whose mind all creation is duly respected

As parts of himself—just a little projected;
And who's willing to worship the stars and the sun,

A convert to—nothing but Emerson.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 557.

A great interpreter of life ought not himself to need interpretation.

JOHN MORLEY, Miscellanies: Emerson.

A foul mouth is so ill-matched with a white beard that I would gladly believe the newspaper-scribes alone responsible for the bestial utterances which they declare to have dropped from a teacher whom such disciples as these exhibit to our disgust and compassion as performing on their obscene platform the last tricks of tongue now possible to a gap-toothed and hoary ape, carried at first into notice on the shoulder of Carlyle, and who now in his dotage spits and chatters from a dirtier perch of his own finding and fouling: coryphaeus or choragus of his Bulgarian tribe of auto-coprophagous baboons, who make the filth they feed on.

A. C. SWINBURNE, *Letter to Ralph Waldo
Emerson*, 30 Jan., 1874.

I—End: Apotegms

All is good that hath good end.

JOHN AWDELAV, Poems, p. 54. (c. 1426)

If the end be well, all will be well (Si finis bonus est, totum bonum erit.)

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale lxvii. (c.
1473)

All is well that ends well.

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

All's well that ends well; still the fine's the crown;

Whate'er the course, the end is the renown.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, Act
iv, sc. 4, l. 35. (1602)

Who keeps one end in view makes all things serve.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony.

With mortal crisis doth portend,
My days to appropinquate an end.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 589.

Some time an end there is of every deed.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 1778.

Everything hath end.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 615.

Everything hath an end, and a pudding hath two.

THOMAS NASHE, Strange Newes.

A pudding merits double praise,

A pudding hath two ends

THOMAS BASTARD, Chrestoleros, Bk. iii, ep. 12. (1598)

All things have end,
And that we call a pudding hath his two.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, Act i, sc. 2.

Around the man who seeks a noble end,
Not angels but divinities attend.

R. W. EMERSON, Life

He who has put a good finish to his undertaking is said to have placed a golden crown to the whole.

EUSTATHIUS, Commentary on the Iliad.

A morning Sun, and a Wine-bred child, and a Latin-bred woman seldom end well

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4
The end of things is at hand, (Finis adest rerum)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, Bk. iii, l. 328.

The end is not yet
New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 6.

5
Her end is bitter as wormwood.
Old Testament: Proverbs, v, 4.

We rode with two anchors ahead, and the cables
veered out to the better end.

DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe, Ch. 1. The "better end" of a cable is the end which is secured within the vessel and little used. It is alleged by some authorities that "bitter end" is a corruption of this.

A bitter is but the turn of a cable about the bits, and the bitter end is that part of the cable which doth stay within board.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, Seaman's Grammar, (1627) This is another explanation of "bitter end."

6
All things move on to their end. (Toutes choses se meuvent à leur fin.)

RABELAIS, Works, Bk. ii, ch. 3.

And so on to the end of the chapter.

RABELAIS, Works, Bk. v, ch. 10.

Let the end try the man.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, Act ii, sc. 2, l. 50.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and Truth's.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 447.

8
O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business ere it come!
But it sufficeth that the day will end,
And then the end is known.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, Act v, sc. 1, l. 123.

9
Matters be ended as they are be-friended.

THOMAS STARKLY, England in the Reign of Henry VIII, Bk. i, ch. 3.

Big-endians and Little-endians.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Lilliput, Pt. i, ch. 4. In the empire of Lilliput, the Big-endians belonged to the party which made it a matter of conscience to break their eggs at the big end, and were regarded as heretics by the orthodox party, who broke their eggs at the little end.

11
Thy works and mine are ripples on the sea.
Take heart, I say, we know not yet their end.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Lucrine, Act iii, sc. 1.

12 Things will work to ends the slaves o' the world

Do never dream of.

WORDSWORTH, The Borderers, Act ii, l. 936.

II—End: The End Crowns All

13
It is the end that crowns us, not the fight.

ROBERT HEKRICKE, Hesperides, No. 309.

14
The end crowns the work. (Finis coronat opus)

LEHMANN, Florilegium Politicum, (1630)

15
The last act crowns the play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Respicere Finem, (1640)

'Tis the last act which crowns the play.

NATHANIEL COTTON, Death (1780)

The end crowns every action, stay till that;
Just judges will not be prejudicate.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking-Glass, Act iii, sc. 1.

17
The end crowns all.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, Act iv, sc. 5, l. 224.

La fin couronne les œuvres.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, Act v, sc. 2, l. 28.

18
Integrity of Life is fame's best friend,
Which nobly, beyond death, shall crown the end.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malb. Act v, sc. 5.

III—End: Means and End

19
When the end is lawful, the means are also lawful. (Cum finis est licitus, etiam media sunt licita.)

H. BUSENBAUM, Medulla Theologiae, (1650)
Busenbaum was a Jesuit. Hence the doctrine that the end justifies the means.

20
He who does evil that good may come, pays a toll to the devil to let him into heaven.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth, ii, 213.

21
Be virtuous ends pursued by virtuous means,

Nor think th' intention sanctifies the deed.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene.

1 Ill comes from ill,
And as a thing begins, so ends it still.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Stealing of the Coil, l. 140.

2 Whether with Reason or with Instinct blest,
Know all enjoy that power which suits them best;
To bliss alike by that direction tend,
And find the means proportion'd to their end.

Pope, Essay on Man, Epis. iii, l. 79.

3 The end must justify the means:
He only sins who ill intends:
Since therefore 'tis to combat evil,
'Tis lawful to employ the devil.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Hans Carvel.

4 As some affirm that we say, Let us do evil, that good may come.

New Testament: Romans, iii, 8. (Faciamus mala ut veniant bona.—Vulgate.)

5 No man is justified in doing evil on the ground of expediency.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The Strenuous Life.

6 The doing evil to avoid an evil
Cannot be good.
SCHILLER, Wallenstein, Act iv, 6. (Coleridge, tr.)
Perish with him the folly that seeks through evil good.

WETTLER, Brown of Ossawatimie.

7 Nothing can seem foul to those that win.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, Act v, sc. 1, l. 8.

8 A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains enacted.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 528.

9 The result justifies the deed. (Exitus acta probat.)

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Motto. (From OVID, Heroides, Eleg. ii, l. 85.)

10 The end directs and sanctifies the means.
SIR JOHN WILMOT, Collins v. Blanton, 1762. (2 Wils. Rep. 351.)

11 Him only pleasure leads, and peace attends,
Him, only him, the shield of Jove defends,
Whose means are fair and spotless as his ends.

WORDSWORTH, Dion, St. 6.

IV—End: Remember the End

12 Look to the end. (Τέλος σκοπεῖν.)
CÆLON, the Spartan philosopher, and one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died 597 B. C. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple at Delphi.

Quoted by Solon to CRÆSUS. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon, Sec. 28. See under DEATH: COUNT NO MAN HAPPY.)

13 Whatsoever thou takest in hand, remember the end, and thou shalt never do amiss.
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, vii, 36. (In omnibus operibus tuis memorare novissima tua, et in æternum non peccabis.—Vulgate: Ecclesiastici, vii, 40.)

14 In every thing you do, consider the matters which come first and those which follow after, and only then approach the thing itself.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 15, sec. 1.

15 When any great design thou dost intend,
Think on the means, the manner, and the end.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence, l. 186.

16 In every thing one must consider the end.
(En toute chose il faut considérer la fin.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 5.

17 In every enterprise consider where you would come out. (Quicquid conaris, quo pervenias cogites.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 777.

ENDURANCE

18 An anvil to receive the hammer's blows and to forge the red-hot ore, he, without a groan, endured in silence.

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragment. Frag. 167.

19 Behold, we live through all things,—famine, thirst,
Bereavement, pain; all grief and misery,
All woe and sorrow; life inflicts its worst
On soul and body,—but we can not die,
Though we be sick and tired and faint and worn,—

Lo, all things can be borne!
ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Endurance.

20 'Tis the world the same
For my praise or blame,
And endurance is easy then.
ROBERT BROWNING, Lovers' Quarrel. St. 17.

21 The victory of endurance born.
BRYANT, The Battle-Field. St. 8.

22 'Tis not now who's stout and bold,
But who bears hunger best, and cold;
And he's approv'd the most deserving,
Who longest can hold out at starving.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 353.

23 Sorrow and silence are strong, and patient endurance is godlike.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. 1, l. 60.

24 Endurance is the crowning quality,

And patience all the passion of great hearts.
J. R. LOWELL, Columbus.

Nothing befalls any man which he is not fitted to endure. (Οὐδὲν οὐδενὶ συμβαίνει, ὃ οὐχὶ ἠέκουστος φέρει.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 18.
He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 13.

He that endures is not overcome.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jocunda Prudentium. No. 848.

Much and long have I endured. (Multa diu-que tuli.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 1.
Endure and persist; this pain will turn to your good by and by. (Perfer et obdura; dolor hic tibi proderit olim.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 7.

O vile, Intolerable, not to be endured!
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act v, sc. 2, l. 94.

Such was his life, gently to bear with and endure all men. (Sic vita erat; facile omnes perferre ac pati.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 62. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Endure, and keep yourselves for days of happiness. (Durate, et vosmet rebus servate secundos.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. 1, l. 207.

Whatsoever it be, every fortune is to be overcome by bearing it. (Quidquid erit, superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 710

Every lot is to be overcome by endurance. (Omnis sors ferendo superanda est.)

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 613.

More able to endure,
As more exposed to suffering and distress.
WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior.

II—Endurance: What Can't Be Cured

What cannot be repaired is not to be regretted.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas.

What can't be cured were best endured. (Optimum est pati, quod emendare non possis.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, sec. 9.

What cannot be cured must be endured.
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 15; BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 3.

What cannot be eschew'd, must be embraced.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act v, sc. 5, l. 251.

Better it were a little to feign,
And cleanly cover that cannot be cured:
Such ill as is forced must needs be endured.
SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: September, l. 137.

What's past help is beyond prevention.
MASSINGER, Unnatural Combat: Act ii, sc. 1.

I'll not willingly offend,
Nor be easily offended:
What's amiss I'll strive to mend,
And endure what can't be mended.
ISAAC WATTS, Good Resolutions.

There is no little enemy. (Il n'y a pas de petit ennemi.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

³ Do not speak ill of an enemy, but think it. (De inimico non loquaris male, sed cogites.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 147.

⁴ No tears are shed when an enemy dies. (Inimico extincto non habent lacrimæ exitum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 376.

A dead body revenges not injuries.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

⁵ Take heed of enemies reconciled, and of meat twice boiled.

JOHN RAY, Spanish Proverbs.

⁶ How goes the enemy?

FREDERIC REYNOLDS, The Will. Act i, sc. 1. Said by Mr. Ennui, the "time-killer."

⁷ One may employ everything against one's enemies. (On peut tout employer contre ses ennemis.)

RECHERLUT, Les Tuileries.

⁸ If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 20.

If thou must needs have thy revenge of thine enemy, with a soft tongue break his bones, heap coals of fire on his head, forgive him, and enjoy it.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12.

He doeth well who doeth good
To those of his own brotherhood;
He doeth better who doth bless
The stranger in his wretchedness;
Yet best, oh! best of all doth he
Who helps a fallen enemy.

UNKNOWN, Best of All.

⁹ I love to hear of worthy foes.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto iv, st. 8.

The stern joy which warriors feel
In foemen worthy of their steel.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 10.

Yet, rest thee God! for well I know
I ne'er shall find a nobler foe.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 29.

Thus, then, my noble foe I greet:
Health and high fortune till we meet,
And then—what pleases Heaven.

SCOTT, Lord of the Isles. Canto iii, st. 6.

¹⁰ Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 182.

¹¹ In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 43.

Do not undervalue an enemy by whom you have been worsted.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: War.

¹² He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog's-leather of.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 25.

¹³ Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 140.

¹⁴ You have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village-cure,
Bark when their fellows do.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 158.

Finding their enemy to be so cruel,
They all strain curt'ly who shall cope him first.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis. St. 148.

¹⁵ To exult
Even o'er an enemy oppressed, . . . is the mark

And the mean triumph of a dastard soul.

SMOLLETT, The Rivalry. Act i, sc. 7.

¹⁶ Earth could not hold us both, nor can one
Heaven

Contain my deadliest enemy and me!

SOUTHEY, Roderick. Sec. 21.

He was within a few hours of giving his enemies the slip for ever.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. I, ch. 12.

The body of a dead enemy always smells sweet. (Optime olere occisum hostem.)

AULUS VITELLIVS, when riding over the field of Bedricum, a few days after the battle, 14 April, 69. (Suetonius, Lives of the Cæsars: Vitellius. Sec. 10.) The saying has also been attributed to Vespasian and Charles IX of France.

Too many there be to whom a dead enemy smells well.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12.

And, as the soldiers bore dead bodies by, He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly, To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse Betwixt the wind and his nobility.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act I, sc. 3, l. 42.

Fortune can give no greater advantage than discord among the enemy. (Nihil jam præstare fortuna majus potest, quam hostium discordiam.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 33.

Who troubles himself either about valor or fraud in an enemy? (Dolus, an virtus, quis in hoste requirit?)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 390.

The enemy is at hand. (Hostis adest.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ix, l. 38.

While throng'd the citizens with terror dumb, Or whispering with white lips—"The foe! they come! they come!"

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iii, st. 25.

The Spartans are not wont to ask how many the enemy are, but where they are.

KING AGES II. (PLUTARCH, Life.)

I go to fight your majesty's enemies, and I leave you in the midst of my own. (Je vais combattre les ennemis de votre majesté, et je vous laisse au milieu des miens.)

MARÉCHAL DE VILLARS, to Louis XIV, as he started to join the Army of the Rhine. Attributed to Voltaire by Duvernet (Vie de Voltaire).

I'm lonesome. They are all dying. I have hardly a warm personal enemy left.

J. A. McNEILL WHISTLER. (SEITZ, Whistler Stories.)

I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects. A man cannot be too careful in the choice of his enemies.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

II—Enemy: Man His Own Enemy

What is man's chief enemy? Each man is his own. (Τὸ δεινὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀνὲν αὐτοῦ.)

ANACHARSIS. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. II, l. 43.)

His father was no man's friend but his own, and he, saith the proverb, is no man's foe else.

THOMAS ADAMS, Diseases of the Soul, p. 53.

Yet is every man his own greatest enemy, and as it were his own executioner.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. II, 4.

He is his own worst enemy. (Sibi est adversarius unus acerrimus.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. x, epis. 8. Referring to Julius Cæsar.

It smarts not half so ill as the phrase, Every body's friend but his own.

CHARLES CORNWALLIS, Essays. No. 7. (1600)

Trin, though an idle, thoughtless, rattling rascal, was nobody's enemy but his own.

He is not harmless who harms himself. (On n'est point innocent quand on nuit à soi-même.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 134.

None but yourself, who are your greatest foe.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. II, sec. 3.

None but myself ever did me any harm.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, at St. Helena, 6 April, 1817. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

Formidable is that enemy that lies hid in a man's own breast. (Gravis est inimicus is, qui latet in pectore.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 235.

III—Enemy: The Bridge of Silver

Instead of destroying that bridge, we should build another, that he may retire the more quickly from Europe.

ARISTIDES, referring to the proposal to destroy Xerxes' bridge of boats across the Hellespont. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 16, sec. 3.)

I tell thee, be not rash; a golden bridge Is for a flying enemy.

BYRON, The Deformed Transformed. Act II, 2.

To a flying enemy, a bridge of silver.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 58.

Build a bridge of gold for a flying enemy.

LOUIS II of France, to Brantôme. (BRANTÔME, Mémoires. Vol. I, p. 83.)

For a flying foe Discreet and provident conquerors build up A bridge of gold.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act I, sc. 1.

¹ Open unto your enemies all your gates and ways, and make for them a bridge of silver, rather than fail to get quit of them. (Ouvrez toujours à vos ennemis toutes les portes et chemins, et plutôt leurs faites un pont d'argent, afin de les renvoyer.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 43.

² Give the enemy not only a road for flight, but also the means of defending it. (Hosti non solum dandam esse viam fugiendi verum etiam muniendam.)

SCIPIO AFRICANUS. (FRONTINUS, Strategy. Bk. iv, ch. 7, sec. 16.)

ENGLAND AND THE ENGLISH

I—England: Familiar Phrases

³ There are no countries in the world less known by the British than these self-same British Islands.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro: Preface.

What should they know of England who only England know?

RUDYARD KIPLING, The English Flag.

⁴ Ah! perfidious England! (Ah! la perfide Angleterre!)

JACQUES BOSSUET, Sermon on the Circumcision. His first sermon, preached at Metz, in 1652. The phrase was quoted by Napoleon on leaving England for St. Helena.

⁵ England is the mother of parliaments.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, at Birmingham, 18 Jan., 1865. (THOROLD ROGERS, Speeches of John Bright. Vol. ii, p. 112.)

The king, and his faithful subjects, the Lords and Commons of this realm—the triple cord, which no man can break.

EDMUND BURKE, A Letter to a Noble Lord.

England is not governed by logic, but by Acts of Parliament.

UNKNOWN, Saying, quoted in King's Bench, London, 13 April, 1923.

⁶ Still amorous, and fond, and billing,
Like Philip and Mary on a shilling.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 1, l. 687. The reference is to coins struck in 1555, in which Mary and her consort were placed face to face and not cheek by jowl, as was customary.

Like Will. and Mary on the coin.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 197.

⁷ Be England what she will,
With all her faults, she is my country still.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell, l. 27. (1760)

England, with all thy faults, I love thee still.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 206. (1783)

⁸ The cat, the rat, and Lovell our dog,
Ruleth all England under a hog.

The which was meant that Catesby, Ratcliffe and the Lord Lovell ruleth the land under the king [Richard III].

ROBERT FABYAN, The Concordance of Histories. Fo. 468. (1542)

⁹ In these troublous days, when the great Mother Empire stands splendidly isolated in Europe.

HON. GEORGE EULAS FOSTER, Speech, Canadian House of Commons, 16 Jan., 1896.

Whether splendidly isolated or dangerously isolated, I will not now debate; but for my part, I think splendidly isolated, because this isolation of England comes from her superiority.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER, Speech, Canadian House of Commons, 5 Feb., 1896.

We have stood alone in that which is called isolation—our splendid isolation, as one of our Colonial friends was good enough to call it.

SIR WILLIAM EDWARD GOSCHEN, Speech, at Lewes, 26 Feb., 1896.

He was careful not to tear England from the splendid isolation in which she had wrapped herself.

RAYMOND POINCARÉ, Speech, at Cannes, 13 April, 1912. Referring to King Edward VII.

¹⁰ He whom I favor wins. (Cui adhareo præest.)

HENRY VIII of England, Motto, on his tent in the Field of the Cloth of Gold, June, 1520.

¹¹ God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful Hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional. Written in celebration of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, and first published in the London Times, 17 July, 1897.

¹² England expects every man to do his duty.

LORD NELSON, Signal, to the fleet at the battle of Trafalgar, 21 Oct., 1805. (SOUTHBY, Life of Nelson. Ch. 9.) There are several versions of this famous sentence. In the London Times, 26 Dec., 1805, it was given: "England expects every officer and man to do his duty this day." William Pryce Cunby, First Lieutenant of the Bellerophon, reported it: "England expects that every man will do his duty." Captain Pasco, Nelson's flag-lieutenant, stated that Nelson's order was: "Say to the fleet, England confides that every man will do his duty," and that he suggested the substitution of "expects" for "confides." (See Notes and Queries. Ser. vi, vol. ix, pp. 261, 283.)

¹³ It cannot be made, it shall not be made, it will not be made; but if it were made there would be a war between France and England for the possession of Egypt.

LORD PALMERSTON, Speech, 1851, during the debate in Parliament concerning the Suez Canal. An outstanding example of indiscreet prophecy.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 316. (Bellerium: Land's End.)

² God and my right. (Dieu et mon droit.)
 RICHARD I of England, at the battle of Gisors, in 1198, chose this phrase as his parole, or battle-word, meaning that he was not a vassal of France, but owed his royalty to God alone. He won a great victory, in memory of which the phrase was made the motto of the royal arms of England.

³ It is beginning to be hinted that we are a nation of amateurs.

LORD ROSBERRY, Rectorial Address, Glasgow, 16 Nov., 1900.

⁴ Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
 His word was still,—Fie, foh and fum,
 I smell the blood of a British man.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 187.

With fi, fa, fo, and fum,
 I smell the blood of a Christian man.
 UNKNOWN, Old Scottish Ballad. (JAMIESON, Illustrations of Northern Antiquities.)

⁵ The spacious times of great Elizabeth.
 TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 7.

⁶ In this country they put an admiral to death from time to time to encourage the others. (Dans ce pays-ci il est bon de tuer de temps en temps un amiral pour encourager les autres.)

VOLTAIRE, Henriade: Preface. Candide, Ch. 23. Referring to the execution of the English admiral, John Byng, for failing to relieve Minorca, besieged by the French, in 1756.

⁷ My good associates, by whose light and leading I have walked.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, Letter to James I, 1651. (Reliquia Wottoniana.)

The men of England, the men, I mean, of light and leading in England.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. Disraeli used the expression, "men of light and leading," a number of times: Speech, House of Commons, 28 Feb., 1859; Letter to Duke of Marlborough, 10 March, 1880; Sybil. Bk. v, ch. i.

⁸ St. George he was for England; St. Dennis was for France.

Sing, Honi soit qui mal y pense.
 UNKNOWN, St. George He Was for England. (Black-Letter Ballad, London, 1512.)

Thou Saint George shalt called be,
 Saint George of Merry England, the sign of victory.

SPENCER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto x, st. 61. (1594)

Romulus and Remus were those that Rome did build,
 But St. George, St. George, the dragon he hath killed.

THOMAS D'URREY, Pills to Purge Melancholy. (1661)

II—England: John Bull

⁹ John Bull.
 DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT, The History of John Bull. (1712) A political allegory designed to ridicule the Duke of Marlborough and to render the Continental War, then raging, unpopular. Each European nation was given a nickname by Arbuthnot: "Lewis Baboon" for the French; "Nicholas Frog" for the Dutch, and so on; but "John Bull" for the British was the only one which stuck. It caught the British imagination and has been in use ever since.

Law is a bottomless pit. Exemplified in the case of Lord Strutt, John Bull, Nicholas Frog, and Lewis Baboon, who spent all they had in a lawsuit.

DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT, The History of John Bull. Ch. 24.

¹⁰ The world is a bundle of hay.
 Mankind are the asses who pull;
 Each tugs it a different way.—
 And the greatest of all is John Bull!

BYRON, Epigram.

¹¹ Not a Bull of them all but is persuaded he bears Europa upon his back.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

¹² John Bull was in his very worst of moods,
 Raving of sterile farms and unsold goods.
 SCOTT, The Search After Happiness, l. 230.

III—England: God Save the King

¹³ God save our gracious king,
 Long live our noble king,
 God save the king.

HENRY CAREY [?], God Save the King. Said to have been first sung by Carey, as his own composition, in 1740. (Gentleman's Magazine, ii, 1075.) Also credited, both words and music, to Dr. John Bull (1563?–1628), composer and singer. Claimed also by James Oswald, chamber composer to George III, 1742. The earliest known version was printed in Harmonia Anglicana (1742), and the three verses usually sung appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine, Oct., 1743. They began, "God save great George our King."

¹⁴ Now let us sing long live the King.
 COWPER, History of John Gilpin. St. 63.

¹⁵ That Bogie, the National Anthem!
 W. S. GILBERT, His Excellency. Act I.

¹⁶ The national anthem belongs to the eighteenth century. In it you find us ordering God about to do our political dirty work.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God.

IV—England: On Which the Sun Never Sets

¹
Till now the name of names, England, the name of might,
Flames from the austral fires to the bounds
of the boreal night,
And the call of her morning drum goes in a girdle of sound,
Like the voice of the sun in song, the great globe round and round.

W. E. HENLEY, Rhymes and Rhythms, No. 2.

²
Old England is our home and Englishmen are we,
Our tongue is known in every clime, our flag on every sea.

MARY HOWITT, Old England is Our Home. See also FLAG: BRITISH.

³
The martial airs of England
Encircle still the earth.

AMELIA B. RICHARDS, The Martial Airs of England.

Take 'old o' the Wings o' the Mornin',
An' flop round the earth till you're dead;
But you won't get away from the tune that they play

To the bloomin' old rag over'ead.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Widow at Windsor.

A power which has dotted over the surface of the whole globe with her possessions and military posts, whose morning drum-beat, following the sun, and keeping company with the hours, circles
the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, 7 May, 1834. Works.
Vol. iv, p. 110.

⁴
Never was isle so little, never was sea so lone,
But over the scud and the palm-trees an English flag was flown.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The English Flag.

⁵
That island queen who sways the floods and lands
From Ind to Ind.

TENNYSON, Buonaparte.

⁶
His Majesty's dominions, on which the sun never sets.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ, No. 42,
April, 1829.

"The sun never sets on his empire" was applied originally to the King of Spain. See HOWELL, Familiar Letters, (1623), and THOMAS FULLER,
Holy State, p. 107, (1642) See also under SPAIN.
Claudian (see under Rome) applied the idea to Rome.

V—England: Britannia Rules the Waves

⁷
Britain's best bulwarks are her wooden walls.
THOMAS AUGUSTINE ARNE, Britain's Best Bulwarks. (c. 1760)

The royal navy of England has ever been its greatest defence and ornament; it is its ancient and natural strength; the floating bulwark of the island.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries.
Vol. i, bk. 1, ch. 13. (1765)

The dominion of the sea, as it is an ancient and undoubted right of the crown of England, so is it the best security of the land. The wooden walls are the best walls of this kingdom.

THOMAS COVENTRY, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, Speech, 17 June, 1635. (GARDINER, History of England, iii, 79.)

You truly have fortified Britain with wooden walls. (Tu certe Ligneis Muris Britanniam mun-ivisti.)

UNKNOWN, Latin Address, sent to Samuel
Pepys by the Univ. of Oxford, Oct., 1702.
See also under SHIP: APOTHEGMS.

⁸
Britannia needs no bulwarks,
No towers along the steep;
Her march is o'er the mountain waves,
Her home is on the deep.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ye Mariners of England.

⁹
And trident-bearing queen of the wide seas.
COWPER, Expostulation, l. 275.

¹⁰
The British cannon formidably roars,
While starting from his oozy bed,
Th' asserted Ocean rears his reverend head,
To view and recognise his ancient lord again;
And, with a willing hand, restores
The fasces of the main.

DAVIDSON, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 512.

¹¹
When Britain first, at Heaven's command,
Arose from out the azure main,
This was the charter of the land,
And guardian angels sung this strain—
"Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves."

JAMES THOMSON, Rule, Britannia! This ode appeared originally in the last scene (Act II, sc. 5) of Alfred, A Masque, a dramatic piece in which David Mallet collaborated and which was published in 1740. The ode has sometimes been attributed to Mallet, but the evidence is in favor of Thomson's authorship.

With Freedom's lion-banner
Britannia rules the waves.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ode to the Germans.
(1832)

Englishmen never will be slaves; they are free to do whatever the Government and public opinion allow them to do.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act I.

¹ Providence has given to the French the empire of the land; to the English that of the sea; to the Germans that of—the air!

JEAN PAUL FRIEDRICH RICHTER, as reported by Madame de Staël. (CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.) A better prophecy than Richter supposed.

The English, a nation over-proud, claim the empire of the sea; the French, a flighty nation, assume that of the air.

(Les Anglais, nation trop fière,
S'arrogent l'empire des mers;
Les Français, nation légère, S'emparent de celui des airs.)

LOUIS XVIII of France, when Comte de Provence in 1783, Impromptu Sur Nos Découvertes Aérostatiques. Referring to the balloon flights of Montgolfier and other Frenchmen. The attribution has been questioned.

² Others may use the ocean as their road,
Only the English make it their abode, . . .
Our oaks secure, as if they there took root,
We tread on billows with a steady foot.

EDMUND WALLER, Of a War with Spain, l. 25.

They that the whole world's monarchy designed,
Are to their ports by our bold fleet confined.

EDMUND WALLER, Of a War with Spain, l. 21.

Guarded with ships, and all our sea our own.

EDMUND WALLER, Epistle to My Lord of Falkland.

³ Oh, Britannia, the pride of the ocean,
The home of the brave and the free,
The shrine of the sailor's devotion,
No land can compare unto thee.

The authorship and even the inception of this song is in dispute. It is generally held to be an adaptation of Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, a song written in 1843 by Thomas à Becket, a young English actor playing at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and sung there by another English actor named David Taylor Shaw, who afterwards claimed its authorship. It is said to have been taken to London by E. L. Davenport and sung there under the title, Britannia, the Pride of the Ocean. Some authorities assert that the British version was the first, and was sung by Shaw in England before he came to America. (See BANKS, Immortal Songs of Camp and Field, p. 77; Notes and Queries, 26 Aug., 1899.) For Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, see AMERICA: SONGS OF PRAISE.

VI—England: A Nation of Shopkeepers

⁴ A shopkeeper will never get the more custom by beating his customers, and what is true of a shopkeeper is true of a shopkeeping nation.

JOSIAH TUCKER, Four Tracts on Political and Commercial Subjects. (1766)

⁵ To found a great empire for the sole purpose of raising up a people of customers, may at first sight appear a project fit only for a nation of shopkeepers. It is, however, a project altogether unfit for a nation of shopkeepers, but extremely fit for a nation whose government is influenced by shopkeepers.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Vol. II, bk. iv, ch. 7. (1775)

⁶ A nation of shopkeepers.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Oration, delivered in the State House at Philadelphia, 1 Aug., 1776. Referring to England. There is some doubt as to whether this oration was really delivered. It exists only in a professed English reprint (Philadelphia, printed; London, reprinted for E. Johnson, No. 4 Ludgate Hill, 1776), of which a number of copies are known. W. V. Wells, in his life of Adams, states that "No such American edition has ever been seen."

⁷ Let Pitt then boast of his victory to his shopkeeping nation. (Nation boutiquière.)

BERTRAND BARRÈRE, Speech, before the French National Convention, 11 June, 1794.

England is a nation of shopkeepers. (L'Angleterre est une nation de boutiquiers.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, at St. Helena. See O'MEARA, Napoleon at St. Helena, ii. Napoleon perhaps spoke in Italian, using a phrase of Paoli, "Sono mercanti." See GOURGAUN, I, 69. SCOTT, Life of Napoleon, also attributes the phrase to him.

We are indeed a nation of shopkeepers.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Young Duke, Bk. i, ch. 11. The Continent will not suffer England to be the workshop of the world.

DISRAELI, Speech, 15 Mar., 1838.

⁹ Governments of nations of shopkeepers must keep shop also.

EMERSON, Journal, 1862.

¹⁰ The first of all English games is making money.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: Work.

It may be doubted whether nature intended the Englishman to be a money-making animal.

DEAN W. R. INGE, (MARCHANT, Wis and Wisdom of Dean Inge, No. 194.)

¹¹ We are not cotton-spinners all,
But some love England and her honour yet.

TENNYSON, The Third of February.

¹² Tartuffe has emigrated to England and opened a shop.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 17.

¹³ Down the river did glide, with wind and with tide,
A pig with vast celerity;

And the Devil look'd wise as he saw how the while

It cut its own throat. "There!" quoth he, with a smile.

"Goes 'England's commercial prosperity.'"
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts. St. 8.

VII—England: The Paradise of Women

England is the paradise of women, the purgatory of men, and the hell of horses,

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 205. (1591)

England, they say, is the only hell for horses, and only paradise for women

THOMAS DEKKER, If The Honest Whore. Act iv, sc. 1. (1604)

England is termed by foreigners the paradise of women, as it is by some accounted the hell of horses, and purgatory of servants.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, 51. (1619)

England is a paradise for women, and hell for horses: Italy is a paradise for horses, hell for women

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621)

England is a prison for men, a paradise for women, a purgatory for servants, a hell for horses.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. (1642) Quoted as a proverb.

The wife of every Englishman is counted blessed.

THOMAS DELONEY, Works, p. 377. (c. 1593)

How often have I told you that English women are not to be treated like Circassian slaves. We have the protection of the world; we are to be won by gentle means only, and not to be hector'd, and bullied, and beat into compliance.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. x, ch. 8.

VIII—England: Fast-Anchor'd Isle

And now last, this most happy and glorious event, that this island of Britain, divided from all the world, should be united in itself.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Through many a storm
His isles had floated on the abyss of time;
For the rough virtues chose them for their clime.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 42. "His" refers to George III.

Fast-anchor'd isle.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 151. (1783)

The silver-coasted isle.

TEMPERSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 136.

O, it's a snug little island!

A right little, tight little island!

Search the globe round, none can be found
So happy as this little island.

THOMAS DISNEY, The Snug Little Island.

Our Isle, indeed, too fruitful was before;
But all uncultivated lay

Out of the solar walk and heaven's highway.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 351.

This, in England, (commonly called the "ringing-island") was done with tolling a bell.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. vi, 1.

Streak of silver sea.

W. E. GLADSTONE, writing of the English Channel, Edinburgh Review, 18 Oct., 1870.

The Channel is that silver strip of sea which severs merry England from the tardy realms of Europe.

UNKNOWN. (Church and State Review, 1 April, 1863.)

Tut! the best thing I know between France and England is the sea.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: The Anglo-French Alliance.

A tunnel underneath the sea, from Calais straight to Dover, Sir,
That qualmish folks may cross by land from shore to shore,

With sluices made to drown the French, if e'er they would come over, Sir,
Has long been talk'd of, till at length 'tis thought a monstrous bore.

THEODORE HOOK, Bubbles of 1825.

O thou dear and happy Isle
The garden of the world erewhile,

Thou Paradise of the four seas,
Which Heaven planted us to please,
But, to exclude the world, did guard
With watery if not flaming sword.

ANDREW MARVELL, A Garden.

Rejoice, O Albion! severed from the world,
By Nature's wise indulgence,

JOHN PHILLIPS, Cider. Bk. ii.

Your isle, which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscalable and roaring waters.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 18.

You shall find us in our salt-water girdle.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 81.

That pale, that white-faced shore,
Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides

And coops from other lands her island-ers, . . .

That England, hedged in with the main,
That water-walled bulwark, still secure
And confident from foreign purposes, . . .
The utmost corner of the west.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act II, sc. 1, l. 23.

This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,

This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise,
This fortress built by Nature for herself
Against infection and the hand of war,
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act II, sc. 1, l. 40.

England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of watery Neptune.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act II, sc. 1, l. 61.

Hail, happy Britain! highly favoured isle,
And Heaven's peculiar care!

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chase. Bk. I.

Hope knows not if fear speak truth, nor fear whether hope be not blind as she:
But the sun is in heaven that beholds her immortal, and girdled with life by the sea.

SWINBURNE, England: An Ode. Sec. 3, ch. 7.

Thank Him who laled us here, and roughly set
His Briton in blown seas and storming showers.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 154. "Briton" is so printed, but is evidently a mistake for Britain.

God bless the narrow sea which keeps her off,
And keeps our Britain, whole within herself,
A nation yet, the rulers and the ruled.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Conclusion, l. 51.

The reference is to France.

Compas'd by the inviolate sea.

TENNYSON, To the Queen. St. 9.

Island of bliss! amid the subject seas,
That thunder round thy rocky coasts, set
up,

At once the wonder, terror, and delight
Of distant nations, whose remotest shore
Can soon be shaken by thy naval arm;
Not to be shook thyself, but all assaults
Baffling, like thy hoar cliffs the loud sea-wave.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1595.

It is now three centuries since an English pig has fallen in a fair battle upon English ground, or a clergyman's wife been submitted to any other proposals of love than the connubial en-dearments of her sleek and orthodox mate,

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 5.

The Britons, wholly sundered from all the world. (Penitus toto divisos orbe Britannos.)
VERGIL, Ecloques. Ecl. I, l. 66.

The sea which, according to Virgil's famous line, divided the poor Britons utterly from the world, proved to be the ring of marriage with all nations.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 47.

Whether this portion of the world were rent,
By the rude ocean, from the continent,
Or thus created, it was sure designed
To be the sacred refuge of mankind.

EDMUND WALLER, Panegyric to My Lord Protector, l. 25.

Rome, though her eagle through the world had flown,

Could never make this island all her own.

EDMUND WALLER, Panegyric to My Lord Protector, l. 67.

Look, where clothed in brightest green

Is a sweet Isle, of isles the Queen;

Ye fairies, from all evil keep her!

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell: Prologue, l. 63.

His home!—the Western giant smiles,
And twirls the spotty globe to find it;—
This little speck the British Isles?

'Tis but a freckle,—never mind it!

O. W. HOLMES, A Good Time Going.

IX—England: Her Virtues

England! my country, great and free!

Heart of the world, I leap to thee!

F. J. BAILEY, Festus: The Surface, l. 376.

Man is the nobler growth our realms supply,
And souls are ripened in our northern sky.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, The Invitation.

In spite of their hats being terribly ugly,

God-damn! I love the English!

(Quoique leurs chapeaux soient bien laids,

God-dam! moi j'aime les Anglais.)

BÉRANGER, Les Boxeurs. (1814)

How I love English boldness! how I love the people who say what they think.

VOLTAIRE.

Oh, to be in England

Now that April's there,

And whoever wakes in England

Sees, some morning, unaware,

That the lowest boughs and the brush-wood sheaf,

Round the elm-tree bole are in tiny leaf,

While the chaffinch sings on the orchard bough

In England—now!

ROBERT BROWNING, Home Thoughts from Abroad.

"Here and here did England help me: how can I help England?"—say,
Whoso turns as I, this evening, turn to God to praise and pray,
While Jove's planet rises yonder, silent over Africa.

ROBERT BROWNING, Home Thoughts from the Sea.

Her women fair; her men robust for toil;
Her vigorous souls, high-cultured as her soil;
Her towns, where civic independence flings
The gauntlet down to senates, courts, and kings.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 160.

Liberty is the idol of the English, under whose banner all the nation lists.

SUSANNAH CENTILYRE, Wander. Act I, sc. 1.

A song of hate is a song of Hell;
Some there be who sing it well.
Let them sing it loud and long,
We lift our hearts in a loftier song:
We lift our hearts to Heaven above,
Singing the glory of her we love,
England!

HELEN GRAY CONE, A Chant of Love for England.

Bind her, grind her, burn her with fire,
Cast her ashes into the sea,—
She shall escape, she shall aspire,
She shall arise to make men free;
She shall arise in a sacred scorn,
Lighting the lives that are yet unborn,
Spirit supernal, splendour eternal,
England!

HELEN GRAY CONE, A Chant of Love for England.

Kent, sir—everybody knows Kent—apples, cherries, hops, and women.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2.

That shire which we the heart of England well may call.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion, Song 13. Referring to Warwickshire.

I love thee, Cornwall, and will ever,
And hope to see thee once again!
For why?—thine equal knew I never
For honest minds and active men.
THOMAS FREEMAN, Escomion Cornubie. (1614)

An acre in Middlesex is better than a principality in Utopia.

MACAULAY, Essays: Lord Bacon.

And Devon was heaven to him.

WALLACE RICE, The First American Sailors.

But who did ever, in French authors, see

The comprehensive English energy?

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 51.

England is a domestic country; there the home is revered, the hearth sacred.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 April, 1872.

The stately Homes of England!

How beautiful they stand,
Amidst their tall ancestral turrets,
O'er all the pleasant land!
FELICIA HERMAN, The Homes of England.

What of the bow?

The bow was made in England:

Of true wood, of yew-wood,

The wood of English bows;

So men who are free

Love the old yew-tree

And the land where the yew-tree grows.

A. CONAN DOYLE, The Song of the Bow. (The White Company.)

England were but a fling,

Save for the crooked stick and the grey-geese wing.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. I, p. 116.

Freedom! which in no other land will thrive,
Freedom! an English subject's sole prerogative.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 300.

The land of scholars and the nurse of arms.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 356.

What have I done for you,

England, my England?

What is there I would not do,

England, my own?

With your glorious eyes austere,

As the Lord were walking near,

Whispering terrible things and dear,

As the Song on your bugles blown,

England—

Round the world on your bugles blown!

W. E. HENLEY, England, My England.

Ever the faith endures,

England, my England:—

"Take and break us: we are yours,

England, my own!

Life is good, and joy runs high

Between English earth and sky:

Death is death; but we shall die

To the Song on your bugles blown,

England—

To the stars on your bugles blown!"

W. E. HENLEY, England, My England.

Take of English earth as much

As either hand may rightly clutch. . . .

Lay that earth upon thy heart,

And thy sickness shall depart!

RUDYARD KIPPLING, A Charm.

Land of our Birth, our faith, our pride,
For whose dear sake our fathers died;
O Motherland, we pledge to thee
Head, heart, and hand through the years to be!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Children's Song.

There is but one task for all—
One life for each to give.
Who stands if Freedom fall?
Who dies if England live?

RUDYARD KIPLING, For All We Have and Are.

¹ The strength of England lies not in armaments and invasions; it lies in the omni-potence of her industry, and in the vivifying energies of her high civilisation.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations:
Lascy and Merino.

² The history of England is emphatically the history of progress.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mackintosh's History of the Revolution.

Attend, all ye who list to hear our noble England's praise;

I tell of the thrice famous deeds she wrought in ancient days

MACAULAY, The Armada.

³ There she sits in her Island-home,
Peerless among her Peers!

And Liberty oft to her arms doth come,
To ease its poor heart of tears.

Old England still throbs with the muffled
fire

Of a Past she can never forget:

And again shall she banner the World up higher;

For there's life in the Old Land yet.

GERALD MASSEY, Old England.

⁴ An old and haughty Nation proud in arms.
MILTON, Comus, l. 33.

Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks. Methinks
I see her as an eagle mewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full midday beam.

MILTON, Areopagitica.

⁵ Britain scorns to yield.

THOMAS OLIPHANT, March of the Men of Harlech. St. I.

⁶ Bid harbours open, public ways extend.
Bid temples, worthier of the God, ascend;
Bid the broad arch the dangerous flood contain,

The mole projected break the roaring main,
Back to his bounds their subject sea command,

And roll obedient rivers thro' the land.
These honours Peace to happy Britain brings;
These are imperial works, and worthy Kings.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iv, l. 197.

⁷ Britain is
A world by itself; and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 12.

⁸ O England! model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mighty heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, prologue, l. 16.

Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings.
⁹ SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 5, l. 20.

This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself. . . .

Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us rue,

If England to itself do rest but true.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 7, l. 112.

All our past acclaims our future: Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand, Milton's faith and Wordsworth's trust in this our chosen and chainless land,
Bear us witness: come the world against her,
England yet shall stand.

SWINBURNE, England: An Ode. Pt. ii, st. 5.

¹⁰ First pledge our Queen this solemn night,
Then drink to England, every guest; . . .
Hands all round!

God the traitor's hope confound!

To this great cause of Freedom drink, my friends,

And the great name of England, round and round

TENNYSON, Hands All Round (Memoirs of Tennyson, by his son Vol. i, p. 345) First printed in the London Examiner, 7 Feb., 1852.

O Statesmen, guard us, guard the eye, the soul
Of Europe, keep our noble England whole.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington. Pt. vii.

¹¹ It is the land that freemen till,
That sober-suited Freedom chose;
The land, where, girt with friends or foes,
A man may speak the thing he will;

A land of settled government,
A land of just and old renown,
Where Freedom slowly broadens down
From precedent to precedent.

TENNYSON, You Ask Me Why.

¹² I thank the goodness and the grace
Which on my birth have smiled,
And made me, in these Christian days,
A happy English child.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, A Child's Hymn of Praise.

O, how good should we be found

Who live on England's happy ground!

JANE TAYLOR, The English Girl.

1 'Tis to thy sov'reign grace I owe
That I was born on British ground!

ISAAC WATTS, Praise for Birth in a Christian Land.

Lord, I ascribe it to thy grace,
And not to chance, as others do,
That I was born of Christian race,
And not a Heathen or a Jew.

ISAAC WATTS, Praise for the Gospel.

But I count the grey barbarian lower than the Christian child

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 174.

2 O Englishmen!—in hope and creed,
In blood and tongue our brothers!
We too are heirs of Runnymede;
And Shakespeare's fame and Cromwell's deed
Are not alone our mother's.

WHITTIER, To Englishmen.

The New World's Sons, from England's breasts
we drew

Such milk as bids remember whence we came;
Proud of her Past, wherefrom our Present grew,
This window we inscribe with Raleigh's name.

J. R. LOWELL, Inscription, On the Raleigh window in St. Margaret's, Westminster.

3 Hail to the crown by Freedom shaped—to gird

As English Sovereign's brow! and to the throne

Whereon he sits! whose deep foundations lie
In veneration and the people's love.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 1.

4 Thou art free,
My Country! and 'tis joy enough and pride
For one hour's perfect bliss, to tread the grass

Of England once again.

Independence*. Pt. i, No. 10.

We must be free or die, who speak the tongue
That Shakespeare spake; the faith and morals
bold

Which Milton held.—In every thing we are sprung
Of Earth's first blood, have titles manifold.

X—England: Her Faults

8 A race that binds
Its body in chains and calls them Liberty,

And calls each fresh link Progress.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Titan and Avatar.

9 For 'tis a low, newspaper, humdrum, lawsuit Country

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto xii, st. 65.

I am sure my bones would not rest in an English grave, or my clay mix with the earth of that country. . . . I would not even feed her worms if I could help it.

BYRON, Letters.

7 The world's busybody.

CARLYLE, Letter-Day Pamphlets: Downing Street.

8 England, a happy land we know,
Where follies naturally grow,
Where without culture they arise,
And tower above the common size;
England, a fortune-telling host
As numerous as the stars, could boast;
Matrons, who toss the cup, and see
The grounds of fate in grounds of tea;
Who, versed in every modest lore,
Can a lost maidenhead restore,
Or, if their pupils rather choose it,
Can show the readiest way to lose it.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 111.

9 We justly boast

At least superior jockeyship, and claim
The honours of the turf as all our own!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 275.

England is unrivalled for two things—sporting and politics.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

10 Alas the Church of England! What with Popery on one hand, and schismatics on the other, how has she been crucified between two thieves!

DEFOE, The Shortest Way with the Dissenters.
"The Church of England," I said, seeing that Mr. Inglesant paused, "is no doubt a compromise"

SHORTHOUSE, John Inglesant. Bk. ii, ch. 19.

11 Wealth, howsoever got, in England makes Lords of mechanics, gentlemen of rakes:
Antiquity and birth are needless here;

'Tis impudence and money makes a peer.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman.
Pt. i, l. 360.

It was not the custom in England to confer titles on men distinguished by peaceful services, however good and great; unless occasionally, when they consisted of the accumulation of some very large amount of money.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 35.

12 But English gratitude is always such,
To hate the hand which doth oblige too much.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman.
Pt. ii, l. 409.

¹ England has no higher worship than Fate. She lives in the low plane of the winds and waves, watches like a wolf a chance for plunder; . . . never a lofty sentiment, never a duty to civilisation, never a generosity, a moral self-restraint.

EMERSON, Journal, 1862.

² Long beards heartless, painted hoods witless, Gay coats graceless, make England thriftless.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. I, p. 119. (1662)

³ It is one of the happiest characteristics of this glorious country that official utterances are invariably regarded as unanswerable.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

⁴ O England! full of sin, but most of sloth; Spit out thy phlegm, and fill thy breast with glory:

Thy gentry bleats, as if thy native cloth

Transfus'd a sheepishness into thy story:

Not that they all are so; but that the most Are gone to grass, and in the pasture lost.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 16.

⁵ By no stretch of charity, and by no violence to grammar can you call the British Nation a Christian people. The British leaders have an itch for dictation, and their chief vice is a thirst for power.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 32.

⁶ This is the true character of the English Government, and it presents the singular phenomenon of a nation, the individuals of which are as faithful to their private engagements and duties, as honorable, as worthy as those of any Nation on earth, and yet whose government is the most unprincipled at this day known.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 376.

It may be asked, what, in the nature of her government, unfits England for the observation of moral duties? . . . The real power and property of the government is in the great aristocratical families of the nation. The nest of office being too small for all of them to cuddle into it at once, the contest is eternal which shall crowd the other out. For this purpose they are divided into two parties, the INS and the OUTS.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 376.

We are going on here in the same spirit still. The Anglophobia has seized violently on three members of our council.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, 1793.

⁷ Of all the sarses that I can call to mind, England does make the most unpleasant kind: It's you're the sinner o'lers, she's the saint; Wut's good's all English, all that is n't ain't;

Wut profits her is o'lers right an' just, An' ef you don't read Scriptur so, you must; She's praised herself until she fairly thinks There ain't no light in Natur when she winks; . . .

She's all thet's honest, honnoble, an' fair, An' when the vartooos died they made her heir.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers: Mason and Slidell.

JOHN MASKFIELD, Everlasting Mercy, I, 965.

⁹ And shall not Britain now reward his toils, Britain, that pays her patriots with her spoils?

¹² Half of it has been incurred in putting down the Bourbons, and the other half in setting them up.

R. B. SHERIDAN, referring to England's public debt. (MOORE, Life of Sheridan. Vol. ii, p. 218.)

¹³ England is the land of sects. An Englishman, like a free man, goes to heaven by the way which pleases him. . . . If there was only one religion in England its despotism would be a matter for fear; if two, they would cut each other's throats; but there are thirty, and they live in peace, and happy.

VOLTAIRE, Letters on the English. Nos. 5 and 6.

In England there are sixty different religions, and only one sauce. (Il y a en Angleterre soixante sectes religieuses différentes, et une seule sauce.)

XI—England: Her Mission

1 The most eloquent voice of our century uttered, shortly before leaving the world, a warning cry against the "Anglo-Saxon contagion."

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays on Criticism: Milton. The probability seems to be that Arnold referred to Emerson, but the reference has also been claimed for Coleridge and Victor Hugo.

2 Yes, we arraign her! but she,
The weary Titan! with deaf
Ears, and labour-dim'd eyes,
Regarding neither to right
Nor left, goes passively by,
Staggering on to her goal;
Bearing on shoulders immense,
Atlantean, the load,
Well-nigh not to be borne,
Of the too vast orb of her fate.

3 O praise the Lord with one consent,
And in this great design
Let Britain and the Colonies
Unanimously jine.

England's done the right thing,
she's never done a wrong—
and this is merely one more way to start the same old song.

ALFRED KREYENBORG, Rule Britannia.

4 Did Peace descend, to triumph and to save,
When freeborn Britons crossed the Indian
wave?

Ah, no!—to more than Rome's ambition true,
The Nurse of Freedom gave it not to you!
She the bold route of Europe's guilt began,
And, in the march of nations, led the van!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. I, l. 355.

5 The earth is a place on which England is found,
And you find it however you twirl the globe

14 Let not England forget her precedence of teaching nations how to live.

MILTON, Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce.

15 England! on thy knees to-night,

Pray that God defend the Right.

HENRY NEWBOLT, The Vigil.

1 England has saved herself by her exertions, and will, I trust, save Europe by her example.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, at Lord Mayor's banquet at Guildhall, London, 9 Nov., 1805.

This was Pitt's last speech, and the above sentence has been variously reported. The above version is from Stanhope's Life of Pitt (vol. iv, p. 346), as told him by the Duke of Wellington. Macaulay (Miscellaneous Writings, Vol. II, p. 368) gives the following: "Let us hope that England, having saved herself by her energy, may save Europe by her example." Still different versions were given in the newspapers commenting on the speech.

Herself by fortitude, Europe by example. (Seipsum constantia Europam exemplo.)

Inscription, on medal struck in 1814 to commemorate the Treaty of Paris.

2 Certainly England for the English goes without saying: it is the simple law of nature. But this woman denies to England her legitimate conquests, given her by God because of her peculiar fitness to rule over less civilized races for their own good.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan, Act IV.

3 No little German state are we,
But the one voice in Europe; we must speak.

TENNYSON, The Third of February, 1852. Protesting against the coup d'état of Louis Napoleon.

4 Remote compatriots, whereso'er ye dwell,
By your prompt voices, ringing clear and true,
We know that with our England all is well.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ver Tenebrosum: Last Word: To the Colonies.

Sons of the Empire, Britain's sons,
Here, as the darkness falls,
Over your grey Sea-Mother's guns
The warning clarion calls;
O, and I bid you now "God speed,
Quit you like men, be true";
Stand by us in the hour of need
And we shall stand by you.

J. C. SQUIRE, The Hands-Across-the-Sea Poem

5 I believe England will be conquered some day or other in New England or Bengal.

WALFOLD, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 2 Feb., 1774.

6 Where now is Britain? . . .
Even as the savage sits upon the stone
That marks where stood her capitols, and hears

The bittern booming in the weeds, he shrinks
From the dismaying solitude.

HENRY KRAKE WHITE, Time.

7 Set in this stormy Northern sea,

Queen of these restless fields of tide,
England! what shall men say of thee,
Before whose feet the worlds divide?
OSCAR WILDE, Ave Imperatrix.

XII—England: Her Soldiers

8 In joys of conquest he resigns his breath,
And, fill'd with England's glory, smiles in death.

ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 313. Of Philip Dormer.

9 With proud thanksgiving, a mother for her children,
England mourns for her dead across the sea.
Flesh of her flesh they were, spirit of her spirit,

Fallen in the cause of the free.

LAURENCE BINYON, For the Fallen.

10 If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is for ever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,

Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,

A body of England's, breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of home.

RUPERT BROOKE, 1914: The Soldier.

11 Be Britain still to Britain true,
Amang ourselfs united;
For never but by British hands
Maun British wrangs be righted!

ROBERT BURNS, The Dumfries Volunteers.

12 Bitterly, England, must thou grieve—
Though none of these poor men who died
But did within his soul believe
That death for thee was glorified.

WALTER DE LA MARKE, "How Sleep the Brave."

13 Go, stranger! track the deep,
Free, free, the white sail spread!
Wave may not foam, nor wild wind sweep,
Where rest not England's dead.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, England's Dead.

14 Never the lotos closes, never the wild-fowl
wake,

But a soul goes out on the East Wind that died for England's sake—

Man or woman or suckling, mother or bride or maid—

Because on the bones of the English the English Flag is stayed.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The English Flag, St. 12.

15 You are ordered abroad as a soldier of the King to help our French comrades against the invasion of a common enemy. You have to perform a task which will need your courage, your energy, and your patience. Remember that the honour of the British Army depends on your individual conduct. . . . Do your duty bravely. Fear God and honour the King.

 LORD KITCHENER, Address to the British Expeditionary Force, 1914.

¹⁴ It is my royal and imperial command . . . that you address all your skill, and all the valor of my soldiers, to exterminate the treacherous English, and to walk over General French's contemptible little army.

KAISER WILHELM II [?], Army Order, Aix, 19 Aug., 1914. Hence the title "Old Contemptibles" given to the first British expeditionary force. The Kaiser actually said "negligible," not "contemptible." "Contemptible" was either an error in translation or the invention of a British propagandist. Years before, in answer to a question, "What would you do if England landed an army on the coast of Germany?" Bismarck had replied, "I would call out the police to arrest them."

O little Force that in your agony
 Stood fast while England girt her armour on,
 Held high our honour in your wounded hands,
 Carried our honour safe with bleeding feet—
 We have no glory great enough for you,
 The very soul of Britain keeps your day.

² I find the Englishman to be him of all men who stands firmest in his shoes.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 106.

An Englishman has firm manners. He rests secure on the reputation of his country, on his family, and his expectations at home. There is in his manners a suspicion of insolence. If his belief in the Thirty-nine Articles does not bind him much, his belief in the fortieth does—namely, that he shall not find his superiors elsewhere.

XVII—England: The English: Mostly Fools

¹³ Consider, in fact, a body of six hundred and fifty-eight miscellaneous persons set to consult about "business" with twenty-seven millions, mostly fools, assiduously listening to them, and checking and criticising them:—was there ever since the world began, will there ever be till the world end, any "business" accomplished in these circumstances?

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets: No. 6.

¹⁴ England has been divided into three classes: Knaves, Fools, and Revolutionists.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Victorian Age in English Literature, p. 233.

¹⁵ Let but thy wicked men from out thee go,
And all the fools that crowd thee so,
Even thou who dost thy millions boast,
A village less than Islington will grow,
A solitude almost.

⁶ Every production of genius must be the production of enthusiasm.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Solitude.

Enthusiasm is that secret and harmonious spirit which hovers over the production of genius, throwing the reader of a book, or the spectator of a statue, into the very ideal presence whence these works have really originated. A great work always leaves us in a state of musing.

I—Epitaphs: Apothegms

Julius Scaliger, who in a sleepless fit of the gout could make two hundred verses in a night, would have but five plain words upon his tomb. [Julii Cæsaries Scaligeri quod fuit.]

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 21.

Gravestones tell truth scarce forty years.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. i.

Old gravestones were taken up and other bodies laid under them.

1 Kind Reader! take your choice to cry or laugh;
Here Harold lies—but where's his Epitaph?
If such you seek, try Westminster, and view
Ten thousand just as fit for him as you.
BYRON, Substitute for an Epitaph.

2 Having read the inscriptions
Upon the tombstones
Of the Great and the Little Cemeteries,
Wang Peng advised the Emperor
To kill all the living
And resurrect the dead.

PAUL ELDREDGE, Wang Pen, Famous Sociologist, Suggests to the Emperor the Only Possible Means of Improving the People of the Empire.

3 Let there be no inscription upon my tomb. Let no man write my epitaph. No man can write my epitaph. I am here ready to die. I am not allowed to vindicate my character; and when I am prevented from vindicating myself, let no man dare to calumniate me. Let my character and motives repose in obscurity and peace, till other times and other men can do them justice.

ROBERT EMMET, Speech, on his conviction for treason, Sept., 1803.

Let no man write my epitaph; let my grave
Be uninscribed, and let my memory rest
Till other times are come, and other men,
Who then may do me justice.

SOUTHEY, Written after Reading the Speech of Robert Emmet.

4 When fades at length our lingering day,
Who cares what pompous tombstones say?
Read on the hearts that love us still,
Hic jacet Joe. Hic jacet Bill.
O. W. HOLMES, Bill and Joe.

5 In lapidary inscriptions a man is not upon oath.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

Friend, in your epitaphs I'm grieved
So very much is said:
One-half will never be believed,
The other never read.

UNKNOWN, On Too-Wordy Epitaphs. Sometimes ascribed to Pope, but not found in his works.

6 The hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, "For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot,"
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 144.

7 Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!
Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remember'd in thy epitaph.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 99.

Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,

Not worshipp'd with a waken epitaph.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act I, sc. 2, l. 230.

8 You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,
Than to live still and write mine epitaph.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 117.

And if your love
Can labour aught in sad invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 292.

9 Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 145.

10 Build me no comic tombstone, lying half,
And half glozed over with unmeaning words,
But a brave fountain. Let my epitaph
Be sung by birds.

HUGH WESTERN, My Testament.

II—Epitaphs: Some Famous Examples

11 Here Huntington's ashes long have lain
Whose loss is our own eternal gain,

For while he exercised all his powers,

Whatever he gained, the loss was ours.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Epitaph on Collis P. Huntington. (The Devil's Dictionary, p. 202.)

12 Underneath this sable hearse
Lies the subject of all verse:

Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother:

Death, ere thou hast slain another,

Fair, and learn'd, and good as she,

Time shall throw a dart at thee.

WILLIAM BROWNE, On the Countess Dowager of Pembroke. The stanza as engraved on the tomb varies slightly from the above, which is the version given in the edition of Browne's poems edited by Gordon Goodwin. There is a second stanza, sometimes attributed to William, Earl of Pembroke, the son of the Countess. The first publication of the famous epitaph was in Osborne's Traditional Memoirs of the Reign of King James, 1658, but with no ascription of authorship. It was claimed for Ben Jonson by Peter Whalley, who published a collected edition of his works in 1756, but with no authority except popular tradition.

And since my weak and saddest verse
Was worthy thought thy grandam's hearse,
Accept of this! Just tears my sight
Have shut for thee—dear Lord—good night.

WILLIAM BROWNE, On the Right Honourable Charles, Lord Herbert of Cardiff and Shurland. Lord Herbert was the grandson of the Countess of Pembroke, and this explicit claim of Browne to the authorship of her famous epitaph should settle the question.

Browne was a protégé of William, Earl of Pembroke, the Countess's son.

¹ This is the tomb of Callimachus that thou art passing.

He could sing well, and laugh well at the right tune over the wine

CALLIMACHUS, His Own Epitaph. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 415.)

² Lo, here the precious dust is laid,
Whose purely-temper'd clay was made
So fine, that it the guest betray'd.
Else, the soul grew so fast within,
It broke the outward shell of sin,
And so was hatch'd a Cherubin.

THOMAS CAREW, Epitaph on Lady Maria Wentworth.

³ And when I lie in the green kirkyard,
With the mould upon my breast,
Say not that she did well or ill,
Only, "She did her best"

DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK, Epitaph.

⁴ His form was of the manliest beauty,
His heart was kind and soft,
Faithful, below, he did his duty;
But now he's gone aloft. . . .

For though his body's under hatches,
His soul has gone aloft.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Tom Bowdler. Written on the occasion of the death of his brother, for many years master of a merchant vessel. The first stanza is inscribed on Charles Dibdin's gravestone in the cemetery of St. James, Camden Town, London.

⁵ Never he vexed at not getting something, but rejoice in all the gifts of God. Wise Periander died of disappointment at not attaining the thing he wished.

DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Epitaph for Periander. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 520.)

⁶ If e'er she knew an evil thought
She spoke no evil word!

Peace to the gentle! She has sought
The bosom of her Lord.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Epitaph on Hannah Rutcliff.

⁷ Under this stone, reader, survey
Dead Sir John Vanbrugh's house of clay.
Lie heavy on him, earth! for he Laid many heavy loads on thee.

ABEL EVANS, On Sir John Vanbrugh. Vanbrugh was the architect of Blenheim Palace.

Lie light upon him, earth, tho' he Laid many a heavy load on thee.

The foregoing epitaph as quoted by SNYDER, Epitaphia: Architectis.

⁸ Alas, poor Tom! how oft, with merry heart,
Have we beheld thee play the Sexton's part;

Each comic heart must now be grieved to see
The Sexton's dreary part performed on thee.

ROBERT FERGUSON, Epigram on the Death of Mr. Thomas Lancashire, Comedian.

¹¹ Here lies James Quinn. Deign, Reader, to be taught,

Whate'er thy strength of body, force of thought,

In Nature's happiest mould however cast,
To this complexion thou must come at last.

DAVID GARRICK, Epitaph on James Quinn. In the abbey church at Bath, England. (MURPHY, Life of Garrick Vol. ii, p. 38.) The last line is often attributed to Shakespeare, perhaps in confused remembrance of Hamlet, act v, sc. 1, l. 186: "Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come."

¹² Here Reynolds is laid, and, to tell you my mind,

These two asleep are: I'll but be undrest,
And so to bed. Pray wish us all good rest.

ROBERT HERRICK, Epitaph on Sir Edward Gyles.

¹⁵ Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind. . . . To the poor she was a benefactor, to the rich an example, to the wretched a comforter, to the prosperous an ornament.

ANDREW JACKSON, Epitaph for his Wife, Rachel, inscribed on her tomb at their home, The Hermitage, near Nashville, Tenn.

¹⁶ The hand of him here torpid lies,

That drew th' essential form of grace;

Here closed in death th' attentive eyes
That saw the manners in the face.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Epitaph for William Hogarth.

1
Phillips! whose touch harmonious could remove

The pangs of guilty power and hapless love,
Rest here, distress'd by poverty no more;
Find here that calm thou gav'st so oft before;
Sleep undisturb'd within this peaceful shrine,
Till angels wake thee with a note like thine!

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Epitaph on Claudius Phillips, the Musician.

Underneath this stone doth lie
As much beauty as could die;
Which in life did harbour give
To more virtue than doth live.
If at all she had a fault,
Leave it buried in this vault.
One name was ELIZABETH,
The other let it sleep in death

BEN JOHNSON, Epitaph on Elizabeth, L. H.

Gentle Lady, may thy grave
Peace and quiet ever have
MILTON, Epitaph on Lady Winchester, l. 47.

4
I have found the haven; Hope and Fortune, farewell!

You have mock'd me long enough; mock others now!

(Inveni portum; Spes et Fortuna valeat!
Sat me luscitis; ludite nunc alios.)

JANUS PANCONIUS, Onofrio. A Latin version of a Greek epitaph (LAURENTIUS SCHEIDERN, Monumenta Italica: Felio Helmar-tada, p. 164.) Quoted in this form by Le Sage, Gil Blas, bk. ix, ch. 10, last lines.

Fortune and Hope farewell! I've found the port;
You've done with me; go, now, with others sport.

(Jam portum inveni, Spes et Fortuna valeat.
Nil mihi vobiscum est, ludite nunc alios.)

SIR THOMAS MORE, Progygnasmata. Latin version of Greek epitaph prefixed to More's Epigrams, 1520. English version by John Herman Merivale

Mine haven's found; Fortune and Hope, adieu.
Mock others now, for I have done with you.

(Inveni portum Spes et Fortuna valeat
Nil mihi vobiscum ludite nunc alios.)

Latin version of Greek epitaph as inscribed on the tomb of Francesco Pucci, church of St. Onofrio, Rome. English version by ROBERT BUSTON (Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 6), who credits the authorship to Prudentius.

Avete multum, Spesque, Forsque; sum in vado.
Qui pone sint illudite; haud mea interest.

Latin version of Greek epitaph, given by Dr. HENRY WELLESLEY, Anthologia Polyglotta, p. 464.

5
Excuse my dust.
DOROTHY PARKER, Her Own Epitaph.

6
He kept at true good humour's mark

The social flow of pleasure's tide:

He never made a brow look dark,

Nor caused a tear, but when he died.

THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Headlong Hall: Song.

Here Rufus lies, who raised in victory's hour
His country, not himself, to sovran power.
(Hic situs est Rufus, pulso qui Vindice quondam Imperium adseruit non sibi, sed patriæ)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 19.

8
Here rests a Woman, good without pretence,
Bless'd with plain Reason and with sober Sense:

No Conquests she but o'er herself desired,

No Arts essay'd but not to be admired.

Passion and Pride were to her soul unknown,

Convinc'd that Virtue only is her own.

So unaffected, so composed, a mind,

So firm, yet soft, so strong, yet so refin'd,

Heaven, as its purest gold, by Tortures tried:

The Saint sustain'd it, but the Woman died.

POPE, Epitaph on Mrs. Corbet, Who Died of a Cancer in Her Breast.

9
Here lies Lord Coningsby—be civil!

The rest God knows—perhaps the Devil.

POPE, Epitaph on Lord Coningsby.

10
Statesman, yet friend to truth, of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honour clear,
Who broke no promise, serv'd no private end,
Who gain'd no title, and who lost no friend;
Embold by himself, by all approv'd,
And prais'd, unenvied by the Muse he lov'd.

POPE, Epistle to Mr. Addison, l. 67. Referring to James Craggs. The line on his tomb in Westminster Abbey reads "Prais'd, wept, and honour'd, by the Muse he lov'd."

11
This modest stone, what few vain marbles can,
May truly say, Here lies an Honest Man;
A Poet bless'd beyond the Poet's fate,
Whom Heav'n kept sacred from the proud and great;

Foe to loud Praise, and friend to learned Ease,

Content with Science in the vale of peace.

Calmly he look'd on either life, and here

Saw nothing to regret, or there to fear;

From Nature's temperate feast rose satisfied,

Thank'd Heav'n that he had liv'd, and that he died.

POPE, Epitaph on Mr. Elijah Fenton.

12
To this sad shrine, whoe'er thou art, draw near;

Here lies the Friend most lov'd, the Son most

dear;

Who ne'er knew Joy but Friendship might divide,

Or gave his father grief but when he died.

POPE, Epitaph on the Hon. Simon Harcourt.

¹ Kneller, by Heav'n, and not a master, taught, Whose Art was Nature, and whose pictures
thought. . . .

Living, great Nature fear'd he might outvie
Her works; and, dying, fears herself may die.

POPE, Epitaph on Sir Godfrey Kneller. Inscribed on his monument in Westminster.
An imitation of an epitaph on Raphael,
Pantheon, Rome.

² She was—but room forbids to tell thee what—
Sum all perfection up, and she was—that.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Epitaph on Lady Luckyn.

³ Warm summer sun, shine friendly here;
Warm western wind, blow kindly here;
Green sod above, rest light, rest light—
Good-night, Annette! Sweetheart, good-night.

ROBERT RICHARDSON, Requiem. (Willow and Wattle, p. 35.)

Warm summer sun Shine kindly here;
Warm southern wind Blow softly here;
Green sod above Lie light, lie light—
Good night, dear heart, Good night, good night.
MARK TWAIN, *Epitaph for His Daughter,
Susy*. Inscribed on her tombstone. A variation of the lines by Robert Richardson.

⁴ Hotten
Rotten
Forgotten

G. A. SALA, Epitaph for John Camden Hotten.

⁵ Traveller, let your step be light,
So that sleep these eyes may close,
For poor Scarron, till to-night,
Ne'er was able e'en to doze.

PAUL SCARRON, Epitaph Written by Himself.

⁶ These are two friends whose lives were undivided;

So let their memory be, now they have glided
Under the grave; let not their bones be parted,
For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.

SHELLEY, Epitaph.

⁷ Stranger, bear this message to the Spartans, that we lie here obedient to their laws. ('Ὁ
ξένε, ἡγγεῖλον Λακεδαιμονίοις ὅτι τῆς καίμαθα, τοῖς κελύουσ ῥήματα νεώμενοι.)

SIMONIDES, Epitaph, on the monument of the Spartans who fell at Thermopylae. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii. No. 249.) The noblest group of words ever uttered by man.—RUSKIN.

Stranger, to Lacedæmon go, and tell
That here, obedient to her words, we fell.

SIMONIDES OF CEIOS, Fragment. (Burgess, tr.)
Go tell the Spartans, thou that passest by,
That here, obedient to their laws, we lie.

SIMONIDES OF CEIOS, Fragment.
Tell Britain, ye who mark this monument,
Faithful to her we fell, and rest content.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, World War Memorial,
Southport, England.

Tell England, ye who pass this monument,
That we who rest here, die content.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, at entrance to Waggon
Hill Cemetery, Ladysmith, South Africa, commemorating British soldiers who fell in the Boer War.

⁸ Here lies one who meant well, tried a little,
failed much.

R. L. STEVENSON, Christmas Sermon.

I, whom Apollo sometimes visited,
Or feigned to visit, now, my day being done,
Do slumber wholly, nor shall know at all
The weariness of changes; nor perceive
Immeasurable sands of centuries
Drink up the blanching ink, or the loud sound
Of generations beat the music down.

R. L. STEVENSON, Epitaph for Himself.

⁹ Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.

This be the verse you grave for me;
*Here he lies where he longed to be;
Home is the sailor, home from sea,
And the hunter home from the hill.*

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Requiem. Written for himself and engraved on his tombstone.

¹⁰ Ubi sæva indignatio ulterius cor lacerare nequit.

(Where fierce indignation can no longer tear my heart.)

JONATHAN SWIFT, Epitaph for Himself. Inscribed on his tomb in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin.

¹¹ Thou third great Canning, stand among our best

And noblest, now thy long day's work hath ceased,

Here silent in our Minster of the West
Who wert the voice of England in the East.

TENNYSON, Epitaph on Stratford Canning,
First Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe.

¹² Here in this place sleeps one whom love
Caused, through great cruelty, to fall;
A little scholar, poor enough,
Whom François Villon men did call.
No scrap of land or garden small
He owned; he gave his goods away,
Table and trestles, baskets—all;
For God's sake say for him this lay.

FRANÇOIS VILLON, His Own Epitaph.

¹³ Under this stone there lieth at rest
A friendly man, a worthy knight;
Whose heart and mind was ever prest
To favour truth, to further right.

THOMAS WYATT, Epitaph on Sir Thomas Grevenour.

¹⁴ In this grave are the bones of the venerable

Bede. (Hac sunt in fossa Bedæ venerabilis ossa.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Bede, Durham Cathedral.

1
O man! whosoever thou art, and whencesoever thou comest, for come I know thou wilt, I am Cyrus, founder of the Persian empire. Envy me not the little earth that covers my body. (Ὁ ἄνθρωπε, ὅστις εἰ καὶ ὅθεν ἦσθις, ὅτι μὲν γὰρ ἦσθις, οἶδα, ἐγὼ Κύρος εἰμὶ ὁ Πέρσας κτισάμενος τὴν ἀρχὴν. μὴ οὖν τῇ ἐλίγῃ μοι ταύτῃ γῆς φθορῆς ἢ τοῦδ' αἵμα περικαλύπτει.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Cyrus. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Sec. 59.)

2
Say, dog, I pray, what guard you in that tomb?

"A dog." His name? "Diogenes." From far? "Sinopé." He who made a tub his home?

"The same. Now, dead, among the stars a star."

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on pillar, surmounted by a dog, raised at Athens to the memory of Diogenes. (Greek Anthology.)

3
Her name was Margaret Lucas, youngest sister to the Lord Lucas of Colchester, a Noble Familie: for all the brothers were valiant and all the sisters virtuous.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, Westminster Abbey.

4
Farewell, vain world, I've had enough of thee, And Values' not what thou Can'st say of me; Thy Smiles I count not, nor thy frowns I fear, My days are past, my head lies quiet here. What faults you saw in me take Care to shun, Look but at home, enough is to be done.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on tombstone of William Harvey, Grasley churchyard, England. (STAPLETON, The Churchyard Scribe, p. 95.)

5
Here lies Tom Hyde;
It's a pity he died;
We had rather
It had been his father;
If it had been his sister
We had not missed her;
If the whole generation,
It had been better for the nation.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Thomas Hyde, son of Edward Hyde, Lord Chancellor of England. (ROBERT BOWERS, Letter to Robert Southwell, 9 July, 1667.) This epitaph and the one which follows are probably versions of a French epigram, "Colas est mort de maladie." (JEAN OMER COMBAULD, Epigrammes. 1658)

Here lies Fred,
Who was alive and is dead;
Had it been his father,
I had much rather;
Had it been his brother,

Still better than another;
Had it been his sister,
No one would have missed her;
Had it been the whole generation,
Still better for the nation:
But since 'tis only Fred
Who was alive and is dead,
There's no more to be said.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of George III. (THACKERAY, Four Georges: George III. Also preserved in Walpole. See Notes and Queries, 3 May, 1902.)

6
In sex a woman, in abilities a man. (Sexu femina, ingenio vir.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Maria Theresa of Austria.

7
Here lies one who was nothing. (Ci-git qui ne fut rien.)

UNKNOWN, Piron's Epitaph. Cited by Voltaire, in La Vanité, as happy and worthy of Piron's tomb.

8
Born in America, in Europe bred,
In Africa travelled, in Asia wed,
Where long he lived and thrived, in London dead;

Much good, some ill he did, so hope all's even,
And that his soul through mercy's gone to heaven.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on tomb of Elihu Yale, founder of Yale University, in the churchyard of Wrexham, North Wales.

III—Epitaphs: "Revised by the Author"

9
The World's a Printing-House, our words,
our thoughts,
Our deeds, are characters of several sizes.
Each Soul is a Compos'tor, of whose faults
The Levites are Correctors; Heaven Revises.

Death is the common Press, from whence being driven,
We're gather'd, Sheet by Sheet, and bound for Heaven.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Fancies. (1635)

The world's a book, writ by th' eternal Art
Of the great Maker; printed in man's heart;
'Tis falsely printed though divinely penn'd,
And all the Errata will appear at th' end.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Fancies. (1635)

10
A living, breathing Bible; tables where Both Covenants at large engraven were.
Gospel and law, in 's heart, had each its column;

His head an index to the sacred volume;
His very name a title-page; and next,
His life a commentary on the text.
O what a monument of glorious worth,
When, in a new edition, he comes forth!

Without errata may we think he'll be,
In leaves and covers of eternity!

BENJAMIN WOODBRIDGE, Epitaph on Himself.

Though born in England, Woodbridge was a member of the first graduating class of Harvard College, 1642. He afterwards returned to England and in 1660 was chaplain to Charles II. His epitaph was quoted in Cotton Mather's Magnalia Christi, and so gained wide circulation.

1
Yet at the resurrection we shall see
A fair edition, and of matchless worth,
Free from erratas, new in heaven set forth.

JOSEPH CAZEN, Lines upon Mr. John Foster.

2
Like a worn out type, he is returned to the Founder in the hope of being recast in a better and more perfect mould.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Peter Gedge. Parish church, Bury St. Edmund's.

He died pied.

Reset and set.

HE NAPS IN CAPS.

DAVID MCCORD, Reminders.

3
He will be weighed again
At the Great Day,
His rigging refitted,
And his timbers repaired,
And with one broadside
Make his adversary
Strike in his turn.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle: Epitaph on Commodore Truncheon. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

4
Then haste, kind Death, in pity to my age,
And clap the Finis to my life's last page.
May Heaven's great Author my fool proof
revise,
Cancel the page in which my error lies,
And raise my form above the ethereal skies. . . .

The stubborn pressman's form I now may scold;

Revised, corrected, finally worked off!

UNKNOWN. (TIMBERLEY, Songs of the Press.)

5
Here lies the remains of James Pady, Brick-maker, in hope that his clay will be remoulded in a workmanlike manner, far superior to his former perishable materials.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of James Pady. Addiscombe churchyard, Devonshire, England.

IV—Epitaphs: Curious

6
To say an angel here interred doth lie
May be thought strange, for angels never die,
Indeed some fell from heaven to hell;
Are lost to rise no more.

This only fell from death to earth,

Not lost, but gone before.

Epitaph on tomb of Mary Angel, Stepney, d.
1693.

Rest, gentle Shade, await thy Master's will;
Then rise unchanged and be an angel still.

Epitaph of Richard Jebb, Chirk Church,
North Wales.

7
As I walked by myself I talked to myself,
And thus myself said to me,
Look to thyself and take care of thyself
For nobody cares for thee.

So I turned to myself, and I answered myself
In the self-same reverie

Look to myself or look not to myself

The self-same thing will it be.

Epitaph of Robert Crytoft, Hornersfield, Suffolk, England. (WILLIAM H. BEAULE, Epitaphs, p. 139.)

8
Here lies Thomas Dudley, that trusty old stud—

A bargain's a bargain, and must be made good.

Epitaph on Governor Dudley, attributed to Governor Belcher.

9
Here lies DuVall; reader, if male thou art,
Look to thy purse; if female, to thy heart.

*Epitaph of the famous highwayman, Claude
DuVall*, in Covent Garden church.

10
Here lie I, Martin Elginbrodde.
Have mercy o' my soul, Lord God,
As I would do were I Lord God,
And ye were Martin Elginbrodde.

One of many variants of an epitaph frequently found in British and American graveyards GEORGE MACDONALD cites it in this form in his novel, David Elginbrod.

If I were Thou and Thou wert I,
I would resign the Deity;
Thou shouldst be God, I would be man—
Is't possible that Love more can?

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, sec. 7,
No. 53. A versification of a passage in St.
Augustine.

Were I thou, Agni, and wert thou I, this aspiration should be fulfilled.

Rig Veda. viii, 19, 25.

11
Here rests one fortune never favored,
He grew no wiser from the past;
But e'er with perseverance labored
And still contended to the last.

JOSEPH EVZ, His Epitaph.

12
Beneath this stone lies Catherine Gray,
Changed to a lifeless lump of clay.
By earth and clay she got her pelf,
And now she's turned to earth herself.
Ye weeping friends let me advise,
Abate your tears and dry your eyes;
For what avails a flood of tears?
Who knows but in a course of years,
In some tall pitcher or brown pan,
She in her shop may be again?

Epitaph, in a Church at Chester, England.

1
Beneath these green trees rising to the skies,
The planter of them, Isaac Greentree, lies;
The time shall come when these green trees shall fall,

And Isaac Greentree rise above them all.

Epitaph of Isaac Greentree, Harrow.

2
Here lies Sir Jenkin Groat, who loved his friend and persuaded his enemy: what his mouth ate, his hand paid for: what his servants robbed, he restored: if a woman gave him pleasure, he supported her in pain: he never forgot his children; and whoso touched his finger, drew after it his whole body.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.
Quoted.

3
Pray for the soul of Gabriel John,
Who died in the year eighteen-hundred and
one

You may if you please, or let it alone,

For it's all one To Gabriel John,

Who died in the year eighteen-hundred and
one.

Here lie the bones of Robert Lowe:
Where he's gone to I don't know.
If to the realms of peace and love,
Farewell to happiness above.
If he's gone to a lower level,
I can't congratulate the devil.

E. KNATCHBULL-HUGESSEN, Epitaph on Robert Lowe.

Here lies Anne Mann; she lived an Old maid and died an old Mann.

Epitaph of Anne Mann, Bath Abbey.

6
Beneath this stone old Abraham lies;
Nobody laughs and nobody cries.
Where he is gone, and how he fares,
Nobody knows, and nobody cares.

ABRAHAM NEWLAND, His Own Epitaph. Newland, who died in 1807, was chief cashier of the Bank of England.

7
Under this sod
And under these trees
Lieth the body of Solomon Pease.

He's not in this hole,

But only his pod;

He shelled out his soul

And went up to his God.

On a tombstone in Ohio. (J. R. KIPPAX, Churchyard Literature, p. 163.)

8
Stranger, pause and shed a tear

For one who leaves no mourners.

D. F. Sapp reposes here:

He would cut corners.

Here lies G. Whilliken's friends, all five.

He took them along when he learned to drive.

LEONARD H. ROSSINI, Epitaphs for the Speed Age.

9
In heart a Lydia, and in tongue a Hannah,
In zeal a Ruth, in wedlock a Susanna,
Prudently simple, providently wary,
To the world a Martha, and to heaven a Mary.

Epitaph on Dame Dorothy Selby (d. 1641),
Ightham Church, near Sevenoaks, England.

10
Here lies who, born a man, a grocer died. (Né homme—mort épicier.)

ALFRED AUSTIN, Golden Age.

11
Man's life is like unto a summer's day
Some break their fast and so away;

Others stay dinner, then depart full fed;

The longest age but sups and goes to bed:

O reader then behold and see:

As we are now, so must you be.

Attributed to JOSEPH HENSHAW, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH. Found with variations in many churches.

12
Here lies a poor woman, who always was tired;

She lived in a house where help was not hired.

Her last words on earth were: "Dear friends,
I am going

Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing;

But everything there is exact to my wishes;
For where they don't eat there's no washing of dishes.

I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,

But, having no voice, I'll be clear of the singing.

Don't mourn for me now; don't mourn for me never—

I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."

UNKNOWN, The Tired Woman's Epitaph.

13
She took the cup of life to sip,

Too bitter 'twas to drain;

She meekly put it from her lip,

And went to sleep again.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, Meole Churchyard.
(Sabrina Corolla, p. 246.)

14
Here lies the mother of children seven,

Four on earth and three in heaven;

The three in heaven preferring rather

To die with mother than live with father.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, in a graveyard at Birmingham, Eng.

15
Bland, Passionate, and Deeply Religious; also she painted in Water Colours, and sent several Pictures to the Exhibition. She was the first cousin to Lady Jones; and of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Lady O'Looney, Pewsey church-yard. (Spectator, London, 21 Dec., 1934, p. 971.)

EQUALITY

² Your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want; that there may be equality.

New Testament: II Corinthians, viii, 14.

³ As a man is equal to the Church and equal to the State, so he is equal to every other man.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

The Spartan principle of "calling that which is just, equal; not that which is equal, just."

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

⁴ There is a little formula, couched in pure Saxon, which you may hear in the corners of streets and in the yard of the dame's school, from very little republicans: "I'm as good as you be," which contains the essence of the Massachusetts Bill of Rights and of the American Declaration of Independence.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Boston.

⁵ Men are made by nature unequal. It is vain, therefore, to treat them as if they were equal.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

That all men are equal is a proposition to which, at ordinary times, no sane individual has ever given his assent.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Proper Studies, p. 23.

I am an aristocrat. I love liberty; I hate equality.

JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE. (BRUCE, Randolph of Roanoke. Vol. ii, p. 203.)

Inequality is as dear to the American heart as liberty itself.

W. D. HOWELLS, Impressions and Experiences: New York Streets, p. 202.

⁶ One place there is—beneath the burial sod, Where all mankind are equalized by death; Another place there is—the Fane of God, Where all are equal who draw living breath.

⁷ We are all born equal, and are distinguished alone by virtue. (Omnes pari sorte nascimur, sola virtute distinguimur.)

UNKNOWN, A Latin proverb.

⁸ When people have to obey other people's orders, equality's out of the question.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act I.

EQUALITY

⁹ We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence. See 975:4.

I leave you, hoping that the lamp of liberty will burn in your bosoms, until there shall no longer be a doubt that all men are created free and equal.

LINCOLN, Speech, Chicago, Ill., 10 July, 1858. Fourscore and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

LINCOLN, Gettysburg Address, 19 Nov., 1863. All men are equal before the natural law. (Quod ad jus naturale attinet, omnes homines aequales sunt.)

¹⁰ Your levellers wish to level down as far as themselves; but they cannot bear levelling up to themselves.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

It is better that some should be unhappy, than that none should be happy, which would be the case in a general state of equality.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

No two men can be half an hour together but one shall acquire an evident superiority over the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, combating the theory that all men are equal. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

¹¹ Equality in society beats inequality, whether the latter be of the British-aristocratic sort or of the domestic-slavery sort.

III.—Error and Truth

An error is the more dangerous in proportion to the degree of truth which it contains.

AMIEL, Journal, 26 Dec., 1852.

The truth is perilous never to the true, Nor knowledge to the wise; and to the fool, And to the false, error and truth alike.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Mountain Sunrise.

Many . . . have too rashly charged the troops of Error, and remain as trophies unto the enemies of Truth.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 6.

Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again;

Th' eternal years of God are hers;

But Error, wounded, writhes in pain,

And dies among his worshippers.

BRYANT, The Battle-Field. St. 9.

Error and mistake are infinite,

But truth has but one way to be: 'th' right.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 114.

A man protesting against error is on the way towards uniting himself with all men that believe in truth.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 4.

Truth is a good dog; but, beware of barking too close to the heels of an error, lest you get your brains kicked out.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 7 June, 1830.

Truth is immortal; error is mortal.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 456.

You conquer error by denying its verity.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 339.

Truth only smells sweet forever, and illusions, however innocent, are deadly as the canker-worm.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies: Calvinism.

Error belongs to libraries, truth to the human mind.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

Truth belongs to the man, error to his age.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

It is much easier to recognize error than to find truth; error is superficial and may be corrected; truth lies hidden in the depths.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

Little by little we subtract
Faith and Fallacy from Fact,
The Illusory from the True,
And starve upon the Residue.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Observation.

Dark Error's other hidden side is truth.

VICTOR HUGO, La Légende des Siècles.

Irrationally held truths may be more harmful than reasoned errors.

T. H. HUXLEY, The Coming of Age of the Origin of Species.

An error cannot be believed sincerely enough to make it a truth.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Great Infidels.

Error cannot be defended but by error. Untruth cannot be shielded but by untruth.

JOHN JEWELL, A Defence of the Apology for the Church of England.

Truth does not do so much good in the world, as the appearance of it does evil. (La vérité ne fait pas tant de bien dans le monde que ses apparences y font de mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 64.

It is one thing to show a man that he is in error, and another to put him in possession of truth.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. iv, ch. 7, sec. 11.

Knowledge being to be had only of visible and certain truth, error is not a fault of our knowledge, but a mistake of our judgement, giving assent to that which is not true.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. iv, ch. 20, sec. 1.

ETERNITY

For Eternity in the sense of eternal life
see Immortality

⁶ Eternity! thou pleasing, dreadful thought!
Through what variety of untried being,
Through what new scenes and changes must we pass!

The wide, th' unbounded prospect lies before me,

But shadows, clouds, and darkness rest upon it.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1, l. 10.

⁷ For, Oh! eternity's too short
To utter all Thy praise.

ADDISON, Hymn: When All Thy Mercies.

Eternity, too short to speak Thy praise!
Or fathom Thy profound of love to man!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 592.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Ruined Temple.

Eternity is in love with the productions of time.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

I saw the starry Tree, Eternity,
Put forth the blossom Time.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Proteus.

⁹ Who can speak of Eternity without a solecism?

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. 1, sec. 11.

¹⁰ But there are wanderers o'er Eternity
Whose bark drives on and on, and anchor'd ne'er shall be.

BYRON, Childs Harold. Canto III, st. 70.

Which makes life itself a lie,
Flattering dust with eternity.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act I, sc. 2.

¹¹ Eternity! How know we but we stand
On the precipitous and crumbling verge
Of Time e'en now, Eternity below?

ABRAHAM COLES, Eternity.

Eternity is not something that begins after you are dead. It is going on all the time. We are in it now.

CHARLOTTE P. GILMAN, The Forerunner.

It is eternity now. I am in the midst of it. It is about me in the sunshine; I am in it, as the butterfly in the light-laden air. Nothing has to come; it is now. Now is eternity; now is the immortal life.

RICHARD JEFFRIES, The Story of My Heart.

Time and eternity were both the same;
A point which life nor death could sever,
A moment standing still for ever.

JAMES MONTOOMERY, Time, A Rhapsody.

²⁰ Eternity is not, as men believe,

Before and after us an endless line.

JOSEPH JOHN MURPHY, Eternity.

What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 117.

Those spacious regions where our fancies roam,

Pain'd by the past, expecting ills to come,
In some dread moment, by the fates assign'd,
Shall pass away, nor leave a rack behind;
And Time's revolving wheels shall lose at last

The speed that spins the future and the past:
And, sovereign of an undisputed throne,
Awful eternity shall reign alone.

PETARCH, The Triumph of Eternity, l. 102.

I am the things that are, and those that are to be, and those that have been. No one ever lifted my skirts: the fruit which I bore was the sun.

PROCLUS, On Plato's Timæus. Inscription in the temple of Neith, at Sais, Egypt.

My refuge is eternity. (Eternité deviens mon asile!)

ETIENNE PIVERT DE SENANCOUR, author of Obermann. The inscription he desired placed on his grave.

If Paris that brief flight allow,

My humble tomb explore;

It bears: "Eternity, be thou

My refuge!" and no more.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Obermann Once More, l. 269.

Gout, hack-work, and Madame Senancour explain the inscription he desired to be placed on his tomb, Eternité deviens mon asile! though perhaps his meaning would have been even more clearly conveyed had he borrowed the subtitle of his youthful work, Eternité, ou le Bonheur dans l'Obscurité.

A senseless bargain.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 175.

The Pilgrim of Eternity, whose fame

Over his living head like Heaven is bent,

An early but enduring monument,

Came, veiling all the lightnings of his song
In sorrow.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 30. Referring to Byron.

Thetis, bright image of eternity.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iii, sc. 1.

Till the sun grows cold,
And the stars are old,

And the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Bedouin Song.

In time there is no present,

In eternity no future,

In eternity no past.

TENNYSON, The "How" and the "Why."

And in those weaker glories spy

Some shadows of eternity.

HENRY VAUGHAN, The Retreat.

Beyond the stars, and all this passing scene,
Where change shall cease, and Time shall be no more.

Those expressions are omitted which can not with propriety be read aloud in the family.

DR. THOMAS BOWDLER, Preface to his Family Shakespeare, 1818.

No profane hand shall dare, for me, to curtail my Chaucer, to Bowdlerize my Shakespeare, or mutilate my Milton.

UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vi, 41.)

This instinct of politeness in speech—euphemism, as it is called—which seeks to hint at an unpleasant or indelicate thing rather than name it directly, has had much to do with making words acquire new meanings and lose old ones.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, Information for the People.

It is good to find modest words to express immodest things.

SOPHOCLES, Edipus Tyrannus, l. 176. The origin, perhaps of "Going West," a euphemism for dying, particularly in vogue during the World War.

When we say of the martyr St. Stephen that "he fell asleep," instead of "he died," the euphemism partakes of the nature of a metaphor, intimating a resemblance between a sleep and the death of such a person.

JAMES BEATTIE, Elements of Moral Science. Sec. 866.

The motto of the Order of the Garter, originated by Edward III in 1349. He was in warm rivalry with Philip of France, and Sir Walter Scott (Essay on Chivalry) says that the motto seems to apply to possible misrepresentations which the King of France might seek to make concerning the order. The garter was probably selected as the badge of the order, because Edward had given his own as a signal of battle at Crecy. There is no historical authority for the tradition that the king picked up the garter of the Countess of Salisbury at a ball, and founded the order with it as a badge, and the French proverb as a motto. Act v, sc. 1, l. 363.

¹¹ An excuse is a lie guarded.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. Sometimes ascribed to Pope.

¹² I do not trouble my spirit to vindicate itself or be understood.

I see that the elementary laws never apologize.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 20.

EXERCISE

¹³ Th' athletic fool, to whom what heaven denied

Of soul, is well compensated in limbs.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. III, l. 206.

¹⁴ Exercise and temperance can preserve something of our early strength even in old age.
(Potest igitur exercitatio et temperantia etiam in senectute conservare aliquid pristini roboris.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 10, sec. 34.

¹⁵ By constant exercise one develops freedom of movement—for virtuous deeds.

DIODEGENES (DIOGENES LAERTIUS. Diogenes. Sec. 70.)

¹⁶ The wise for cure on exercise depend.

DRYDEN, Epistle to John Dryden, l. 94.

¹⁷ Health is the first muse. . . . The Arabs say that "Allah does not count from life the days spent in the chase," that is, those are thrown in. Plato thought "exercise would almost cure a guilty conscience." Sydney Smith said: "You will never break down in a speech on the day when you have walked twelve miles."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims; Inspiration.

¹⁸ If you will form the habit of taking such exercises, you will see what mighty shoulders you develop, what sinews, what vigor.

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. II, ch. 18, sec. 26.

¹⁹ Rosy-complexion'd Health thy steps attends,
And exercise thy lasting youth defends.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. I, l. 73.

²⁰ To cure the mind's wrong bias, Spleen,
Some recommend the bowling green;
Some, hilly walks; all, exercise;
Fling but a stone, the giant dies.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 89.

²¹ Games played with the ball, and others of that nature, are too violent for the body and stamp no character on the mind.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 83.

²² Why do strong arms fatigue themselves with silly dumb-bells? Trenching a vineyard is worthier exercise for men. (Quid pereunt stulto fortes haltere lacerti? Exercet melius vinea fossa viros.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, epig. 49.

² T is the breathing time of day with me.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 181.

³ The rich advantage of good exercise.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 60.

⁴ Health is the vital principle of bliss,
And exercise of health.

THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence. Canto ii, st. 57. See also under HYALINE.

⁵ For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things.

New Testament: 1 Timothy, iv, 8.

EXILE

⁶ Myself I know that exiles feed on hope.
(Οἷός ἐγὼ φερόντας ἄλγας ἀπιδας τροφόμενους.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1668.

⁷ They bore within their breasts the grief
That fame can never heal—

The deep, unutterable woe

Which none save exiles feel.

W. E. AVTOUN, The Island of the Scots, l. 241.

⁸ Adieu, adieu! my native shore
Fades o'er the waters blue;
The night-winds sigh, the breakers roar,
And shrieks the wild sea-mew.

Yon sun that sets upon the sea

We follow in his flight;

Farewell awhile to him and thee,

My native land—Good Night!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 13.

I can't but say it is an awkward sight

To see one's native land receding through

The growing waters; it unmans one quite,

Especially when life is rather new.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 12.

I take a long, last, lingering view;

Adieu! my native land, adieu!

JOHN LOGAN, The Lovers.

⁹ Exile is terrible to those who have, as it were,
a circumscribed habitation; but not to those who look upon the whole globe as one city.

CICERO, Paradoxa. Sec. 2.

¹⁰ A homeless exile, to his country dead.

A wanderer who begs his daily bread.

(Ἄπολας, δούλος, πατρίδος ἀστεργούμενος, πτωχός, πλανήτης, βίον ἔχων τοῖς ἑτέροις.)

DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Diogenes. Sec. 38. Quoting an unknown poet and referring to Diogenes.

¹¹ What exile from his country ever escaped from himself? (Patrie quis exsul se quoque fugit?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 19.

What exile from himself can flee?

To zones, though more and more remote,

Still, still pursues, wher'er I be,

The blight of life—the demon Thought.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 84.

¹² He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

New Testament: John, i, 11.

¹³ The world was all before them, where to choose

Their place of rest, and Providence their guide;

They, hand in hand, with wand'ring steps
and slow,

Through Eden took their solitary way.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 646.

¹⁴ Each voter took an ostrakon (ὄστρονον), or potsherd, wrote on it the name of that citizen whom he wished to remove from the city, and brought it to a place in the agora.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 7, sec. 4.

Hence ostracism.

Ostracism was not a penalty, but a method of satisfying that jealousy which delights to humble the eminent.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Sec. 22.

¹⁵ He suffers exile who denies himself to his country. (Exilium patitur, patriæ qui se denegat.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 182.

¹⁶ He that sweareth Till no man trust him;

He that lieth Till no man believe him;

He that borroweth Till no man will lend him;

Let him go where No man knoweth him.

HUGH RHODES, Book of Nature, 107.

¹⁷ No, my good lord: banish Peto, banish Bar-dolph, banish Poins; but for sweet Jack Fal-staff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump
Jack and banish all the world.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 520.

¹⁸ Thy slow hours shall not determinate

The dateless limit of thy dear exile;

The hopeless word of "never to return"

Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 150.

¹⁹ Have . . . sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,

Eating the bitter bread of banishment.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 19.

For exile hath more terror in his look,

Much more than death.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, 3, l. 19.

They are free men, but I am banished.
And say'st thou yet that exile is not death?
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, 3, 42.

Banished?

O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word "banished"?
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, 3, 46.

¹ We leave our country's bounds and sweet fields. We are outcasts from our country (Nos patriæ finis et dulcia linquimus arva; Nos patriam fugimus.)
VERGIL, Eclagues. No. i, l. 3.

² And for exile they change their homes and pleasant thresholds, and seek a country lying beneath another sun (Exilioque domos et dulcia limina mutant Atque alio patriam quærent sub sole jacentem.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 511.

EXPECTATION

³ I would not anticipate the relish of any happiness, nor feel the weight of any misery, before it actually arrives.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 7. See also under TROUBLE.

⁴ I suppose, to use our national motto, something will turn up.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Popanilla. Ch. 7. (1828)

He was fash and full of faith that "something would turn up"

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. iii, ch. 6.
(1847)

I have known him [Micawber] come home to supper with a flood of tears, and a declaration that nothing was now left but a jail; and go to bed making a calculation of the expense of putting bow-windows to the house, "in case anything turned up," which was his favorite expression.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 11. (1849)

⁵ Indeed it is good, though wronged by my over great expectations, as all things else are.
PEPYS, Diary, 1661.

⁶ Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed.

POPE, Letter to John Gay, 6 Oct., 1727. Pope characterizes the saying as "a ninth beatitude added to the eighth in the Scripture."
(ROSCOE, Life of Pope. Vol. x, p. 184.)

Blessed are those that nought expect,
For they shall not be disappointed.

JOHN WOLCOT, Ode to Pitt, l. 1.

⁷ Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,

EXPERIENCE

Where hope is coldest and despair most fits.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 145.

⁸ The expectancy and rose of the fair state.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 160.

⁹ And now sits Expectation in the air
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, prol. l. 8.

Expectation whirls me round.
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 19.

¹⁰ 'Tis expectation makes a blessing dear;
Heaven were not Heaven, if we knew what it were.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition.

If 'twere not heaven if we knew what it were,
'Twould not be heaven to them that now are
there

EDMUND WALLER, In Answer to Suckling's Verses.

¹¹ Whatever happens beyond expectation should be counted clear gain (Quidquid præter spem eveniat, omne id deputare esse in lucro.)
TERENCE, Phormio, l. 246 (Act ii, sc. 1.)

He hath indeed better bettered expectation.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 16.

¹² 'Tis silence all, And pleasing expectation.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 161.

¹³ We must expect everything and fear everything from time and from men. (Il faut tout attendre et tout craindre du temps et des hommes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 102.

¹⁴ It is a folly to expect men to do all that they may reasonably be expected to do.

RICHARD WHATELY, Apothegms.

EXPERIENCE

I—Experience: Definitions

¹⁵ All experience is an arch, to build upon.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 87.

I am a part of all that I have met;

Yet all experience is an arch where thro'

Gleams that untravell'd world whose margin fades

For ever and for ever when I move.

TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 18.

¹⁶ Experience is the mother of knowledge.

NICHOLAS BRETUN, Works, ii, 8. (1637)

Experience is the mother of all things.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 32. (1578)

Experience is the father of wisdom, and memory
the mother.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1480.

1 To most men, experience is like the stern lights of a ship, which illumine only the track it has passed.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 434.

2 Experience seems to be like the shining of a bright lantern. It suddenly makes clear in the mind what was already there, perhaps, but dim.

WALTER DE LA MARE, Come Hither: Introduction.

3 This gave me that precarious gait
Some call experience

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 136.

4 Experience is the child of Thought, and Thought is the child of Action.

BENJAMIN DISKALE, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 1.

5 Experience joined with common sense,
To mortals is a providence

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 312.

Experience holds the cautious glass,
To shun the breaker, as I pass,
And frequent throws the wary lead,
To see what dangers may be hid

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 820.

6 Experience is the only prophecy of wise men.
LAMARTINE, Speech, at Macon, 1847.

7 Experience is the teacher of fools (Stultorum eventus magister est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxii, sec. 39.

Experience is the mistress of fools.

JOHN LILLY, Euphura, p. 123. (1579)

Experience is the mistress of knaves as well as of fools.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Æsop, 185. (1692)

8 What is experience? A poor little hut constructed from the ruins of the palace of gold and marble called our illusions.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 15.

Our experience is composed rather of illusions lost than of wisdom acquired.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 28.

II—Experience: Apothegms

9 It takes longer to hard-boil a man or a woman than an egg.

F. L. ALLEN, Only Yesterday, p. 118.

10 It is costly wisdom that is bought by experience.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster.

He hazardeth sore that waxeth wise by experience.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster.

11 By far the best proof is experience. (Demonstratio longe optima est experientia.)

BACON, Novum Organum. Bk. i, ch. 70.

12 Oh, who can tell, save he whose heart hath tried?

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 1.

He saw with his own eyes the moon was round,
Was also certain that the earth was square,
Because he had journeyed fifty miles, and found
No sign that it was circular anywhere.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 150.

13 A sadder and a wiser man

He rose the morrow morn.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 624.

14 Though spirit without experience is dangerous, experience, without spirit, is languid and defective.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

15 Only so much do I know, as I have lived.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses: The American Scholar.

16 Experience sometimes is perilous.

JOHN FLOKIO, First Fruits. Fo. 30. (1578)

17 Experience is good, if not bought too dear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1479.

Experience teacheth fools, and he is a great one that will not learn by it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1484.

18 I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. (Arranged by William Wirt, 1818.)

19 The spectacles of experience; through them you will see clearly a second time.

HENRIK ISEN, The League of Youth. Act ii.

20 No man's knowledge here can go beyond his experience.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. ii, ch. i, sec. 19.

Man knows nothing but what he learns from his own experience. (Man weiss doch nichts, als was man selbst erfährt.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. ii, 24.

21 One thorn of experience is worth a whole wilderness of warning.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Shakespeare Once More.

22 Experience is forever sowing the seed of one thing after another. (Semper enim ex aliis alia proserminat usus.)

EXTREMES

⁷ Men are as much blinded by the extremes of misery as by the extremes of poverty.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Member of the National Assembly, 1791.

⁸ Th' extremes of glory and of shame,
Like east and west, became the same:

No Indian Prince has to his palace
More foll'wers than a thief to th' gallows.

That from man's soul looks through his eager eyes.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xiii.

9 Whatever of goodness emanates from the soul, gathers its soft halo in the eyes: and if the heart be a lurking-place of crime, the eyes are sure to betray the secret. A beautiful eye makes silence eloquent, a kind eye makes contradiction assent, an enraged eye makes beauty a deformity.

JOHN SAUNDERS, Stray Leaves of Literature: Physiognomy.

10 His soul seemed hovering in his eyes.

SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 799.

11 Her eyes are homes of silent prayer.

TENNYSO, In Memoriam. Pt. xxxi, st. 1.

V—Eyes: Their Color

12 A gray eye is a sly eye,
And roguish is a brown one;

Turn full upon me thy eye,—

Ah, how its wavelets drown one!

A blue eye is a true eye;

Mysterious is a dark one,

Which flashes like a spark-sun!

A black eye is the best one.

W. R. ALGER, Poetry of the Orient: Mirtsa Schaffy on Eyes.

13 An eye's an eye, and whether black or blue
Is no great matter, so 'tis in request.

'Tis nonsense to dispute about a hue,—

The kindest may be taken as a test.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 3.

14 There are eyes of blue,
There are eyes of brown, too;

There are eyes of every size,

And eyes of every hue.

But I surmise, that if you are wise,

You'll be careful of the maiden with the dreamy eyes.

JAMES WILSON JOHNSON, The Maiden With the Dreamy Eyes. (1901)

Black Eyes

15 With eyes that look'd into the very soul— . . .

Bright—and as black and burning as a coal.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 94.

16 There are eyes half defiant,

Half meek and compliant;

Black eyes, with a wondrous, witching charm

To bring us good or to work us harm.

FREDERICK CARP, Doves' Eyes.

17 And yet the large black eyes, like night,

Have passion and have power;
Within their sleepy depths is light,
For some wild waking hour.
LETTIA LONDON, The Niam's Daughter.

¹ The flash of his keen, black eyes
Forerunning the thunder.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.

² His large sloe-black eyes
Melt in soft blandishments and humble joy.
WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chase. Bk. i.

³ Black brows they say Become some women best, so that there be not

Too much hair there, but in a semicircle
Or a half-moon made with a pen.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 8.

Blue Eyes

⁴ How blue were Ariadne's eyes
When, from the sea's horizon line,
At eve, she raised them to the skies!
My Psyche, bluer far are thine.
AUBREY DE VERE, Psyche.

⁵ When blue eyes, more softly bright,
Diffuse divinely humid light,
We gaze, and see the smiling loves,
And Cytherea's gentle doves.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 222.

⁶ And heaven's soft azure in her eye was seen.
WILLIAM HAYLEY, The Afflicted Father.

O lovely eyes of azure,
Clear as the waters of a brook that run
Limpid and laughing in the summer sun.
LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. i.

⁷ Those blue violets, her eyes. (Die blauen Veilchen der Aeugelein.)
HEINE, Lyrisches Intermezzo. No. 31.

And violets, transform'd to eyes,
Inshrin'd a soul within their blue.
MOORE, Evenings in Greece: Second Evening.

Blue eyes shimmer with angel glances,
Like spring violets over the sea.
CONSTANCE F. WOOLSON, October's Song.

⁸ Like a beauteous woman's large blue eyes
Gone mad through olden songs and poesies.
KEATS, Familiar Verses, l. 53.

⁹ Where did you get your eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.
GEORGE MACDONALD, *At the Back of the North
Wind: Song*. Ch. 33.

¹⁰ Eyes of most unholy blue.
THOMAS MOORE, By That Lake.

¹¹ Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth,

Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn, and all the earth relieveth;
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 482.

Dark Eyes

¹² Lovely in your strength, as is the light
Of a dark eye in women.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 92.

¹³ Maiden! with the meek brown eyes.
LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

¹⁴ Dark eyes are dearer far
Than those that mock the hyacinthine bell.
J. H. REYNOLDS, Sonnet.

¹⁵ And her dark eyes—how eloquent!
Ask what they would, 'twas granted.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 82.

Gray Eyes

¹⁶ Eyes too expressive to be blue,
Too lovely to be grey.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, On the Rhine.
Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
The bluest of things grey.
SWINBURNE, Élise. St. 24.

¹⁷ Mine eyes are grey and bright and quick in turning.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 140.

¹⁸ A noticeable man with large grey eyes.
WORDSWORTH, Stanzas Written in Thomson's "Castle of Indolence."

Green Eyes

¹⁹ The Girl with the Green Eyes.
CLYDE FITCH. Title of play.

²⁰ Her eyes were green as leeks.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, 342.

²¹ The sea-green mirrors of your eyes.
SWINBURNE, Élise, St. 35.

Eyes coloured like a water-flower,
And deeper than the green seas' glass.
SWINBURNE, Élise. St. 36.

²² Do you see any green in my eye?
UNKNOWN. London street saying, c. 1840.

VI—Eyes: Their Brilliancy

²³ There are whole veins of diamonds in thine
eyes,
Might furnish crowns for all the Queens of
earth.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Drawing Room.

Eyes, that displace
The neighbour diamond, and out-face
That sunshine by their own sweet grace.
RICHARD CRASHAW, Wishes to His (Supposed)
Mistress. St. 15.

I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond:
thou hast the right arched beauty of the brow.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 3, l. 58.

1
On woman Nature did bestow two eyes,
Like Hernian's bright lamps, in matchless beauty shining,
Whose beams do soonest captivate the wise
And wary heads, made rare by art's refining.
ROBERT GREENE, Philomela.

2
Her eyes the glow-worm lend thee,
The shooting stars attend thee;
And the elves also,
Whose little eyes glow
Like the sparks of fire, befriend thee.
ROBERT HERRICK, The Night-Piece, to Julia.

3
The light of midnight's starry heaven
Is in those radiant eyes.
LETITIA LONDON, Poetical Portraits. No. 5.

4
And thy deep eyes, amid the gloom,
Shine like jewels in a shroud.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.

5
When did morning ever break,
And find such beaming eyes awake?
THOMAS MOORE, Fly Not Yet.

6
Look out upon the stars, my love,
And shame them with thine eyes.
EDWARD COOTE PINENEY, A Serenade.

Two starry eyes, hung in the gloom of thought.
SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 490.

Those eyes which burn through smiles that fade
in tears,
Like stars half-quenched in mists of silver dew.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1.

Her eyes as stars of twilight fair.
WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of De- light, l. 5.

I dislike an eye that twinkles like a star. Those only are beautiful which, like the planets, have a steady, lambent light,—are luminous, but not sparkling.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

7
The dew that on the violet lies
Mocks the dark lustre of thine eyes.
SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto i, st. 3.

The sparkle of his avarthy eye.
SCOTT, Rekeby. Canto iii, st. 4.

8
Her eyes in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright

That birds would sing and think it were not night.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 20.

And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumined with her eye.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 485.

But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 491.

9
Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister
Than a too-long opened oyster.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Pt. 4.

10
Their eyes seem'd rings from whence the gems were gone. (Parean l'occhiaje anella senza gemme.)
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xxiii, l. 31.

11
Lack-lustre eye.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 21.

A lack-lustre dead-blue eye.
TENNYSON, A Character.

VII—Eye and Ear

12
I sometimes almost think that eyes have ears: . . .

'Tis wonderful how oft the sex have heard
Long dialogues—which pass'd without a word!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 76.

13
The eyes are as ignorant as the ears are knowing. (Καὶ τόσον ὀφθαλμοὶ γὰρ ἀκροῦνται ὡς αὐτοὶ ἀκούουσιν.)

CALLIMACHEUS, Fragmenta Incerta. No. 128.

14
But sooth is said, gone sithen many years
That field hath eyen, and the wood hath ears.
CHAUCER, The Knight's Tale, l. 664. (l. 1522)

For poets have ears, and walls have eyes to see.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Canto
xxii, st. 32.

Fields have eyes and woods have ears.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Walls have tongues and hedges ears.
SWIFT, Pastoral Dialogue, l. 7.

The fields have eyes, the bushes ears,
False birds can fetch the wind.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: To Light a Candle Before the Devil.

Wood has ears, field has sight.
WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages. Vol. i, p.
168. Quoted as of the thirteenth century.

15
The ear is a less trustworthy witness than the eye. (Ἦτα τοῦ ἀκούει ἀνθρώπου ἔστιν ἀπιστότερον ὀφθαλμοῦ.)

HEMOCORUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 3.

We credit most our sight; one eye doth please
Our trust far more than ten ear-witnesses.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Eyes Before the Ears.

A thing when heard, remember, strikes less keen
On the spectator's mind than when 'tis seen;
(Segnius irritant animos demiss per aures;
Quam quæ sunt oculis subjecta fidelibus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 180.

One eye-witness is better than ten hearsay witnesses. Those who see know beyond a doubt.
(Pluris est oculatus testis unus, quam auriti decem; Qui audiunt, audita dicunt: qui vident plane sciunt.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act II, sc. 6, l. 8.

All pleasure has departed from the ear to the vain delights of the wandering eye. (Migravit ab aure voluptas Omnis ad incertos oculos, et gaudia vana.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. II, epis. 1, l. 187.

I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear;

but now mine eye seeth thee.

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 5.

The hearing ear, and the seeing eye.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 12.

The ears can endure an injury better than the eyes. (Injuriam aures quam oculi facilius ferunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententie. No. 295.

A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act IV, sc. 6, l. 153.

Stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot through the ear with a love-song.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 4,
l. 13.

O, learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxiii.

F

FACE

I—Face: Definitions

A man shall see faces, that if you examine them, part by part, you shall find never a good; and yet all together do well.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty.

It is the common wonder of all men how, among so many million of faces, there should be none alike.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. II,
sec. 2.

The human features and countenance, although composed of but some ten parts or little more, are so fashioned that among so many thousands of men there are no two in existence who cannot be distinguished from one another.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, ch. 1.

As from our beginning we run through variety of looks, before we come to consistent and settled faces, so before our end, by sick and languishing alterations, we put on new visages.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 3.

The countenance is the portrait of the mind, the eyes are its informers. (Imago animi vul-tus est, indices oculi.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. III, sec. 59.

Some can form an opinion from the countenance as to how much ability a man possesses. (Quidam ex vultu conjecturam faciunt, quantum quisque animi habere videatur.)

CICERO, Pro L. Murena. Sec. 21. (Adapted.)

Physiognomy is not a guide that has been given us by which to judge of the character of men:
it may only serve us for conjecture.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xii.

There's no art

To find the mind's construction in the face.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act I, sc. 4, l. 11.

There is in every human countenance either a history or a prophecy, which must sadden, or at least soften, every reflecting observer.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Additional Table Talk.

His face, The tablet of unutterable thoughts.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 6.

Contending Passions jostle and displace
And tilt and tourney mostly in the Face: . . .
Unmatched by Art, upon this wondrous scroll
Portrayed are all the secrets of the soul.

ABRAHAM COLES, Man, The Microcosm, l. 26.

Joy to the face its own expression sent,
And gave a likeness in the looks it lent.

CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. II, l. 33.

Your face doth testify what you be inwardly.
LEWIS EVANS, Withals Dictionary Revised. Sig.
L7. (1586)

Man is read in his face.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Deus in Creatura.

What a man is lies as certainly upon his countenance as in his heart.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Weighed and Wanting.
Ch. 11.

In whose gay red-lettered face
We read good living more than grace.

MATTHEW GREENE, The Spleen, l. 330.

¹ Of all the branches of political economy, the human face is perhaps the best criterion of value.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Trifles Light as Air, No. 17.

² The human face is the masterpiece of God. The eyes reveal the soul, the mouth the flesh, the chin stands for purpose, the nose means will; But over and behind all is that fleeting something we call "expression."

ELBERT HUBBARD, Little Journeys: Leonardo.

³ Men's faces are not to be trusted; does not every street abound in gloomy-visaged debauchees? (Frontis nulla fides; quis enim non vicus abundat Tristibus obscenis?)

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. ii, l. 8.

Trust not to outward show!

JUVENAL, Satires, ii, 8. (Gifford, tr.)

⁴ The face, when we are born, is no less tender than any other part of the body: it is use alone hardens it, and makes it more able to endure the cold. And therefore the Scythian philosopher gave a very significant answer to the Athenian, who wondered how he could go naked in frost and snow. "How," said the Scythian, "can you endure your face exposed to the sharp winter?" "My face is used to it," said the Athenian. "Think me all face," replied the Scythian.

JOHN LOCKE, On Education, Sec. 5.

You have your face bare; I am all face. (Vous avez bien la face découverte; moi je suis tout face.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. i, ch. 35. The answer of a naked beggar, when asked if he was cold. Fuller (Worthies of England: Berkshire, p. 82) tells the same story, and it is also given as the reply of an Indian, wearing only a breech-cloth, skating on the river at Quebec.

⁵ A face that had a story to tell. How different faces are in this particular! Some of them speak not. They are books in which not a line is written, save perhaps a date.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 4.

⁶ He [the Deity] gave to man an uplifted face, and bade him contemplate the heavens. (Os homini sublime dedit, cælumque videri.)

OVIN, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 85.

⁷ Alas, how hard it is not to betray a guilty conscience in the face! (Heul quam difficile est crimen non prodere vultu!)

A troubled countenance oft discloses much. (Multa sed trepidus solet Detegere vultus.)

SENeca, Thyestes, l. 330.

⁸ The face of man is the index to joy and mirth, to severity and sadness. (Frons homini lætitiæ et hilaritatis, seceritatis et tristitiæ index.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. ii, sec. 37.

The face is oftentimes a true index of the heart.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 3, epis. 15. (1645)

For what is form and what is face,

But the soul's index or its case?

NATHANIEL COTTON, Visions in Verse: Pleasure.

The face the index of a feeling mind.

CRANSE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. xvi, l. 113.

All is not well within; for still we find

The face the unerring index of the mind.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 18. (Gifford, tr.)

That old saying is untrue, "the face

Is index of the heart."

UNKNOWN, Times Whistle, 23. (c. 1615)

⁹ All men's faces are true, whatsome'er their hands are.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 6, 102.

¹⁰ Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men

May read strange matters.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 63.

I saw Othello's visage in his mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 253.

¹¹ Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,

Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1252.

¹² I trowe that countenance cannot lie

Whose thoughts are legible in the eye.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 2.

There is a garden in her face,
Where roses and white lilies grow;
A heavenly paradise is that place,
Wherein all pleasant fruits do flow.
There cherries grow, which none may buy,
Till "Cherry ripe" themselves do cry.

THOMAS CAMPION, Cherry Ripe. These verses, which appeared originally in An Hour's Recreation in Music, in 1606, without ascription of authorship, were for a time attributed to Richard Alison, who set them to music. Campion claimed them in a note in Fourth Book of Aires, and there is no reason to doubt his authorship.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 2.

There is a garden in her face,
Where roses and white lilies grow;
A heavenly paradise is that place,
Wherein all pleasant fruits do flow.
There cherries grow, which none may buy,
Till "Cherry ripe" themselves do cry.

THOMAS CAMPION, Cherry Ripe. These verses, which appeared originally in An Hour's Recreation in Music, in 1606, without ascription of authorship, were for a time attributed to Richard Alison, who set them to music. Campion claimed them in a note in Fourth Book of Aires, and there is no reason to doubt his authorship.

FAIRIES

5 Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushy glen,
We daren't go a-hunting

Wee folk, good folk,
Trooping all together;
Green jacket, red cap,
And white owl's feather!

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, The Fairies.

6 When the first baby laughed for the first

J. M. BARRIE, Peter Pan. Tinker Bell, the fairy of the play, was desperately ill because she had drunk some poison which Captain Hook, the pirate, had mixed for Peter Pan, and she could be saved only if children still believed in fairies.

¹¹ Faith sees by the ears.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

¹² Love asks faith and faith, firmness.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculis Prudentum.

¹³ Mirror of constant faith, rever'd and mourn'd.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 229. (Pope, tr.)

¹⁴ Guided by faith and matchless fortitude.

MILTON, Sonnets: To Cromwell.

¹⁵ Beautiful Faith, surrendering unto Time.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa, l. 62.

¹⁶ Th' enormous faith of many made for one.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iii, l. 242.

In Faith and Hope the world will disagree.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iii, l. 307.

¹⁷ And cling to Faith beyond the forms of Faith!

TENNYSON, The Ancient Sage, l. 69.

To persecute
Makes a faith hated, and is furthermore
No perfect witness of a perfect faith
In him who persecutes.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 72.

¹⁸ The coalheaver's faith. (Fides carbonaria.)

A mediæval proverb, founded on the anecdote of the coalheaver who said that he believed what the Church believed. When asked what that was, he answered, "What I believe."

III—Faith: Its Power

¹⁹ The cruse of oil and the barrel of meal overflow because the widow has firm faith.

AGATHAN SCHOLASTICUS, On the Widow Who Fed Elijah. (Greek Anthology. Bk. i, epig. 77.)

²⁰ They never fail who light

Their lamp of faith at the unwavering flame

Burnt for the altar service of the Race

Since the beginning.

ELSA BARKER, The Frozen Grail.

²¹ But there's a dome of nobler span,

A temple given

Thy faith, that bigots dare not ban—

Its space is Heaven!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground.

²² Daughter of Faith, awake, arise, illumine

The dread unknown, the chaos of the tomb!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 261.

²³ Yet courage, soul! Nor hold thy strength in vain,

In hope o'ercome the steeps God sets for thee;

For past the Alpine summits of great pain
Lieth thine Italy.

ROSE TERRY COOK, Beyond.

²⁴ We lean on Faith; and some less wise have cried,

"Behold the butterfly, the seed that's cast!"

Vain hopes that fall like flowers before the blast!

R. W. GILDER, Love and Death. St. 2.

²⁵ When false things are brought low,

And swift things have grown slow,

Feigning like froth shall go,

Faith be aye for aye.

THOMAS HARDY, Between Us Now.

²⁶ What here we hope for, we shall once inherit:

By Faith we walk here, not by the Spirit.

ROBERT HERRICK, Faith.

¹ Wake in our breast the living fires,
The holy faith that warmed our sires.
O. W. HOLMES, Army Hymn.
Faith of our fathers—holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death.
FREDERICK WILLIAM FABER, Faith of Our Fathers.
Used by William Jennings Bryan for close of his undelivered speech at the Scopes trial.

² I know that my redeemer liveth.
Old Testament: Job, xix, 25.
I . . . exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.
New Testament: Jude, i, 3.

³ O Faith, that meet'st ten thousand cheats
Yet drops no jot of faith!
RUDYARD KIPLING, To the True Romance

⁴ Our faith triumphant o'er our fears.
LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship.
Ye whose hearts are fresh and simple,
Who have faith in God and nature.
LONGFELLOW, Huswaha: Introduction.

⁵ A perfect faith would lift us absolutely above fear.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Sir Gibbie, Ch. 11.

⁶ O welcome pure-eyed Faith, white-handed Hope,
Thou hovering angel, girt with golden wings!
MILTON, Comus, l. 213.

⁷ I argue not
Against Heav'n's hand or will, nor bate a jot
Of heart or hope, but still bear up and steer Right onward.
MILTON, To Cyriac Skinner.

⁸ Call no faith false which e'er hath brought Relief to any laden life,
Cessation to the pain of thought,
Refreshment mid the dust of strife.
SIR LEWIS MORRIS, Tolerance.

⁹ But give me, Lord, eyes to behold the truth;
A seeing sense that knows the eternal right;
A heart with pity filled, and gentlest ruth;
A manly faith that makes all darkness light.
TEDDOR PARKER, The Higher Good.

¹⁰ Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.
New Testament: Revelation, ii, 10.

The just shall live by faith.
New Testament: Romans, i, 17.

¹¹ I know no deeper doubt to make me mad,
I need no brighter love to keep me pure.
To me the faiths of old are daily bread;
I bless their hope, I bless their will to save.
GEORGE SANTAYANA, What Riches Have You.

¹² Thy path is plain and straight,—that light is given:
Onward in faith,—and leave the rest to Heaven.
ROBERT SOUTHNEY, The Retrospect, l. 175.

¹³ And all but their faith overthrown.
WILLIAM WELTMORE STORY, To Victoris.

¹⁴ Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we, that have not seen thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
Believing where we cannot prove.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction, St. 1.

We have but faith: we cannot know,
For knowledge is of things we see;
And yet we trust it comes from Thee,
A beam in darkness: let it grow.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction, St. 6.

¹⁵ The night is long and pain weighs heavily,
But God will hold His world above despair;
Look to the East, where up the lucid sky
The morning climbs! The day shall yet be fair.
CELIA THAXTER, Faith.

¹⁶ Faith is required of thee, and a sincere life, not loftiness of intellect, nor deepness in the mysteries of God.
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Pt. iv, ch. 18, sec. 3.

¹⁷ The mason asks but a narrow shelf to spring his brick from; man requires only an infinitely narrower one to spring his arch of faith from.
H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 31 Jan., 1852.

¹⁸ Fight the good fight of faith.
New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 12.

I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.
New Testament: II Timothy, iv, 7.

¹⁹ Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees,
And looks to that alone;
Laughs at impossibilities,
And cries it shall be done.
CHARLES WESLEY, Hymns.

²⁰ Through the dark and stormy night
Faith beholds a feeble light
Up the blackness streaking;
Knowing God's own time is best,
In a patient hope I rest
For the full day-breaking!
J. G. WHITTIER, Barclay of Ury, St. 16.

He worshipped as his fathers did,
And kept the faith of childish days,
And, howsoever he strayed or slid,
He loved the good old ways.
WHITTIER, My Namesake.

¹
A bending staff I would not break,
A feeble faith I would not shake,
Nor even rashly pluck away
The error which some truth may stay,
Whose loss might leave the soul without
A shield against the shafts of doubt.
WHITTIER, Questions of Life. St. 1.

²
Of one in whom persuasion and belief
Had ripened into faith, and faith become
A passionate intuition.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1293.

Through love, through hope, and faith's transcendent dower,
We feel that we are greater than we know.
WORDSWORTH, The River Duddon: After-Thought.

³
Faith builds a bridge across the gulf of death,
To break the shock blind nature cannot shun,
And lands thought smoothly on the further shore
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 721.

IV—Faith: Its Weakness

⁴
'Tis well averred,
A scientific faith's absurd.
ROBERT BROWNING, Easter Day. Pt. vi.

⁵
Half our daylight faith's a fable.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, A Dream, l. 5.

Ghost, kelpie, wraith,
And all the trumpery of vulgar faith.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe,
l. 188.

⁶
Morality was held a standing jest,
And faith a necessary fraud at best.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. ii, l. 597.

⁷
Faith is a fine invention
For gentlemen who see;
But microscopes are prudent
In an emergency!
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 56.

⁸
Faith is a kind of parasitic plant,
That grasps the nearest plant with tendrils;
And as the climate and the soil may grant,
So is the sort of tree to which it clings.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 257.

⁹
Faith is often the boast of the man who is too lazy to investigate.
F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

¹⁰
Yes, faith is a goodly anchor;
When skies are sweet as a psalm,
At the bows it lolls so staidly
In its bluff, broad-shouldered calm. . . .
But, after the shipwreck, tell me

What help in its iron thews,
Still true to the broken hawser,
Deep down among sea-weed and ooze?
J. R. LOWELL, After the Burial.

¹¹
Unfaith clamouring to be coined
To faith by proof.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Earth and Man. St. 41.

¹²
How many things served us yesterday for articles of faith, which to-day are fables to us! (Combien de choses nous servoient hier d'articles de foy, qui nous sont fables aujourd'hui!)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 26.

¹³
Faith, fanatic faith, once wedded fast
To some dear falsehood, hugs it to the last.
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

¹⁴
It will profit me nothing, for I have no faith in it. (Elle ne me profitera de rien, car je n'y adjouste point de foi.)
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 42. The monk's remark when he says that he knows a prayer which guarantees immunity from all firearms.

¹⁵
The old faiths light their candles all about,
But burly Truth comes by and puts them out.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Truth.

¹⁶
Men's faiths are wafer-cakes.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 53.

¹⁷
And bloody Faith, the foulest birth of Time.
SHIRLEY, Feelings of a Republican.

Faith, haggard as Fear that had borne her, and dark as the sire that begat her, Despair.
SWINBURNE, An Autumn Vision. Sec. vii, l. 9.

¹⁸
Christian, what of the night?—
I cannot tell; I am blind.
I halt and hearken behind
If haply the hours will go back
And return to the dear dead light,
To the watchfires and stars that of old
Shone where the sky now is black,
Glowed where the earth now is cold.
SWINBURNE, A Watch in the Night. St. 10.

¹⁹
In our windy world
What's up is faith, what's down is heresy.
TENNYSON, Harold. Act i, sc. 1.

V—Faith and Reason

²⁰
Faith is a higher faculty than reason.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem, l. 84.

²¹
Reason is our soul's left hand, Faith her right,
By these we reach divinity.
JOHN DONNE, To the Countess of Bedford.

Reason is the triumph of the intellect, faith of the heart.

JAMES SCHOULER, History of the United States. Vol. ii.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 69.

² The way to see by Faith is to shut the Eye of Reason

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

³ Faith has no merit where human reason supplies the proof. (Fides non habet meritum ubi humana ratio præbet experimentum.)
ST. GREGORY, Homilies. No. 40

⁴ It is not reason makes faith hard, but life
JEAN INGELW, A Pastor's Letter to a Young Poet. Pt. ii, l. 233

⁵ Surely investigation is better than unthinking faith. Surely reason is a better guide than fear.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

⁶ And Wisdom cries, "I know not anything";
And only Faith beholds that all is well.
S. R. LYSAGHT, A Ritual: A Lesson, l. 102.

⁷ They live no longer in the faith of reason.
SCHILLER, I Wallenstein. Act ii, sc. 4.

⁸ It is always right that a man should be able to render a reason for the faith that is within him.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 53.)

⁹ Such lapses from knowledge to faith are perhaps necessary that human heroism may be possible

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 1.

¹⁰ We live by Faith; but Faith is not the slave Of text and legend. Reason's voice and God's, Nature's and Duty's, never are at odds.

WHITTIER, Requirement.

VI—Faith Without Works

¹¹ Faith without works is dead.
New Testament: James, ii, 20.

¹² Faith without works is nothing worth,
As dead as door-nail unless deeds follow.
LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. ii, l. 183.

¹³ If faith produce no works, I see
That faith is not a living tree.
Thus faith and works together grow;
No separate life they e'er can know:
They're soul and body, hand and heart:
What God hath joined, let no man part.
HANNAH MORE, Dan and Jane.

¹⁴ Faith is the root of works. A root that produceth nothing is dead

BISHOP THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety and of Christianity.

VII—Faith: Want of Faith

¹⁵ He that has lost faith, what has he left to live on? (Fidem qui perdit, quo se servat in reliquum?)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 196.

¹⁶ Geology, ethnology, what not?
(Greek endings, each little passing hell
That signifies some faith's about to die.)

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology

And my faith is torn to a thousand scraps,
And my heart feels ice while my words breathe flame

ROBERT BROWNING, The Worst of It.

¹⁷ The disease with which the human mind now labors is want of faith.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

¹⁸ In the affairs of this World. Men are saved, not by Faith, but by the Want of it

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1754.

¹⁹ Much knowledge of things divine escapes us through want of faith (ἄλλα τὸν πλὴν ὁμῶν τα πολλὰ ἀπιστίᾳ διαφργγάνει μὴ γινώσκουσαι.)

HERACLITUS, Fragmentis. No. 116

Th' extremes of too much faith, and none.

THOMAS MOORE, Fables. No. 5, l. 64.

²⁰ Tell faith it's fled the city.

SIR WALTER RALPH, The Lie. (Sometimes attributed to Joshua Sylvester and to Sir John Davies.)

²¹ Play fast and loose with faith.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 242.

He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 75.

²² The saddest thing that can befall a soul
Is when it loses faith in God and woman.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 12.

²³ One by one, like leaves from a tree,
All my faiths have forsaken me.

SARA TEASDALE, Leaves.

²⁴ Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers:
Unfaith in aught is want of faith in all.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 386.

²⁵ What faith is there in the faithless? (Τίς ἔστι πίστις ἀπίστοις.)

THEOCNUS, Sententiae. (SPENSER, Shepherds Calendar: May: Piers' Emblem.)

¹ He hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

New Testament: 1 Timothy, v, 8.

² It may be that we can no longer share
The faith which from his fathers he received;
It may be that our doom is to despair,
Where he with joy believed.

WILLIAM WATSON, To James Bromley: With Wordsworth's Grave.

See also Greatness: Its Penalties. For Fall, a season of the year, see Autumn

³ Who lies upon the ground has no whither to fall. (Qui jacet in terra non habet unde cadat.)

ALAN DE LILLE, Book of Parables, Ch. 2 This line was quoted by Charles I to the French minister, M. de Belléve, when the latter was trying to persuade him to seek safety in flight. The minister replied, "Sire, on peut lui faire tomber la tête."

He that is down needs fear no fall,

He that is low, no pride

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress Pt. II.

I am not now in fortune's power:

He that is down can fall no lower

BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. I, canto 3, l. 877.

A lowly man cannot have a high or heavy fall
(Humilis nec alte cadere nec graviter potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae No. 259.

⁴ Who falls from all he knows of bliss,
Cares little into what abyss.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1091.

⁵ The oak grows silently in the forest a thousand years; only in the thousandth year, when the axeman arrives with his axe, is there heard an echoing through the solitudes, and the oak announces itself when, with far-sounding crash, it falls

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. I, Bk. II, ch. 2.

⁶ He that falls to-day may be up again to-morrow.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 65.

We fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.

ROBERT BROWNING, Asolando: Epilogue.

He falls low that cannot rise again.

GEORGE MERTON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 72. (1683)

Some falls are means the happier to arise.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 403.

⁷ Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, x, 12.

⁸ Fallen, fallen, fallen, fallen,
Fallen from his high estate,

And weltring in his blood;

Deserted at his utmost need.

By those his former bounty fed;

On the bare earth expos'd he lies,

With not a friend to close his eyes.

DAVIDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 77.

So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not

One friend to take his fortune by the arm,

And go along with him

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act IV, sc. 2, 6.

⁹

For a man

Low-fallen from high estate more sharply feels

The strangeness of it than the long unblest.

("Οταν δ' ἀνὴρ

κράτη κακῶς ἐβηλός, εἰς ἀγῆαν

πίπτει κακίῳ τοῦ πάλας δεδαίμονος.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 417. (Way, tr.)

Whoever has fallen from his former high estate is in his calamity the scorn even of the base
(Quicumque amittit dignitatem pristinam Ignavis etiam pocus est in casu gravi.)

PICARDUS, Fables Bk. I, fab. 21, l. 1.

¹⁰

Every slip is not a fall.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

¹¹

He that is fallen cannot help him that is down.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹²

It falls, all hope falls, and the fortune of our name
(Occidit, occidit Spes omnis et fortuna nostri Nominis.)

HORACE, Odes Bk. IV, ode 4, l. 70.

¹³

How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning!

Old Testament: Isaiah, xiv, 12.

From morn

To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve,

A summer's day; and with the setting sun

Dropt from the zenith like a falling star.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. I, l. 742.

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,

Never to hope again

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act III, sc. 2, l. 371.

¹⁴

Who falls for love of God shall rise a star.

BEN JONSON, Underwoods: To Master Colby.

¹⁵

The vulgar falls and none laments his fate;

Sorrow has hardly leisure for the great.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. IV. (Rowe, tr.)

¹⁶

And great was the fall of it.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 27.

¹⁷

That water which falls from some Alpine height is dashed, broken, and will murmur loudly, but grows limpid by its fall.

(Quell' onda, che ruina
Dalla pendice alpina,
Balza, si frange, e mormora
Ma limpida si fa.)

METASTASIO, Alcide al Bivio.

1 Awake, arise, or be for ever fall'n.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 330.

2 I made him just and right,
Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.
Such I created all th' ethereal Powers
And Spirits, both them who stood, and them who fall'd;
Freely they stood who stood, and fell who fell.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 98.

3 Everything that shakes does not fall. (Tout ce qui bransle ne tombe pas.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

4 Who falls in honourable strife,
Surrenders nothing but his life;
Who basely triumphs casts away
The glory of the well-won day.

MONTGOMERY, Thoughts on Wheels. No. 1.

5 Low though I am, I have not fallen so low that I am beneath you too, for beneath you there can be nothing. (Non adeo cecidi, quamvis abjectus, ut infra Te quoque sim, inferius quo nihil esse potest.)
OVID, Tristis. Bk. v, eleg. 8, l. 1.

6 As he rose like a rocket, he fell like a stick.
THOMAS PAINE, Letter to His Addressers.
Referring to Edmund Burke. See also under DICKENS.

I stood beside the grave of him who blazed
The comet of a season.
BYRON, Churchill's Grave, l. 1.

7 Fain would I climb, yet fear I to fall.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, scratched with a diamond on a window-pane, either in the presence of Queen Elizabeth or where she would be certain to see it.

If thy heart fails thee, do not climb at all.
QUEEN ELIZABETH, written by her under Raleigh's line. (FULLER, Worthies of England, Vol. i, p. 19.) Raleigh's line is usually given, "Fain would I climb, but that I fear to fall." (SCOTT, Kennilworth, ch. 17.)

Fain would I, but I dare not; I dare, and yet I may not;

I may, although I care not for pleasure when I play not.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Fain Would I. Written in later life than the line on the window-pane.

8 Hasty climbers have sudden falls.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 All things that rise will fall. (Omniaque orta occidunt.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 2, sec. 3.

One may sooner fall than rise.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 How are the mighty fallen!
Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 19.

How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle!

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 25.

Prostrate on earth the bleeding warrior lies,
And Isr'el's beauty on the mountains dies.
How are the mighty fallen!

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Lamentation of David over Saul and Jonathan.

11 O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 47.

I shall fall,
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 225.

Press not a falling man too far!
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 333.

12 Great Caesar fell.
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 193.

I see thy glory like a shooting star
Fall to the base earth from the firmament.
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sec. 4, l. 19.

13 "Yea," quoth he, "dost thou fall upon thy face?"

Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit."
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 41.

14 What though success will not attend on all?
Who bravely dares, must sometimes risk a fall.
SMOLLETT, Advice, l. 207.

15 Woe to my wretched self! from what a height of hope have I fallen.
(Vae misero mihi! quanta de spe decidi.)
TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos. Act i, sc. 3,
l. 9.

Alas, from what high hope to what relapse
Unlook'd for, are we fall'n!

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 30.

16 A great villain, a great fall. (De grand villain grande chute.)

J. DE LA VERGNE, Les Proverbes Communs.

¹ How many are raised to high posts by the instigation of the devil, that their fall may be more dismal!

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety.

² Who, taking counsel of unbending truth,
By one example hath set forth to all
How they with dignity may stand; or fall,
If fall they must.

³ RENOWN is the mother of virtues. (Ἡ δόξα ἀρετῶν μήτέρα εἶναι.)

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 48.)

⁴ Fame is the thirst of youth.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iii, st. 112.

⁵ Fame, we may understand, is no sure test of merit, but only a probability of such: it is an accident, not a property of a man.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe.

Money will buy money's worth, but the thing men call fame, what is it?

CARLYLE, Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

⁶ Fame Is nothing but an empty name.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 230.

What is fame? an empty bubble.

JAMES GRAINGER, Ode to Solitude.

⁷ Fame is but wind.

THOMAS CORVATE, Crudities. Bk. i, l. 60. (1611)

The splendors of earthly fame are but a wind,
That in the same direction lasts not long.

(Non è il mendant romore altro che un fiato
Di vento, che or vien quindi ed or vien quindi,
E muta nome, perché muta lato.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xi, l. 100.

Fame they tell you is air; but without air there is no life for any; without fame there is none for the best.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: The Ciceros.

⁸ Fame is a fickle food
Upon a shifting plate.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 4.

Fame is a food that dead men eat,—

I have no stomach for such meat.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Fame Is a Food.

⁹ Fame is a magnifying glass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Fame is the echo of actions, resounding them to the world, save that the echo repeats only the last part, but fame relates all, and often more than all.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: Of Fame.

¹⁰ What is this fame, thus crowded round with slaves?

The breath of fools, the bait of flattering knaves.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Imitation of Second Chorus in Act ii of Seneca's Thyestes.

¹¹ Fame is the inheritance not of the dead, but of the living. It is we who look back with lofty pride to the great names of antiquity, who drink of that flood of glory as of a river, and refresh our wings in it for future flight.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 389.

Fame is not popularity. . . . It is the spirit of a man surviving himself in the minds and thoughts of other men.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Poets, p. 263.

¹² If that thy fame with ev'ry toy be pos'd,

'Tis a thin web, which poisonous fancies make;

But the great soldier's honour was compos'd
Of thicker stuff, which would endure a shake

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 38.

¹³ Ah, pensive scholar, what is fame?

A fitful tongue of leaping flame;

A giddy whirlwind's fickle gust,

That lifts a pinch of mortal dust;

A few swift years, and who can show

Which dust was Bill, and which was Joe?

O. W. HOLMES, Bill and Joe. St. 7.

¹⁴ And what after all is everlasting fame? Altogether vanity. (Τί δὲ καὶ ἔστιν ὄλως τὸ ἀίμνηστον; ὅλον κενόν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. 4, sec. 33.

¹⁵ Fame lulls the fever of the soul, and makes Us feel that we have grasp'd an immortality.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Inc. Sc. 4, l. 273.

¹⁶ Read but o'er the stories

Of men most fam'd for courage or for counsel,

And you shall find that the desire of glory

(That last infirmity of noble minds)

Was the last frailty wise men e'er put off.

JOHN FLETCHER (?), Sir John van Olden Barnavech. Act i, sc. 1. First acted in 1619, then lost, and not re-discovered until 1833 among some old manuscripts in the British Museum.

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise (That last infirmity of noble mind)

To scorn delights, and live laborious days

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 70. (1637) "The most astonishing coincidence in the whole range of literature," Swinburne called the lines in parenthesis.

¹ Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 78.

² What's fame? a fancied life in others' breath;
A thing beyond us, ev'n before our death.
POPE, Essay on Man, Epis. iv, l. 237.

And what is Fame? the meanest have their day,
The greatest can but blaze, and pass away.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, l. 6, 46.

³ Fame's but a hollow echo.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, A Farewell to the Vanities of the World.

⁴ Fame is a bugle call
Blown past a crumbling wall.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Tops.

⁵ Fame is something which must be won; honor only something which must not be lost.
SCHOPENHAUER, Aphorisms on the Wisdom of Life.

⁶ Fame is the shadow of virtue. It will attend virtue even against her will. (Gloria umbra virtutis est, etiam invitam comitabitur.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius, Epis. lxxix, 13.
Renown is the praise rendered to a good man by good men. (Claritas laus est a bonis bono red-dita.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius, Epis. cli, sec. 9.
Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds.
SOCRATES.

⁷ There is this difference between renown and glory—the latter depends upon the judgments of the many, the former on the judgments of good men.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius, Epis. cli, sec. 18.
Fame has no necessary conjunction with praise:
it may exist without the breath of a word: it is a recognition of excellence which must be felt but need not be spoken. Even the envious must feel it, and hate it in silence.

MRS. ANNA JAMESON, Memoirs and Essays: Washington Allston.

Reputation being essentially contemporaneous, is always at the mercy of the Envious and the Ignorant. But Fame, whose very birth is possithumous, and which is only known to exist by the echo of its footsteps through congenial minds, can neither be increased nor diminished by any degree of wilfulness.

MRS. ANNA JAMESON, Memoirs and Essays: Washington Allston.

⁸ Fame is love disguised.
SHELLEY, An Exhortation.

⁹ And what is fame in life but half-disfame,
And counterchanged with darkness?
TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 463.

¹⁰ Fame is but an inscription on a grave, and glory the melancholy blazon on a coffin-lid.
ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays.

Fame is but a slow decay—
Even this shall pass away.

THEODORE TILTON, Even This Shall Pass Away.

¹¹ Fame is a public mistress, none enjoys,
But, more or less, his rival's peace destroys.
YOUNG, Epistles to Pope, Epis. i, l. 25.

Fame is the shade of immortality,
And in itself a shadow. Soon as caught,
Contemn'd; it shrinks to nothing in the grasp.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night vii, l. 365.

II—Fame: Apophthegms

¹² Distinction is the consequence, never the object, of a great mind.

WASHINGTON ALLSTON, Aphorisms Written on Walls of His Studio.

¹³ Fame is like a river, that beareth up things light and swoln, and drowns things weighty and solid

BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects.

Fame, like water, bears up the lighter things,
And lets the weighty sink.

CALDERON, Adventures of Five Hours, Act ii.

¹⁴ Herostratus lives that burnt the temple of Diana; he is almost lost that built it.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia, Ch. 5.

The aspiring youth that fired the Ephesian dome
Outlives, in fame, the pious fool that rais'd it.
COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (alt.), Act iii, sc. 1.

¹⁵ I awoke one morning and found myself famous.

BYRON, (MOORE, Memoranda from Life, Ch. 14.) Said after the publication of the first two cantos of Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, March, 1812.

¹⁶ Only to myself do I owe my fame. (Je ne dois qu'à moi seul toute ma renommée.)

CORNELLE, L'Excuse à Ariste.

¹⁷ Fame, like man, will grow white as it grows old.

ABRAHAM COWLEY. (SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Cowley.)

Thy fame, like men, the older it doth grow,
Will of itself turn whiter too.

THOMAS SPRAT, To the Happy Memory of the Late Lord Protector, l. 5.

¹⁸ Fame finds never tomb t' inclose it in.
SAMUEL DANIEL, Complaint of Rosamond, St. 1.

¹⁹ Unnam'd as yet, at least unknown to fame.
DRYDEN, Britannia Rediviva, l. 192.

²⁰ Fame is proof that the people are gullible.
EMERSON.

1 Fame sometimes hath created something of nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Fame.

Fiction may deck the truth with spurious rays, And round the hero cast a borrow'd blaze.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 471.

There are names written in her immortal scroll at which Fame blushes.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, No. 53.

How partial is the voice of Fame!

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epigrams: Partial Fame.

2 There are many ways to fame.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

3 Fame grows like a tree with hidden life. (Crescit occulto velut arbor avo Fama.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. i, ode 12, l. 45.

4 Fame is delightful, but as collateral it does not rank high.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

5 Sir, if they should cease to talk of me I must starve.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boswell, Life, 1784.)

6 Contempt of fame begets contempt of virtue.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus, Act i, sc. 2.

7 All is ephemeral,—fame as well as the famous. (Πάν ἐφήμερον, καὶ τὸ μνησθένον καὶ τὸ μνησθονεύμενον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations, Bk. iv, sec. 35. Literally, "The rememberer, as well as the remembered."

The longest wave is quickly lost in the sea.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

8 Regardless whether good or evil fame.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. xii, l. 47.

9 I have made noise enough in the world already.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, (O'Meara, Napoleon in Exile, 1816.) Echoing Danton.

10 All crowd, who foremost shall be damn'd to fame.

POPE, The Dunciad, Bk. iii, l. 153.

Damn'd to everlasting fame.

POPE, Essay on Man, Epist. iv, l. 284.

May see thee now, though late, redeem thy name,

And glorify what else is damn'd to fame.

RICHARD SAVAGE, Character of the Rev. James Foster, l. 43.

11 Let humble Allen, with an awkward shame, Do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame.

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires, Dial. i, l. 135.

The reference is to Ralph Allen, who in 1720 contracted with the British Postoffice to improve the system of "cross-posts."

12 Fame, impatient of extremes, decays Not more by envy than excess of praise.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 43.

13 What is the fame of men compared to their happiness?

WALFOLE, Letter to Horace Mann, 3 Oct., 1762.

III—FAME: Love of Fame

14 Passion for fame; a passion which is the instinct of all great souls.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on American Taxation.

15 Folly loves the martyrdom of fame.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 68.

16 Men the most infamous are fond of fame, And those who fear not guilt, yet start at shame.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 233.

Man from his sphere eccentric starts astray; All hunt for fame, but most mistake the way.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 587.

17 Upon the very books in which philosophers bid us scorn ambition, they inscribe their names. They seek publicity for themselves on the very page where they pour contempt upon publicity. (Ipsi illi philosophi etiam illis libellis, quos de contemnenda gloria scribunt, nomen suum inscribunt: in eo ipso, in quo prædicationem nobilitatemque despiciunt, prædicari de se ac nominari volunt.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta, Ch. 11, sec. 26.

Though they [philosophers] write contemptu gloria, yet as Hieron observes, they will put their names to their books.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, Pt. i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 14.

Even those who write against fame wish for the fame of having written well, and those who read their works desire the fame of having read them.

PASCAL, Pensées, Sec. ii, No. 150.

The hater of property and of government takes care to have his warranty-deed recorded, and the book written against Fame and learning has the author's name on the title-page.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1857.

18 Who fears not to do ill yet fears the name, And free from conscience, is a slave to fame.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill, l. 129.

19 The love of fame is almost another name for the love of excellence.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table, No. 25.

20 So much the greater is the thirst for fame than for virtue. For who indeed would embrace virtue if you removed its rewards? (Tanto major famæ sitis est, quam Virtutis.)

Quis enim virtutem amplectitur ipsam,
Præmia si tollas?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 140.

1 My quest is for everlasting fame, that I may be celebrated forever throughout the whole earth. (Mihi fama perennis Queritur, in toto semper ut orbe canar.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 15, l. 7.

The desire of fame delights me, and has grown with my renown. (Nam juvat, et studium famæ mihi crevit honore.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 393.

2 And boasting youth, and narrative old age;
Their pleas were different, their request the same;

For good and bad alike are fond of Fame.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 291.

3 Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 2.

4 Love of fame is the last weakness which even the wise resign. (Etiam sapientibus cupido gloriæ novissima exulit.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 6.

Though the desire of fame be the last weakness
Wise men put off.

MASSINGER, The Very Woman. Act iii, sc. 4.

Of the unreasoning humors of mankind, it seems that fame is the one which even philosophers have rid themselves of last and with most reluctance.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 41.

5 Proud of his prize, but prouder of his fame.
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 619. (Dryden, tr.)

And fired his soul with love of future fame.
(Incenditque animum famæ venientis amore.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 889.

6 I must essay a path whereby I, too, may rise from earth and fly victorious on the lips of men. (Temptanda via est, qua me quoque possim Tollere humo victorque virum volitare per ora.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 8.

7 What rage for fame attends both great and small!

Better be d—n'd than mentioned not at all.
JOHN WOLCOT, To the Royal Academicians.

I am no cormorant of fame, d'y'e see;

I ask not all the laurel, but a sprig.

JOHN WOLCOT, Epistle to the Reviewers.

8 Others are fond of Fame, but Fame of you.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 10.

IV—FAME: How It Is Won

9 And what at first had been an idle joy,

Became a sober serious work for fame.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Hugh Sutherland's Pansies

10 Mortals, who sought and found, by dangerous roads,

A path to perpetuity of fame.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 103.

The first in danger, as the first in fame.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 637. (Pope, tr.)

If it is for fame that men do brave actions, they are only silly fellows after all.

R. L. STEVENSON, The English Admirals.

11 My advice to a young man seeking deathless fame would be to espouse an unpopular cause and devote his life to it.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Wendell Phillips.

12 For not on downy plumes, nor under shade
Of canopy reposing, fame is won.

(Chè, seggendo in piuma,

In fama non si vien, nè sotto coltre.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxiv, l. 46. (Cary, tr.)

Sloth views the towers of fame with envious
eyes,

Desirous still, still impotent to rise.

WILLIAM STENSTONE, The Judgement of Hercules, l. 436.

13 Fame then was cheap, and the first comer
sped;

And they have kept it since, by being dead.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada: Epilogue.

14 Nothing is less selfish than a desire of fame, since its only sure acquisition is by labouring for others.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Letter, 1853.

No true and permanent Fame can be founded except in labors which promote the happiness of mankind.

CHARLES SUMNER, Fame and Glory. Address at Amherst, 11 Aug., 1847.

15 Fame comes only when deserved, and then is as inevitable as destiny, for it is destiny.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 8.

Building nests in Fame's great temple, as in spouts the swallows build.

LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg. St. 16.

16 Thus fame shall be achiev'd, renown on earth,
And what most merits fame in silence hid.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 694.

17 Nor Fame I slight, nor for her favours call;
She comes unlook'd for, if she comes at all.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 513.

Fame usually comes to those who are thinking about something else,—very rarely to those who say to themselves, "Go to, now, let us be a celebrated individual!" The struggle for fame, as such, commonly ends in notoriety;—that ladder is easy to climb, but it leads to the pillory which is crowded with fools who could not hold their tongues and rogues who could not hide their tricks.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 12.

1 True fame will never be in Chance's gift.
(Non erunt honores unquam fortuiti muneris.)

SOLON. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententia, l. 31.)

Renown's all hit or miss;
There's fortune even in fame.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 33.

2 Fame's loudest trump upon the ear of Time
Leaves but a dying echo; they alone
Are held in everlasting memory
Whose deeds partake of heaven.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Verses Spoken at Oxford upon the Installation of Lord Grenville, l. 92.

Wouldst thou be fam'd? have those high deeds
in view,
Brave men would act, though scandal should ensue.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vii, l. 181.

3 His very depreciation of fame increased his fame. (Ipsa dissimulatione famæ faman auxit.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 18.

V—Fame: Its Rewards

4 Let us now praise famous men.
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xlv, 1.

"Let us now praise famous men"—
Men of little showing—
For their work continueth,
And their work continueth,
Broad and deep continueth,
Greater than their knowing!

KIPLING, A School Song.

8 Sure of the Fortieth spare Arm-chair
When gout and glory seat me there.

ROBERT BROWNING, Dis Aster Visum. St. 12.

6 O Fame!—if I e'er took delight in thy praises,
'Twas less for the sake of thy high-sounding phrases,
Than to see the bright eyes of the dear one discover
She thought that I was not unworthy to love
her.

BYRON, Stanzas Written on the Road Between Florence and Pisa.

7 Humanely glorious! Men will weep for him
When many a guilty martial fame is dim.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lines in a Blank Leaf of La Perouse's Voyages, l. 19.

Lights of the world and demi-gods of Fame.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. II, l. 316.

8 How shall I then begin, or where conclude,
To draw a fame so truly circular?
DRYDEN, On the Death of Cromwell. St. 5.

9 Short is my date, but deathless my renown.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 535. (Pope, tr.)

Earth sounds my wisdom, and high Heav'n my fame.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ix, l. 20. (Pope, tr.)

10 Oh, 'tis all of thy dear grace
That every finger points me out in going

Lyrist of the Roman race;

Breath, power to charm (if mine) are they bestowing.

(Totum muneris hoc tui est,

Quod monstror digito prætereuntium

Romanæ fidem lyrae.

Quod spiro et placeo, si placeo, tuum est.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 3, l. 21.

It's a fine thing to have a finger pointed at one, and to hear people say, "That's the man," (At pulchrum est digito monstrari et dicier, "Hic est.")

PENSIUS, Satires. Sat. I, l. 1. 28.

11 The temple of fame is the shortest passage to riches and preferment.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 59.

12 His fame was great in all the land.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: The Student's Tale: Emma and Eginhard, l. 50.

13 Fame has only the span of a day, they say.
But to live in the hearts of the people—that is worth something.

OWDA, Wisdom, Wit, and Pathos: Signs.

Sleep on, O brave-hearted, O wise man that kindled the flame—

To live in mankind is far more than to live in a name.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Eagle That Is Forgotten.

14 The lofty lucre of renown.

PINDAR, Isthmian Odes. Ode I, l. 62. (Moore, tr.)

15 If you will observe, it does n't take
A man of giant mould to make
A giant shadow on the wall;
And he who in our daily sight
Seems but a figure mean and small,
Outlined in Fame's illusive light,
May stalk, a silhouette sublime,
Across the canvas of his time.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Authors' Night. St. 17.

16 For him—who ascended Fame's ladder so high:

From the round at the top he has stepped to
the sky!

N. P. WILLS, The Death of Harrison.

VI—Fame: Its Penalties

See also Greatness: Its Penalties

1 Were not this desire of fame very strong,
the difficulty of obtaining it, and the danger of losing it when obtained, would be sufficient to deter a man from so vain a pursuit.

ADAMSON, The Spectator, No. 255.

2 Fame always brings loneliness. Success is as ice cold and lonely as the north pole.

VICKI BAUM, Grand Hotel, p. 134.

3 Ah! who can tell how hard it is to climb
The steep where Fame's proud temple shines afar;

Ah! who can tell how many a soul sublime
Has felt the influence of malignant star,
And waged with Fortune an eternal war;
Check'd by the scoff of Pride, by Envy's frown,
And Poverty's unconquerable bar.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel, Bk. I, l. 1.

4 The best-concerted schemes men lay for
fame,

Die fast away: only themselves die faster.
The far-fam'd sculptor, and the laurel'd bard,
Those bold insurers of deathless fame,
Supply their little feeble aids in vain.

ROBERT BLAKE, The Grave, l. 185.

5 The strongest poison ever known
Came from Cæsar's laurel crown.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

6 Could any sober man be proud to hold
A lease of common talk, or die consoled
For thinking that on lips of fools to come
He'll live with Pontius Pilate and Tom Thumb?

ROBERT BRIDGES, Le Gloire de Voltaire.

7 Happy is the man who hath never known what it is to taste of fame—to have it is a purgatory, to want it is a Hell!

BUTLER-LYTTON, Last of the Barons, Bk. v,
ch. I.

8 Persecution dragged them into fame
And chased them up to heaven.

COWPER, The Task, Bk. v, l. 730.

The village sleeps, a name unknown, till men
With life-blood stain its soil, and pay the due
That lifts it to eternal fame,—for then
'Tis grown a Gettysburg or Waterloo.

M. A. DEWOLFE HOWE, Distinction.

9 And all the fair examples of renown
Out of distress and misery are grown.

SAMUEL DANIEL, On the Earl of Southampton.

10 Your fame is like the summer flower
Which blooms and dies in one short hour;

The sunny warmth which brings it forth
Soon slays with parching power.

(La vostra nominanza è color d'erba,
Che viene e va; e quei la discolora
Per cui ell' esce della terra acerba.)

DANTE, Purgatorio, Canto xi, l. 115.

11 He pays too high a price
For knowledge and for fame

Who sells his sinews to be wise,
His teeth and bones to buy a name,
And crawls through life a paralytic
To earn the praise of bard and critic.

EMERSON, Fame.

12 All fame is dangerous; good bringeth envy, bad shame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

13 How patient Nature smiles at Fame!

The weeds, that strewed the victor's way,
Feet on his dust to shroud his name,
Green where his proudest towers decay.

O. W. HOLMES, A Roman Aqueduct.

14 Our fruitless labors mourn,
And only rich in barren fame return.

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. x, l. 46. (Pope, tr.)

15 And early though the laurel grows
It withers quicker than the rose. . . .
Runners whom renown outran
And the name died before the man.

A. E. HOUSMAN, To an Athlete Dying Young.

16 It is a wretched thing to lean on the fame of others. (Miserum est aliorum incumbere famae.)

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. viii, l. 76.

17 Ten thousand flakes about my windows blow,
Some falling and some rising, but all snow.
Scribblers and statesmen! are ye not just so?

W. S. LANDOR, Fame.

18 Fame, if not double fac'd, is double mouth'd,
And with contrary blast proclaims most deeds;

On both his wings, one black, the other white,
Bears greatest names in his wild airy flight.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 971.

19 I court no renown, nor that fame which usually sets the spur to talent. (Nulla mihi captatur gloria, quaeque Ingeniis stimulos subdere fama solet.)

OWEN, Tristia, Bk. v, eleg. 1, l. 75.

20 Who grasp'd at earthly fame,
Grasped wind: nay, worse, a serpent grasped that through
His hand slid smoothly, and was gone; but left

A sting behind which wrought him endless pain.

ROBERT POLLOCK, Course of Time. Bk. iii, l. 533.

1 All fame is foreign but of true desert,
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart:

One self-approving hour whole years outweighs

Of stupid starers, and of loud buzzes:
And more true joy Marcellus exiled feels,
Than Cæsar with a senate at his heels.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 253.

2 How vain that second life in others' breath,
Th' estate which wits inherit after death!
Ease, health, and life, for this they must resign,

(Unsure the tenure, but how vast the fine!)
POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 505.

Then teach me, Heav'n! to scorn the guilty bays;
Drive from my breast that wretched lust of

praise;

Unblemish'd let me live, or die unknown:

Oh, grant an honest Fame, or grant me none!

POPE, The Temple of Fame. Last lines.

3 The renown which riches or beauty confer is fleeting and frail; mental excellence is a splendid and lasting possession. (Divitiarum et formæ gloria fluxa atque fragilis est, virtus clara æternæque habetur.)

SALLUST, Cataline. Sec. 1.

4 Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;

But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.

SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine.

5 The loud impertinence of fame.

WILLIAM WATSON, Laleham Churchyard. St. 3.

6 And what so foolish as the chance of Fame?
How vain the prize! how impotent our aim!
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 283.

VII—Fame and Death

7 The waters were his winding-sheet, the sea was made his tomb,
Yet for his fame the Ocean sea was not sufficient room.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Epitaph on Hawkins.

8 There's many a crown for who can reach.
Ten lines, a statesman's life in each!
The flag stuck on a heap of bones,
A soldier's doing! what atones?

They scratch his name on the Abbey-stones.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Last Ride Together.

9 What is the end of Fame? 'tis but to fill
A certain portion of uncertain paper:
Some liken it to climbing up a hill,

Whose summit, like all hills, is lost in vapour:

For this men write, speak, preach, and heroes kill,

And bards burn what they call their "mid-night taper,"

To have, when the original is dust,

A name, a wretched picture, and worse bust.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 218.

We toil for fame,

We live on crusts,

We make a name,

Then we are busts.

L. H. ROBBINS, Lines, intended for delivery at the unveiling of the memorials to Monroe, Maury, Whitman and Whistler at the Hall of Fame.

10 Fame is an undertaker that pays but little attention to the living, but bedizens the dead, furnishes out their funerals, and follows them to the grave.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. 1.

11 The temple of fame stands upon the grave:
the flame that burns upon its altars is kindled from the ashes of dead men.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Poets. Lecture 8.

12 The life which others pay, let us bestow,
And give to Fame what we to Nature owe.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xii, l. 393. (Pope, tr.)

The rest were vulgar deaths, unknown to fame.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 394. (Pope, tr.)

13 Fame is a revenue payable only to our ghosts; and to deny ourselves all present satisfaction, or to expose ourselves to so much hazard for this, were as great madness as to starve ourselves or fight desperately for food to be laid on our tombs after our death.

VIII—Fame: The Mouse-trap

¹ I trust a good deal to common fame, as we all must. If a man has good corn, or wood, or boards, or pigs, to sell, or can make better chairs or knives, crucibles, or church organs, than anybody else, you will find a broad, hard-beaten road to his house, though it be in the woods.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Common Fame:
Journals, 1855. Vol. viii, p. 528.

There has been much inquiry in the newspapers, recently [1911], as to whether Mr. Emerson wrote a sentence very like the above, which has been attributed to him in print. The Editors do not find the latter in his works; but there can be little doubt that it was a memory-quotation by some hearer, or, quite probably, correctly reported from one of his lectures, the same image in differing words.

EDWARD WALDO EMERSON AND WALDO EMER-SON FORBES, Footnote, to preceding quotation, in Journals of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap, than his neighbor, though he builds his house in the woods,
the world will make a beaten path to his door.

Almost certainly a verbal variation of the preceding quotation, made by Emerson while delivering a lecture either at San Francisco or at Oakland, Calif., April 23, 26, 29, May 1, 17, and 18, 1871. This version, credited to Emerson, appears on page 38 of a little anthology called Borrowings, "Compiled by Ladies of the First Unitarian Church of Oakland, California," and published in December, 1889. This specific contribution was made by Mrs. Sarah S. B. Yule, who asserted (The Docket, Feb., 1912) that "to the best of my knowledge and belief, I copied it in my handbook from an address delivered long years ago, it being my custom to write everything there that I thought particularly good, if expressed in concise form; and when we were compiling Borrowings, I drew from this old handbook freely." Mrs. Yule died at Oakland, 1 Nov., 1916, at the age of 60. She undoubtedly told the essential truth about the origin of the quotation. Since she used the word "copied," it is probable that she copied it from a newspaper report of one of the California lectures, but she might, of course, have heard it, since she was a girl of sixteen at the time, and her parents, presumably being Unitarians, would naturally take her to hear the Concord sage. "Mouse-trap" was no doubt a happy thought which came to Emerson at the moment of delivery, as there is no record of his ever using it anywhere else. The compiler has had a search made through the files of such San Francisco papers of the period as still exist, but without result. For further discussion see APPENDIX.

Mr. Emerson was in the habit of repeating on different occasions, what was nominally the same lecture, in reality often varied by the introduction of part of some other or of new matter.

J. E. CABOT, Letters and Social Aims: Introduction.

¹ If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon or build a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 166. (1911) Mr. Hubbard had previously used this quotation, in slightly different form, in The Philistine, crediting it to Emerson, and when his authorship of it was challenged, published the following in The Fra for May, 1911: "Mr. Hubbard, like all writers of epigrams, has attributed some of his good Class A product to other writers. For instance, he was once writing about the Roycrofters, and, having in mind the number of visitors who came to see us, he wrote: 'If a man can write a better book,' etc. . . . It was a little strain of his ego to let this thing go under his own stamp, so he saved his modesty and at the same time gave his epigram specific gravity, by attributing it to one Ralph Waldo Emerson." A somewhat similar explanation was made in The Philistine for July, 1912. In spite of which, it is certain that Hubbard did not originate the quotation, for the first number of The Philistine did not appear until June, 1895, whereas the quotation was printed in Borrowings in 1889.

² A man can't be hid. He may be a peddler in the mountains, but the world will find him out to make him a king of finance. He may be carrying cabbages from Long Island, when the world will demand that he run the railways of a continent. He may be a groceryman on a canal, when the country shall come to him and put him in his career of usefulness. So that there comes a time finally when all the green barrels of petroleum in the land suggest but two names and one great company.

DR. JOHN RANDOLPH PAXTON, Sermon: He Could Not Be Hid, 25 Aug., 1889. As reported in the New York Sun, 26 Aug., 1889. The similarity of this to the "mouse-trap" quotation has caused Dr. Paxton to be credited with the authorship of both, but it is evidently an adaptation of Emerson's Common Fame, as given below.

If a man knows the law, people find it out, though he live in a pine shanty, and resort to him. And if a man can pipe or sing, so as to wrap the prisoned soul in an elysium; or can paint landscape, and convey into oils and ochres all enchantments of Spring and Autumn; or can librate and intoxicate all people who hear him with delicious songs and verses; it is certain that the secret cannot be kept; the first witness tells it to a second, and men go by fives and tens and fifties to his door.

¹⁰ Farewell, and stand fast.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 75.

Poor Jack; farewell!
I could have better spared a better man.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 103.
Farewell, for I must leave you.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 145.

¹¹ O, now, for ever
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill
trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,

The royal banner and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!

And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,

Farewell! Othello's occupation 's gone!
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 347.

¹² Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lxxxvii.

¹³ Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing.

New Testament: I Corinthians, iii, 6.

When all is done, learn this, my son,
Not friend, nor skill, nor wit at will,
Nor ship, nor clod, but only God
Doth all in all.

THOMAS TUSSEY, *The Author's Life: Hundreth
Good Pointes of Husbandrie*, (1557)

¹⁹ Our farmers round, well pleased with constant gain,

Like other farmers, flourish and complain.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register: Pt. 1, Baptisms, l. 274.

None says his garner is full.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

1 He that by the Plough would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

2 'Tis the farmer's care
That makes the field bear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

3 Under water, famine; under snow, bread.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. Referring to the comparative effect of snow and rain on crops.

4 Let it please thee to keep in order a moderate-sized farm, that thy garner may be full of fruits in their season.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 304.

Praise a great estate, but cultivate a small one. (Laudatu ingentia rura, Exiguam colito.)

VERGIL, Georgics, Bk. ii, l. 412. An old adage which Vergil echoes from Cato.

We all know how old farm folk especially delight in aphorisms of this kind, and in this respect, at all events, show much real wit.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. Lecture 37.

5 Let us seek bread with the plough. (Panem queramus aratro.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 131.

6 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof; But in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the Lord; thou shalt neither sow thy field nor prune thy vineyard. That which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxv, 3-5.

7 When the land is cultivated entirely by the spade, and no horses are kept, a cow is kept for every three acres of land.

JOHN STUART MILL, Political Economy. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 5. Referring to peasant-farming in Flanders.

Three acres and a cow.

Usually attributed to JESSE COLLINGS, a member of Parliament who carried the "small holdings amendment" against Lord Salisbury's government in 1886.

Ten acres and a mule.

A phrase originating in America in 1862, indicating what a slave expected to receive when he was emancipated.

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 799. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

11 Look at your corn in May,
And you'll come weeping away;

Look at the same in June,
And you'll come home to another tune.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12 Ill husbandry braggeth to go with the best;
Good husbandry baggeth up gold in his chest.
Ill husbandry lieth in prison for debt;
Good husbandry spieth where profit to get.

THOMAS TISSER, Hundreth Good Pointes of Husbandrie. Ch. 52.

13 I believe the first receipt to farm well is to be rich.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to John Wigham, 13 April, 1818.

He was a very inferior farmer when he first began, . . . and he is now fast rising from affluence to poverty.

MARK TWAIN, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's Farm.

14 Farming is not really a business; it is an occupation.

W. E. WOODWARD, Money for Tomorrow, p. 177.

II—Farming: Its Dignity

15 The agricultural population produces the bravest men, the most valiant soldiers, and a class of citizens the least given of all to evil designs.

CATO. (PUNK THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xviii, sec. 26.)

16 Far back in the ages,
The plough with wreaths was crowned;

The hands of kings and sages

Entwined the chaplet round.

BRYANT, Ode for an Agricultural Celebration.

17 Of all occupations from which gain is secured, there is none better than agriculture, nothing more productive, nothing sweeter, nothing more worthy of a free man. (Omnium autem rerum, ex quibus aliquid acquiritur, nihil est agri cultura melius, nihil uberius, nihil dulcius, nihil homine libero dignius.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 42.

¹ The first farmer was the first man, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of land.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

The glory of the farmer is that, in the division of labors, it is his part to create. All trade rests at last on his primitive activity.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

² A Plowman on his legs is higher than a Gentleman on his Knees.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

³ Agriculture is the foundation of manufactures; since the productions of nature are the materials of art.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Ch. 2.

⁴ Not the Atlantic sweeps a flood Potent as the ploughman's blood.
He, his horse, his ploughshare, these
Are the only verities.

⁵ A time there was, ere England's griefs began,
When every rood of ground maintain'd its man;
For him, light Labour spread her wholesome store,

Just gave what life requir'd, but gave no more:

His best companions, innocence and health;
And his best riches, ignorance of wealth.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 57.

But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroy'd, can never be supplied.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 55.

⁶ A peasant may believe as much
As a great clerk, and reach the highest stature.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Temple: Faith.

No one, after the priest, approaches nearer the divinity than the peasant.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Peasant, No. 89.

⁷ Ye rigid Ploughmen! bear in mind
Your labour is for future hours.

Advance! spare not! nor look behind!

Plough deep and straight with all your powers!

RICHARD HAINES HORNE, The Plough.

⁸ To plow is to pray—to plant is to prophesy, and the harvest answers and fulfills.

R. G. INGERBOLL, About Farming in Illinois.

⁹ Those who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God, if He ever had a chosen people, whose breasts He has made His peculiar deposit for substantial and genuine virtue.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. ii, p. 229.

Whenever there are in any country uncultivated lands and unemployed poor it is clear that the laws of property have been so far extended as to violate natural right. The earth is given as a common stock for men to labor and live on. . . . The small landowners are the most precious part of the State.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. xix, p. 17.

¹⁰ The first and most respectable of all the arts is agriculture. (Le premier et le plus respectable de tous les arts est l'agriculture.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile, Bk. iii.

Fair Queen of arts! from Heaven itself who came.
JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence, Canto ii, st. 19. Referring to agriculture.

¹¹ O peasant, thou tillest the fields and fertilizest them, and sowest them. Thou makest the wheat to rise from the earth; through thee the "barren" is converted into grain; thou nourishest man, who is flesh. It is thanks to thy effort that we live here below. Glory to thee, O peasant!

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant, No. 31.

¹² Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carters.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act ii, sc. 2, l. 166.

¹³ And he gave it for his opinion . . . that whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Brobdingnag.

¹⁴ In ancient times the sacred plough employed
The kings and awful fathers of mankind;
And some, with whom compared your insect-tribes

Are but the beings of a summer's day,
Have held the scale of empire, ruled the storm

Of mighty war; then, with victorious hand,
Disdaining little delicacies, seized
The plough, and greatly independent, scorned
All the vile stores corruption can bestow.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 58.

¹⁵ Let us never forget that the cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Remarks on Agriculture, Boston, 13 Jan., 1840.

When tillage begins, other arts follow. The farmers, therefore, are the founders of human civilization.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Remarks on Agriculture, Boston, 13 Jan., 1840.

¹⁶ Give fools their gold, and knaves their power;

Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall;
Who sows a field, or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree, is more than all.

WHITTIER, A Song of Harvest.

1 He who sows the ground with care and diligence acquires a greater stock of religious merit than he could gain by the repetition of ten thousand prayers.

ZOROASTER. (Zend-Avesta, vol. i; Précis du Système de Zoroaster, vol. iii.)

III—Farming: Its Rewards

2 If fields are prisons, where is Liberty?

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Autumn, l. 226.

3 Look up! the wide extended plain
Is billowy with its ripened grain,
And on the summer winds are rolled
Its waves of emerald and gold.

W. H. BURLEIGH, The Harvest Call.

4 Drop a grain of California gold into the ground, and there it will lie unchanged until the end of time; . . . drop a grain of our blessed gold into the ground and lo! a mystery.

EDWARD EVERETT, Address on Agriculture, Boston, Oct., 1855. Referring to wheat.

5 And farmers fatten most when famine reigns.
SAMUEL GARTY, The Dispensary. Canto ii, l. 64.

6 Oft did the harvest to their sickle yield:
Their furrow oft the stubborn glebe has broke;

How jocund did they drive their team a-field!
How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 25.

7 Tradition said he feather'd his nest
Through an Agricultural Interest

In the Golden Age of farming;
When golden eggs were laid by the geese,
And Colchian sheep wore a golden fleece,
And golden pippins—the sterling kind
Of Hesperus—now so hard to find—
Made Horticulture charming!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Pedigree.

8 Happy the man who, far from cares of business,
Like the primitive race of mortals,

Works his ancestral acres with his oxen.
(Beatus ille qui procul negotiis,
Ut prisca gens mortalium,
Paterna rura bobus exercet suis.)

HORACE, Epodes. Epode ii, l. 1.

9 The life of the husbandman,—a life fed by the bounty of earth and sweetened by the airs of heaven.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Husbandman's Life.

10 Earth is here so kind, that just tickle her with a hoe and she laughs with a harvest.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, A Land of Plenty. Referring to Australia.

There is nothing grateful but the earth; you cannot do too much for it: it will continue to repay tenfold the pains and labour bestowed upon it.

LORD RAVENSWORTH. (Bewick, Life.)

11 Well may we labour, still to dress
This garden, still to tend plant, herb, and flower.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 205.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 39.

14 Let your strong oxen plough up the rich soil of the earth, from the earliest months of the year. (Pingue solum primis extemplo a mensibus anni Fortes invertant tauri.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 63.

Plough deep while sluggards sleep.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

15 Work returns to the husbandmen, moving in a circle, as the year rolls itself round in its former track. (Redit agricolis labor actus in orbem, Atque in se sua per vestigia volvitur annus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 401.

O how happy beyond measure would be the husbandmen if they knew their own good fortune. (O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint, Agricolas!)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 458.

O happy life! if that their good
The husbandmen but understood!
ROBERT HEARICK, Hesperides: The Country Life. Adapting Vergil. See also APPENDIX.

16 He [the husbandman] equalled the riches of kings in the happiness of his mind; and returning home in the late evening, loaded his board with feasts unbought. (Regum aequabat opes animis; seraque revertens Nocte domum, dapibus mensas onerabat inemptis.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 132.

He brings out dainties unbought. (Dapes inemptas adparet.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. ii, l. 48.

All taxes must, at last, fall upon agriculture.
EDWARD GIBSON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 8.

5
A man's soul may be buried and perish under a dunghill or in a furrow of the field, just as well as under a pile of money.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 1 June, 1841.

6
They [the farmers] say it is too hard to give fifty bushels of corn (an acre of corn) for a pair of boots, simply to satisfy tariff monopolists. They are down on railroads and rings, and conspiracies, and monopolies, and treason against the general welfare.

WILLIAM HERNDON, (Illinois State Register, 19 Feb., 1873.)

The farmer is endeavoring to solve the problem of a livelihood by a formula more complicated than the problem itself. To get his shoestrings he speculates in herds of cattle. With consummate skill he has set his trap with a hair spring to catch comfort and independence, and then, as he turned away, got his own leg into it. This is the reason he is poor.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

Slave of the wheel of labor, what to him
Are Plato and the swing of Pleiades?

EDWIN MARKHAM, The Man With the Hoe.

Serving the wheels or guiding straight the plow
Leaves little thought of frankincense and hard.

SCUDDER MIDDLETON, Jerubel.

8
No one hates his job so heartily as a farmer.

H. L. MENCKEN, What Is Going on in the World. (American Mercury, Nov., 1933, p. 259.)

9
The pious farmer, who ne'er misses pray'rs,
With patience suffers unexpected rain;

He blesses Heav'n for what its bounty spares,
And sees, resign'd, a crop of blighted grain.
But, spite of sermons, farmers would blaspheme

If a star fell to set their thatch in flame.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, The Farmer.

10
Where grows?—where grows it not? If vain
our toil,

We ought to blame the culture, not the soil.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 13.

11
He that counts all costs will never put plough
in the earth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12
The peasant loves nothing and nobody, except for the use he can make of him.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant. No. 2.

The peasant is a sullen payer, like the soil he tills.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant. No. 8.

a liar.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant. No. 22.

13
Farming is a most senseless pursuit, a mere laboring in a circle. You sow that you may reap, and then you reap that you may sow.
Nothing ever comes of it.

STOEBUS, Florilegium. Pt. xxxviii, l. 30.

14
God did not will that the way of cultivation should be easy. (Pater ipse colendi Haud facile esse viam colendi.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 121.

E'en in mid-harvest, while the jocund swain
Plucked from the brittle stalk the golden grain,
Oft have I seen the war of winds contend,
And prone on earth th' infuriate storm descend,
Waste far and wide, and by the roots upturn,
The heavy harvest sweep through ether borne,
As the light straw and rapid stubble fly
In darkening whirlwinds round the wintry sky.

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 351, (Sotheby, tr.)

⁶ Whoso will pray, he must fast and be clean,
And fat his soul, and make his body lean.

CHAUCER, The Somnours Tale, l. 171.

⁷ He fasts enough who eats with reason.
A. J. CROWN, Grand Canary, p. 183.

⁸ Noah the first was (as Tradition says)
That did ordain the fast of forty days.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Fast, or Lent.

⁹ Is this a fast, to keep
The larder leane? And clean
From fat of veals and sheep?
Is it to quit the dish
Of flesh, yet still to fill
The platter high with fish?

ROBERT HERRICK, To Keep a True Lent.

¹⁰ And join with thee calm Peace and Quiet,
Spare Fast, that oft with gods doth diet.
MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 45.

¹¹ 'Tis but a three years' fast:
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 24.

And therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 81.

¹² Surfeit is the father of much fast.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 2, l. 130.

FATE

I—Fate: Apothegms

¹³ Fate laughs at probabilities.

BULWER-LYTTON, Eugene Aram. Bk. i, ch. 10.

¹⁴ Tempted Fate will leave the loftiest star.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 38.

¹⁵ To feel the step-dame buffetings of fate.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, On the Grave of a Suicide.

¹⁶ Fate leads the willing, drags the unwilling.
(Ducunt volentem fata, nolentem trahunt.)

CLEANTHES, Fragments. Frag. 527. (SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. cvii, sec. 11.)

Fate leads the willing but drives the stubborn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1508.

Fate leads him who follows it, and drags him who resists.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Camillus. Quoted by Montaigne, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 38.

¹⁷ Whatever limits us, we call Fate. . . . The limitations refine as the soul purifies, but the ring of necessity is always perched at the top.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

'Tis weak and vicious people who cast the blame on Fate.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

¹⁸ Fate is nothing but the deeds committed in a prior state of existence.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. Quoted as a Hindoo proverb.

Fate, then, is a name for facts not yet passed under the fire of thought. . . . Fate is unpenetrated causes.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

¹⁹ Stranger! may fate a milder aspect show,
And spin thy future with a whiter clue!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xx, l. 249. (Pope, tr.)

²⁰ For some must follow, and some command
Though all are made of clay!

LONGFELLOW, Keramos, l. 6.

²¹ Whither the fates lead, Virtue will fearlessly follow. (Sed quo fata trahunt, virtus secunda sequetur.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 287.

Whither the Fates call. (Ubi fata vocant.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, l. 1.

The fates call. (Fata vocant.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 49.

²² 'Twas fated so. (Sic erat in fatiis.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 481.

²³ Swearing and supperless the hero sate,
Blasphemed his gods, the dice, and damn'd his fate.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 115.

Each cursed his fate that thus their project crossed;

How hard their lot who neither won nor lost!

RICHARD GRAVES, An Incident in High Life.

SENeca, Œdipus, l. 1019.

² O God! that one might read the book of fate!
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 45.

³ To spread the sails to fate. (Dare fatis vela.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iii, l. 9.

⁴ Wherever the Fates, in their ebb and flow, lead, let us follow. (Quo fata trahunt retrahuntque sequamur.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 709.

The Fates will find a way. (Fata viam inveniunt.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 113.

⁵ Fate is the endless chain of causation, whereby things are; the reason or formula by which the world goes on.

ZENO. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, 149.)

II—Fate: Its Power

⁶ Things are where things are, and, as fate has willed,

So shall they be fulfilled.

("Εἴ τι δ' ὄνην νόον ἔστιν, τοῦτο δ' ἐς τὸ περὶ πάντων.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 67. (Browning, tr.)

As the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, "That that is is."

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 14.

The "hermit of Prague" was perhaps Jerome, the hermit of Camaldoli, but more probably an invention of Shakespeare.

⁷ The bow is bent, the arrow flies,

The winged shaft of fate.

IRA ALDRIDGE, On William Tell. St. 12.

Fate has carried me
Mid the thick arrows: I will keep my stand—
Not shrink and let the shaft pass by my breast
To pierce another.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

⁸ All things are produced by fate. (Καθ' ἀνάγκην δι' ἀνάγκη τὰ πάντα.)

CHRYSIPPUS, De Fato. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 149.)

⁹ Fate steals along with silent tread,
Found oft 'neath in what least we dread;
Frowns in the storm with angry brow,
But in the sunshine strikes the blow.

COWPER, A Fable: Moral.

¹⁰ 'Tis fate that flings the dice, and as she flings

Of kings makes peasants, and of peasants kings.

DAYDEN, Jupiter Cannot Alter the Decrees of Fate.

Eternal Deities.
Who rule the World with absolute decrees,
And write whatever Time shall bring to pass
With pens of adamant on plates of brass.
DAYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. i, l. 470.

¹¹ If we are related we shall meet.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

And two shall walk some narrow way of life, . . .
And yet, with wistful eyes that never meet, . . .
They seek each other all their weary days
And die unsatisfied—and this is Fate!

SUSAN MARR SPALDING, Fate.

¹² See how the Fates their gifts allot,

For A is happy—B is not.

Yet B is worthy, I dare say,

Of more prosperity than A.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

¹³ Fate holds the strings, and men like children move

But as they're led; success is from above.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love. Act v, sc. 2.

¹⁴ Let bounteous Fate your spindles full

Fill, and wind up with whitest wool.

ROBERT HERRICK, An Epithalamie.

And turn the adamantine spindle round,
On which the fate of gods and men is wound.

MILTON, Arcades, l. 66.

¹⁵ Jove lifts the golden balances, that show
The fates of mortal men, and things below.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 271. (Pope, tr.)

¹⁶ The thousand strands of the web of fate are so wildly, so strangely entangled . . . that if a man searches into it, he sees right and the bloodiest wrong become as one.

HENRIK IBSEN, Brand. Act iv.

The outward wayward life we see,

The hidden springs we may not know. . . .

It is not ours to separate

The tangled skein of will and fate.

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 565.

¹⁷ Three were the fates—gaunt Poverty that chains,

Gray Drudgery that grinds the hope away,
And gaping Ignorance that starves the soul.

EOWIN MARKHAM, Young Lincoln.

Swift-limbed they move with even pace,

Together, these immortal three;

These three, that never quit the chase

Wherever souls of mortals be.

ROBERT BURNS WILSON, The Immortal Three.

[Death, Memory, Remorse.]

¹⁸ It lies not in our power to love or hate,

For will in us is over-ruled by fate.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad 1. (1598)

Oh not 'tis only Destiny or Fate
Fashions our wills to either love or hate.
RICHARD LOVELACE, Dialogue on a Lost Heart.
(1649)

¹ Fate is the gunman that all gunmen dread;
Fate stings the Stinger for his roll of green;
Fate, Strong-arm Worker, on the bean
Of strong-arm workers bumps his pipe of lead.
DON MARQUIS, Proverbs.

² From no place can you exclude the fates.
(Nullo fata loco possis excludere.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, ep. 60, l. 5.

Yet who shall shut out Fate?

EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. iii, l. 336.

³ All the great things of life are swiftly done,
Creation, death, and love the double gate.
However much we dawdle in the sun
We have to hurry at the touch of Fate.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. II.

⁴ The fates are not quite obdurate.

They have a grim, sardonic way

Of granting men who supplicate

The things they wanted—yesterday!

ROSSELLE MERCIER MONTGOMERY, The Fates.

⁵ Fate sits on these dark battlements, and frowns;

And as the portals open to receive me,
Her voice, in sullen echoes, through the courts,
Tells of a nameless deed.

ANN RADCLIFFE, The Mysteries of Udolpho: Motto.

⁶ Many have come upon their fate while shunning fate. (Multi ad fatum Venere suum dum fata timent.)

SENECA, Œdipus, l. 993.

And every man in love or pride,

Of his fate is never wide.

EMERSON, Nemesis.

⁷ Our wills and fates do so contrary run

That our devices still are overthrown;

Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 221.

We direct our affairs at the beginning, . . . but being once undertaken, they guide and transport us, and we must follow them.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

⁸ What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 53.

Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe;

What is decreed must be, and be this so.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act I, sc. 5, l. 329.

⁹ By eternal doom of Fate's decree.

SPEKKE, Fairies Queens. Bk. vii, canto 6, st. 33.

¹⁰ Following the fate assigned to him. (Data fata secutus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. I, l. 382.

¹¹ The Fates say us nay. (Fata obstant.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 440.

But wisest Fate says No,

This must not yet be so.

MULTON, Hymn on the Morning of Christ's Nativity, l. 149.

¹² Man blindly works the will of fate. (Blindlings that er blos den Willen des Geschickes.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. iv, l. 59.

The compulsion of fate is bitter. (Des Schicksals Zwang ist bitter.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. v, l. 60.

III—Fate: Its Mastery

¹³ Yet they, believe me, who await

No gifts from Chance, have conquer'd Fate.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Resignation, l. 245.

¹⁴ The heart is its own Fate.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water; Sunset.

¹⁵ Let those deplore their doom,
Whose hope still grovels in this dark sojourn:
But lofty souls, who look beyond the tomb,
Can smile at Fate, and wonder how they mourn.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 226.

¹⁶ Here's a sigh to those who love me,

And a smile to those who hate;

And, whatever sky's above me,

Here's a heart for every fate.

BYRON, To Thomas Moore. St. 2.

Let us, then, be up and doing,

With a heart for any fate.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

¹⁷ To bear is to conquer our fate.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lines Written on Visiting a Scene in Argyleshire, l. 36.

¹⁸ 'Tis writ on Paradise's gate,

"Woe to the dupe that yields to Fate!"

HAFIZ. (EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Persian Poetry.)

¹⁹ Arise, O Soui, and gird thee up anew,

Though the black camel Death kneel at thy gate;

No beggar thou that thou for alms shouldst
sue:

Be the proud captain still of thine own fate.

JAMES B. KENYON, The Black Camel.

²⁰ Lord, make my childish soui stand straight

To meet the kindly stranger, Fate;

Shake hands with elder brother, Doom,

Nor bawl, nor scurry from the room.

WILLIAM LAIRD, A Prayer.

1 All are architects of Fate,
Working in these walls of Time;
Some with massive deeds and great,
Some with ornaments of rhyme.
2 LONGFELLOW, The Builders. St. 1.

Necessity and Chance
Approach not me, and what I will is Fate.
3 MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 172.

The glory and the glow
Of the world's loveliness have passed away;
And Fate hath little to inflict today,
And nothing to bestow.
4 W. M. PRAXO, Stanzas.

My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 81.

5 Men at some time are masters of their fates.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 139.

I am the mistress of my fate.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1069.
We are, when we will it, masters of our own fate.
(On est, quand on veut, maître de son sort.)
FERRIER, Adaste.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.
W. E. HENLEY, Inwits.

For man is man and master of his fate.
TENNYSON, The Marriage of Geraint, l. 355.

6 But, O vain boast! Who can control his fate?
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 264.

FATHER

I—Father: Apothegms

7 The noblest works and foundations have proceeded from childless men.

BACON, Essays: Of Parents and Children.

8 He that has his father for judge goes safe to the trial.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

For a great sin a slight punishment contents a father. (Pro peccato magno paulum supplicii satis est patri.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 903. (Act v, sc. 3.)

9 He that honoureth his father shall have a long life.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, iii, 6.

10 No love to a father's.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

One father is more than a hundred schoolmasters.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

11 Like to a father's was his gentle sway. (Ἦαυτὸς δὲ πατὴρ ἦεν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ii, l. 47.

12 Father of a family. (Pater familie.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 19.

13 O heavens, this is my true-begotten father!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 37.

14 Who would be a father?
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 165.

15 No man is responsible for his father. That is entirely his mother's affair.

MARGARET TURNBULL, Alabaster Lamps, p. 300

16 Father!—to God himself we cannot give
A holier name.

WORDSWORTH, The Borderers. Act i. Also Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 21.

II—Fathers and Sons

See also SON

17 'Tis said that Donna Julia's grandmamma
Produced her Don more heirs at love than law.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 58.

18 Yet in my lineaments they trace
Some features of my father's face.
BYRON, Parisina. St. 13, l. 63.

Some time before his death, he had stamped his likeness upon a little boy.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

Ask the mother if the child be like his father.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 818.

19 I'll meet the raging of the skies,
But not an angry father.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lord Ullin's Daughter.

20 As fathers commonly go, it is seldom a misfortune to be fatherless; and considering the general run of sons, as seldom a misfortune to be childless.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 July, 1751.

Few fathers care much for their sons, or at least, most of them care more for their money.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 May, 1752.

21 A little child, a limber elf,
Singing, dancing to itself, . . .
Makes such a vision to the sight
As fills a father's eyes with light.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. ii, l. 656.

22 One father is enough to govern one hundred sons, but not a hundred sons one father.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

23 Never did any man know his own parentage.
(Ὀὐ γὰρ πῶς τις δὲν γένος αὐτοῦ ἀνέγνω.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 216.

No one knows his own father, but all of us have a conjecture or a belief. (Αὐτὸς γὰρ οὐδεὶς οἶδ' ἑαυτοῦ πατέρα, ἀλλ' ὑπονοεῖται πατέρα ἢ νοτιόνομεν.)

MENANDER, The Carthaginian. Frag. 261.

It is a wise father that knows his own child.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 80.

¹
The night my father got me
His mind was not on me;
He did not plague his fancy
To muse if I should be
The son you see.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems. No. xiv.

I wish either my father or my mother, or indeed both of them, as they were in duty both equally bound to it, had minded what they were about when they begot me.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 1.

The father to the bough, the son to the plough.

WILLIAM LAMBARD, Perambulation of Kent, 497. (1576)

⁴
Like father, like son: every good tree maketh good fruits.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. iii.

Thou art thy father's own son.

WALKER, Paræmologia, 30. (1672)

He that loves the tree loves the branch.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

⁵
Dear Child, 'tis your poor lot to be

My little Son;

I'm glad, though I am old, you see,—

While you are One.

F. LOCKYER-LAMPSON, A Rhyme of One.

⁶
It behooves a father to be blameless, if he expects his son to be more blameless than he was himself. (Probum patrem esse oportet qui gnatum suum Esse probiorem quam ipsus fuerit postulet.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 438. (Act i, sc. 5.)

⁷
And still tomorrow's wiser than today.

We think our fathers fools, so wise we grow;

Our wiser sons, no doubt, will think us so.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 237.

We admire our fathers quite too much. It shows that we have no energy in ourselves, when we rate it so prodigiously high. Rather let us shame the fathers by superior virtue in the sons.

EMERSON, Journal, 1861.

The commonest axiom of history is that every generation revolts against its fathers and makes friends with its grandfathers.

LAWSON MUMFORD, The Brown Decades.

While we criticise the fathers for being narrow, we should not forget that they were also deep. We are inclined to be so broad that people can see through us most any place.

WILLIAM HIRAM FOULKES, Sermon.

⁸
A wise son maketh a glad father.

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 1.

⁹
Raw dads make fat lads.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

¹⁰
The fundamental defect of fathers is that they want their children to be a credit to them.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 194.

¹¹
It is not flesh and blood but the heart which makes us fathers and sons. (Nicht Fleisch und Blut; das Herz macht uns zu Vätern und Söhnen.)

SCHILLER, Die Räuber. Act i, sc. 1.

¹²
We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man which I Did call my father, was I know not where
When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 2.

¹³
Fathers that wear rags

Do make their children blind;

But fathers that bear bags

Shall see their children kind.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 48.

¹⁴
To you your father should be as a god;

One that composed your beauties, yea, and one

To whom you are but as a form in wax

By him imprinted and within his power

To leave the figure or disfigure it.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 47.

¹⁵
Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father, eye, nose, lip,
The trick of the frown, his forehead, nay, the valley,

The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek, his smiles;

The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 97.

¹⁶
'Tis happy for him that his father was born before him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

¹⁷
A dead father's counsel, a wise son heedeth.

TRONER, Fridtjof's Saga. Canto viii.

¹⁸
He who has been in the habit of lying to or deceiving his father, or who will dare to do so, will be all the more daring in attempting the same with others. (Qui mentiri aut fallere inuenit patrem, aut Audebit, tanto magis audebit ceteros.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 55. (Act i, sc. 1.)

This is the duty of a father, to accustom his son to act rightly rather of his own accord than from unnatural fear. (Hoc patrum est, potius consuefacere filium Sua sponte recte facere, quam alieno metu.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 74. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Whom should he bear with if not with his own father? (Quem ferret, si parentem non ferret suum?)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 202.

What harsh judges fathers are to all young men! (Quam iniqui sunt patres in omnis adulescentis iudices!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 213.

What unjust judges fathers are, when in regard to us they hold

That even in our boyish days we ought in conduct to be old,

Nor taste at all the very things that youth and only youth requires;

They rule us by their present wants, not by their past long-lost desires.

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 213. (F. W. Ricord, tr.)

2
O dearest, dearest boy! my heart
For better lore would seldom yearn,
Could I but teach the hundredth part
Of what from thee I learn.

WORDSWORTH, Anecdotes for Fathers.

In deep and awful channel runs
This sympathy of Sire and Sons.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto ii, l. 469.

3
The booby father craves a booby son,
And by heaven's blessing thinks himself undone.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 165.

III—Father of His Country

4
Free Rome hailed Cicero as the parent, as the father of his country. (Roma parentem, Roma patrem patriæ Ciceronem libera dixit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 243. This title was bestowed upon Cicero for his services in unmasking the conspiracy of Catiline, 64 B.C. The title, "Pater Patriæ," was also offered to Marius, who refused it. Julius and Augustus were also so called. So was Cosimo de' Medici. The title was conferred upon Peter the Great by the Russian Senate in 1721. (Post-Boy, 28 Dec., 1721.) Frequently applied to George Washington. (q.v.)

There are many different voices and languages; but there is but one voice of the peoples when you are declared to be the true "Father of your country." (Vox diversa so-nat: populorum est vox tamen una, Cum verus Patriæ diceris esse Pater.)

MARTIAL, De Spectaculis, iii, 11.

6

As fat as hens i' th' forehead.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act i, sc. 2

Fat! ay, fat as a hen in the forehead.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

As fat as a fool.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 118. (1579)

He shall be fat as a pork hog.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Morte d'Arthur. Bk. vii, ch. 1. (1485)

As fat as a pig. (Gras comme un cochon.)

JOHN COTGRAVE, Wit's Interpreter. (1611)

He will grow not only to be very large, but as fat as a hog.

ISAAC WALTON, Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 10.

As fat as butter.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 360. (1597)

I shall grow as fat as a porpoise.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

11
Gross feeders, great sleepers;

Great sleepers, fat bodies;

Fat bodies, lean brains!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Bk. ii, sc. 1.

Great eaters and great sleepers are incapable of anything else that is great. (Les grands mangeurs et les grands dormeurs sont incapables de rien faire de grand.)

HENRY IV of France, Epigram.

Fat paunches have lean pates, and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 26.

A fat belly does not produce a fine sense. (Pinguis ventor non gignit sensum tenuem.)

St. JEROME, De Viris Illustribus.

Fat heads, lean brains. (Capo grasso, cervello magro.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

¹ I am not much in fear of these fat, sleek fellows, but rather of those pale, thin ones.

JULIUS CAESAR, referring to Anthony and Dolabella as the fat ones, and Brutus and Cassius as the thin ones. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 62, sec. 5.)

Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond Cassius hath a lean and hungry look,
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous . . .

Would he were fatter! But I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius.

IV—Faults of Others

7 Every man has his faults; but we do not see the wallet on our own back. (Suus cuique attributus est error: sed non videmus man-ticæ quod in tergost.)

CATULUS, Odes. No. xxii, l. 20.

Not a soul is there who seeks to search into himself—not one! But the wallet of the persoo in front is kept carefully in view.

(Ut nemo in sese temptat descendere, nemo;
Sed præcedenti spectatur mantica tergo!)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 23.

Jupiter has loaded us with two wallets: the one, filled with our own faults, he has placed at our backs; the other, heavy with the faults of others,
he has hung before.

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Fable x, l. 1.

Other men's faults are before our eyes; our own behind our backs. (Aliena vitia in oculis habemus;
a tergo nostra sunt.)

SENeca, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 28.

From our necks, when life's journey begins

Two sacks Jove the Father suspends,

The one holds our own proper sins,

The other the sins of our friends:

The first, man immediately throws

Out of sight, out of mind, at his back;

The last is so under his nose,

He sees every grain in the sack.

BULWER-LYTTON, Paraphrase of Phædrus.

8 It is the peculiar quality of a fool to perceive the faults of others, and to forget his own.
(Est proprium stultitiæ aliorum vitia cernere, oblivisci suorum.)

self, against whom I know most faults.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l.
298.

12 All his faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 97.

13 If he had been as you and you as he,
You would have slipt like him.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 64.

Shame to him whose cruel striking

Kills for faults of his own liking!

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 281.

14 Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 633.

15 A man sooner finds out his own foibles in a stranger than any other foibles.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners, 68.

Do you wish to find out a person's weak points?
Note the failings he has the quickest eye for in others.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

16 If you want a person's faults, go to those who love him. They will not tell you, but they know.

R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies of Men and Books, p. 159.

17 We would willingly have others perfect, and yet we amend not our own faults. We would have others severely corrected, and will not be corrected ourselves. The large liberty of others displeaseth us, and yet we will not have our own desires denied us. We will have others kept under by strict laws, but in no sort will ourselves be restrained. And thus it appeareth how seldom we weigh our neighbor in the same balance with ourselves.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. I, ch. 16, sec. 4.

¹ But, by all thy nature's weakness,
Hidden faults and follies known,
Be thou, in rebuking evil,
Conscious of thine own.
WHITTIER, What the Voice Said. St. 15.

² 'Tis a meaner part of sense
To find a fault than taste an excellence.
JOHN WILMOT, An Epilogue, l. 6.

³ For as, by discipline of Time made wise,
We learn to tolerate the intimacies
And faults of others—gently as he may,
So with our own the mild instructor deals,
Teaching us to forget them, or forgive.

⁶ Be to her virtues very kind,
Be to her faults a little blind.
MATTHEW PRIOR, An English Padlock, l. 78.

⁷ If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale white shown
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act I, sc. 2, l. 105.

⁸ For several virtues
Have I lik'd several women, never any
Was so full of soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owed,
And put it to the foil

It is good to fear the worst; the best will save itself.

DRAX, Biblio. Schol. Instr., 65, (1633)

In grief we know the worst of what we feel,

But who can tell the end of what we fear?
HANNAH MORE, The Fatal Falsehood. Act iv.

To fear the worst oft cures the worse.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 76.

³ No fear is so ruinous and uncontrollable as panic fear. For other fears are groundless, but this fear is witless. (Nulii itaque tam perniciosi, tam irrevocabiles quam lymphatici metus sunt. Ceteri enim sine ratione, hi sine mente sunt.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xiii, sec. 9.

⁴ To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives in your weakness strength unto your foe,

And so your follies fight against yourself.
Fear and be slain; no worse can come to fight:

And fight and die is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 180.
⁵ Fear will drive men to any extreme; and the fear inspired by a superior being is a mystery which cannot be reasoned away.

We listened and looked sideways up!
Fear at my heart, as at a cup,
My life-blood seemed to sip!

COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. iii.

Like one, that on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned round, walks on,
And turns no more his head;
Because he knows a frightful fiend
Doth close behind him tread.

COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vi.

"I wants to make your flesh creep," replied the boy.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 8.

¹⁹
Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek

Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 68.

And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 136.

²⁰
Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect,

Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air.
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound in

To saucy doubts and fears.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 21.

I have almost forgot the taste of fears.

I have suppd full with horrors;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

My hair stood on end, and my voice stuck in my throat. (Steteruntque comæ, et vox faucibus hæsit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 774; bk. iii, l. 48.

Fear came upon me, and trembling; . . . the hair of my flesh stood up

Old Testament: Job, iv, 14, 15.

Anastasio having heard all this discourse his hair stood upright like porcupine's quills.

Boccaccio, Decameron. Day v, novel 8. (1358)

I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young
blood,

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,

Thy knotted and combined locks to part

And each particular hair to stand on end,

Like quills upon the fretful porpentine.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 15. (1600)

My fell of hair

Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir

As life were in't.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 11.

FEELING

²⁰ Below the surface-stream, shallow and light,
Of what we say we feel—below the stream,
As light, of what we think we feel—there flows
With noiseless current strong, obscure and deep,

The central stream of what we feel indeed.

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 121.

⁶ Let him look to his bond.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 1, 52.

⁷ Banks are failing all over the country, but not the sand banks, solid and warm and streaked with bloody blackberry vines. You may run on them as much as you please, even as the crickets do, and find their account in it. They are the stockholders in these banks, and I hear them creaking their content. In these banks, too, and such as these, are my funds deposited, funds of health and enjoyment. Invest in these country banks. Let your capital be simplicity and contentment.

Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak straws.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 107.

⁷ Fire and flax agree not.
JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites. Fo. 30. (1578)
For he is fire and Oak.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Elder Brother, i, 2.
There's danger in assembling fire and tow.
POPE, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 30.

⁸ [He] won't set fire to the Thames, though he lives near the Bridge.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Trip to Calais. Act iii, sc. 3. (c. 1770) This is the first known appearance in literature of a saying which was in common use thereafter. It is alleged (and disputed, N. & Q., vi, ix, 14) that it dates back to the fifteenth century and has nothing to do with the river Thames, but with "temse," a sieve made of horsehair, used for sifting grain. Good workers would sieve so vigorously that sometimes the friction would cause the horsehair to smoulder, but a lazy worker would never set the temse on fire.

⁹ Fire and People do in this agree,
They both good servants, both ill masters be.
FULLER GREVILLE, Inquisition upon Fame.

¹¹ What ye cannot quench, pull down;
Spoil a house to save a town.
Better 'tis that one should fall

¹⁴ Fire is put out by fire. (Incendium ignibus exstinguitur.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. Quoted.

¹⁵ The more the fire is covered up, the more it burns. (Quoque magis tegitur, tectus magis aestuat ignis.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 64.

Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 2, l. 30.

¹⁶ Kneel always when you light a fire!
Kneel reverently and thankful be
For God's unfailing charity.
JOHN OXENHAM, The Sacrament of Fire.

¹⁷ While I was musing the fire burned.
Old Testament: Psalms, xxxix, 3.

¹⁸ Better a little fire that warms than a big one that burns.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

¹⁹ By wind is a fire fostered, and by wind extinguished; a gentle breeze fans the flame, a strong breeze kills it. (Nutritur vento, vento restinguitur ignis: Lenis alit flammam, grandior aura necat.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 807.
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 647.

²⁰ There is no smoke without fire. (Flamma fumo est proxima.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 53. (Act i, sc. 1.)

There can no great smoke arise, but there must be some fire, no great report without great suspicion.

Do leap into the fire.
JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

⁴ Fire is the most tolerable third party.
H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

Light-winged smoke, Icarian bird,
Melting thy pinions in thy upward flight;
Lark without song, and messenger of dawn . . .
Go thou, my incense, upward from this hearth,
And ask the gods to pardon this clear flame.
H. D. THOREAU, Smoke.

Burn, wood, burn—
Wood that once was a tree, and knew
Blossom and sheaf, and the Spring's return,
Nest, and singing, and rain, and dew—
Burn, wood, burn!

Would Not Do as It Was Bid*.

IV—Fish: Description

²
God quickened in the Sea and in the Rivers,
So many fishes of so many features,
That in the waters we may see all Creatures;
Even all that on the earth is to be found,
As if the world were in deep waters drowned.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Wk.
i, day 5.

³
Here when the labouring fish does at the foot arrive,
And finds that by his strength but vainly he doth strive;
His tail takes in his teeth, and bending like
a bow,
That's to the compass drawn, aloft himself
doth throw:
Then springing at his height, as doth a little wand,
That, bended end to end, and firted from
the hand,
Far off itself doth cast, so does the salmon vault.
And if at first he fail, his second summer-saut
He instantly assays and from his nimble ring, Still yarking never leaves, until himself he fling
Above the streamful top of the surrounded heap.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-Olbion. Song vi, l. 45.

⁴
Now at the close of the soft summer's day,
Inclined upon the river's flowery side,
I pause to see the sportive fishes play,
And cut with finny oars the sparkling tide.
THOMAS FOSTER, Perennial Calendar.

⁵
O scaly, slippery, wet, swift, staring wights,
What is 't ye do? what life lead? eh, dull goggles?

How do you vary your vile days and nights?
How pass your Sundays?

LEIGH HUNT, Fish, the Man, and the Spirit.

⁶
Ye monsters of the bubbling deep,
Your Maker's praises spout;
Up from the sands ye codlings peep,
And wag your tails about.
COTTON MATHER, Hymn.

⁷
Our plenteous streams a various race supply,
The bright-eyed perch with fins of Tyrian dye,
The silver eel, in shining volumes roll'd,

The yellow carp, in scales bedropp'd with gold,
Swift trouts, diversified with crimson stains,
And pikes, the tyrants of the wat'ry plains.
POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 141.

'Tis true, no turbots dignify my boards.
But gudgeons, flounders, what my Thames affords.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires, ii, 2, 141.
Inch for inch and pound for pound, the gamest
fish that swims.

JAMES A. HENSHALL, Book of the Black Bass,
p. 380. (1881) Referring to the black bass.
Sometimes wrongly ascribed to Henry Van Dyke.

V—Fishing: Apothegms

⁸
There's no taking trout with dry breeches.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71.

⁹
Still he fishes that catches one.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4262.
The end of fishing is not angling, but catching.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4497.
The end of fishing is catching.

JOHN LYL, Enphues, p. 396. (1580)
¹⁰
He has well fished and caught a frog.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
The man that weds for greedy wealth,
He goes a fishing fair,

But often times he gets a frog,
Or very little share.
UNKNOWN, Pepysian Garland, 318. (1629)

formist*. St. 4.

¹²
See how he throws his baited lines about,
And plays his men as anglers play their trout.
O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret.

¹³
Canst thou draw out leviathan with a hook?
Old Testament: Job, xli, 1.
For angling-rod he took a sturdy oak;
For line, a cable that in storm ne'er broke; . . .
The hook was baited with a dragon's tail,—
And then on rock he stood to bob for whale.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Britannia Triumphans, p. 16. (1637) This quatrain appeared in The Mock Romance, a rhapsody attached to The Loves of Hero and Leander (London, 1677), without ascription of authorship. In CHALMERS, British Poets, it was ascribed to William King, under the title, Upon a Giant's Angling.

Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing.

They say unto him, We also go with thee.

New Testament: John, xxi, 3. Used as motto on the title page of the first edition of Walton's Compleat Angler.

The apostolic occupation of trafficking in fish.
SYNNRY SMITH, Third Letter to Archdeacon Singleton.

The first men that our Saviour dear
Did choose to wait upon Him here,
Blest fishers were; and fish the last
Food was, that He on earth did taste:
I therefore strive to follow those,
Whom He to follow Him hath chose.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler: The Angler's Song.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 425.

3 Angling: incessant expectation, and perpetual disappointment.

ARTHUR YOUNG, Travels in France, 16 Sept., 1787.

Never a fisherman need there be
If fishes could bear as well as we.

UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, ii, 94.)

4 When the wind is in the east,
Then the fishes bite the least;
When the wind is in the west,
Then the fishes bite the best;
When the wind is in the north,
Then the fishes do come forth;
When the wind is in the south,
It blows the bait in the fish's mouth.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. (J. O. HALLIWELL, Popular Rhymes.)

I shall stay him no longer than to wish . . . that if he be an honest angler, the east wind may never blow when he goes a fishing.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler: To the Reader.

VI—Fishing: Its Delights

5 A rod twelve feet long and a ring of wire,
A winder and barrel, will help thy desire
In killing a Pike; but the forked stick,
With a slit and a bladder,—and that other fine trick,
Which our artists call snap, with a goose or a duck,—

Will kill two for one, if you have any luck.
THOMAS BARKER, The Art of Angling.

6 Of all the world's enjoyments
That ever valued were,

There's none of our employments
With fishing can compare.

THOMAS D'URVEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy:
Massaniello: Fisherman's Song.

7 When if or chance or hunger's powerful sway
Directs the roving trout this fatal way,
He greedily sucks in the twining bait,
And tugs and nibbles the fallacious meat.
Now, happy fisherman; now twitch the line!
How thy rod bends! behold, the prize is thine!
JOHN GAY, Rural Sports. Canto i, l. 150.

8 A fishing-rod is a stick with a hook at one end and a fool at the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON (Hazlitt, Essays: On Ego-tism.) Also ascribed to Dean Swift.

Fly fishing is a very pleasant amusement; but angling or float fishing, I can only compare to a stick and a string, with a worm at one end and a fool at the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Hawker, On Worm Fishing.) Not found in Johnson's works. (See Notes and Queries, 11 Dec., 1915.)

The line with its rod is a long instrument whose lesser end holds a small reptile, while the other is held by a great fool.

(La ligne avec sa canne est un long instrument, Dont le plus mince bout tient un petit reptile, Et dont l'autre est tenu par un grand imbecile.)

Alleged to have been written by a French poet of the 17th century named Guyet.

9 Down and back at day dawn,
Tramp from lake to lake,
Washing brain and heart clean
Every step we take.

Leave to Robert Browning
Beggars, fleas, and vines;
Leave to mournful Ruskin
Popish Apennines,
Dirty stones of Venice,
And his gas lamps seven,
We've the stones of Snowdon
And the lamps of heaven.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Letters and Memories, Aug., 1856.

10 In genial Spring, beneath the quiv'ring shade,
When cooling vapours breathe along the mead,

The patient fisher takes his silent stand,
Intent, his angle trembling in his hand:
With looks unmov'd, he hopes the scaly breed,
And eyes the dancing cork and bending reed.
PORK, Windsor Forest, l. 135.

11 Give me mine angle; we'll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 10.

T was merry when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 15.

The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden ears the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

But, should you lure
From his dark haunt beneath the tangled roofs

Of pendent trees the monarch of the brook,
Behoves you then to ply your finest art.

THOMSON, The Seasons. Spring, l. 422.

Then come, my friend, forget your foes, and leave your fears behind,
And wander forth to try your luck, with cheerful, quiet mind

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Angler's Revueille.

'Tis an affair of luck.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Fisherman's Luck.

And angling too, that solitary vice,

Whatever Izaak Walton sings or says:

The quaint, old, cruel coxcomb, in his gullet
Should have a hook, and a small trout to pull it.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 106.

We may say of angling, as Dr. Boteler said of strawberries: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did"; and so, (if I might be judge), God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 5.

(Second edition) Boteler was Dr. William
Butler. See under STRAWBERRY.

Oh the brave Fisher's life,

It is the best of any.

'Tis full of pleasure, void of strife,

And 'tis belov'd of many:

Other joys Are but toys;

Only this Lawful is.

For our skill Breeds no ill,

But content and pleasure

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 11.

(First edition)

Thus use your frog put your hook—I mean the arming-wire—through his mouth and, out at his gills, and then with a fine needle and silk sew the upper part of his leg with only one stitch to the arming-wire of your hook, or tie the frog's leg above the upper joint to the armed wire; and in so doing, use him as though you loved him

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 8.

'Tis an employment for my idle time, which is then not idly spent; a rest to my mind, a cheerer of my spirits, a diverter of sadness, a calmer of unquiet thoughts, a moderator of passions, a procurer of contentedness.

FLAG

I—Flag: Apothegma

These are our realms, no limit to their sway,—
Our flag the sceptre all who meet obey.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 1.

For wher'er our country's banner may be planted,

All other local banners are defied!

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

See the power of national emblems. Some stars, lilies, leopards, a crescent, a lion, an eagle, or other figure which came into credit
God knows how, on an old rag of bunting, blowing in the wind on a fort at the ends of the earth, shall make the blood tingle under the rudest or the most conventional exterior.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

1 A banner need not do much thinking.
WEGAND VON MÜLLERBURG. (Living Age, March, 1931, p. 15.) Referring to Hitler. An expression once applied to General Boulanger.

2 Under the sooty flag of Acheron.
MILTON, Comus, l. 604.

3 And the flags were all a-flutter, and the bells were all a-chime.

HENRY NEWBOLT, San Stephano.

This is the song of the wind as it came
Tossing the flags of the nation to flame.

7 I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all

8 Off with your hat as the flag goes by!

And let the heart have its say;

You're man enough for a tear in your eye

That you will not wipe away.

HENRY CUYLER BUNNELL, The Old Flag.

Uncover when the flag goes by, boys,

'Tis freedom's starry banner that you greet,

Flag famed in song and story

Long may it wave, Old Glory

The flag that has never known defeat.

CHARLES L. BENJAMIN AND GEORGE SUTTON,
The Flag That Has Never Known Defeat.

Hats off!

Along the street there comes

A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums.

A flash of color beneath the sky:

Hats off!

The flag is passing by.

H. H. BENNETT, The Flag Goes By.

9 Fling out, fling out, with cheer and shout,
To all the winds Our Country's Banner!
Be every bar, and every star,
Displayed in full and glorious manner!
ABRAHAM COLES, Our Country's Banner.

10 Here's to the red of it,
There's not a thread of it,

No, not a shred of it,

In all the spread of it,

From foot to head,

But heroes bled for it,

Faced steel and lead for it,

Precious blood shed for it,

Bathing in red

JOHN DALY, A Toast to the Flag.

11 When Freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air,

She tore the azure robe of night,

And set the stars of glory there.

She mingled with its gorgeous dyes

The milky baldric of the skies,

And striped its pure celestial white

With streakings of the morning light.

Then from his mansion in the sun

She called her eagle bearer down,

And gave into his mighty hand

The symbol of her chosen land.

JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, The American Flag.

Flag of the free heart's hope and home!

By angel hands to valor given;

Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,

And all thy hues were born in heaven.

For ever float that standard sheet!

Where breathes the foe but falls before us,

With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,

And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us?

JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, The American Flag

The last four lines here said to have been written by Fitz-Greene Halleck.

12 I have seen the glories of art and architecture, and mountain and river; I have seen the sunset on the Jungfrau, and the full moon rise over Mont Blanc, but the fairest vision on which these eyes ever looked was the flag of my country in a foreign land.
Beautiful as a flower to those who love it, terrible as a meteor to those who hate it, it is the symbol of the power and glory, and the honor of fifty millions of Americans.

GEORGE FRISBIE HOAR, Speech, 1878.

13 What flower is this that greets the morn,

Its hues from Heaven so freshly born?

With burning star and flaming band

It kindles all the sunset land:

Oh tell us what the name may be,—

Is this the Flower of Liberty?
It is the banner of the free,
The starry Flower of Liberty!
O. W. HOLMES, The Flower of Liberty.

Ay, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky.
O. W. HOLMES, Old Ironsides.

¹ The flag of our stately battles, not struggles of wrath and greed,
Its stripes were a holy lesson, its spangles
a deathless creed:

'T was red with the blood of freemen and white with the fear of the foe;
And the stars that fight in their courses
'gainst tyrants its symbols know.

JULIA WARD HOWE, The Flag.

² The simple stone of Betsy Ross
Is covered now with mold and moss,
But still her deathless banner flies,
And keeps the color of the skies.
A nation thrills, a nation bleeds,
A nation follows where it leads,
And every man is proud to yield
His life upon a crimson field

For Betsy's battle flag!
MINNA IRVING, Betsy's Battle Flag.

³ Oh! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!

Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land

Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation.

Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just,
And this be our motto: "In God is our trust."

And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave

O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY, The Star-Spangled Banner.
Originally entitled Defence of Fort M'Henry, and first printed in The Baltimore Patriot, 20 Sept., 1814. Designated the American national anthem by Congress in 1931.

⁴ I am not the flag; not at all. I am but its shadow. I am whatever you make me, nothing more. I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a People may become. . . .
I am the day's work of the weakest man, and the largest dream of the most daring.
. . . I am the clutch of an idea, and the reasoned purpose of resolution. I am no more than you believe me to be and I am all that you believe I can be. I am whatever you make me, nothing more.

FRANKLIN K. LAWE, Makers of the Flag.

⁵ Each red stripe has blazoned forth

Gospels writ in blood;
Every star has sung the birth
Of some deathless good.

LUCY LARCOM, The Flag.

⁶ Take thy banner! May it wave
Proudly o'er the good and brave.

LONGFELLOW, Hymn of the Moravian Nuns of Bethlehem.

⁷ Your flag and my flag,
And how it flies today
In your land and my land
And half a world away!

Rose-red and blood-red
The stripes forever gleam;
Snow-white and soul-white—
The good forefathers' dream;

Sky-blue and true-blue,
With stars to gleam aright—

The gloried guidon of the day,
A shelter through the night.

WILBUR D. NESBIT, Your Flag and My Flag.

⁸ What shall I say to you, Old Flag?
You are so grand in every fold,

So linked with mighty deeds of old,
So steeped in blood where heroes fell,
So torn and pierced by shot and shell,
So calm, so still, so firm, so true,

My throat swells at the sight of you,
Old Flag!

HUBBARD PARKER, Old Flag.

⁹ Yes, we'll rally round the flag, boys, we'll rally
once again,

Shouting the battle-cry of Freedom,
We will rally from the hill-side, we'll gather from the plain,

Shouting the battle-cry of Freedom.

GEORGE F. ROOT, The Battle-Cry of Freedom.

¹⁰ She's up there—Old Glory—where lightnings are sped,

She dazzles the nations with ripples of red,
And she'll wave for us living, or droop o'er us dead—

The flag of our country forever.

F. L. STANTON, Our Flag Forever.

My name is as old as the glory of God,
So I came by the name of Old Glory.

J. W. RILEY, The Name of Old Glory.

There it is—Old Glory!

CAPTAIN WILLIAM DRIVER, as an American flag was run up to the masthead of a new ship of which he had just been appointed master, at Salem, Mass., Dec., 1831. The most probable of the legends accounting for the name.

¹¹ Might his last glance behold the glorious ensign of the Republic still full high advanced, its arms and trophies streaming in all their original lustre.

WEBSTER, Reply to Hayne: Peroration.

1
0 hasten flag of man—0 with sure and steady step, passing highest flag of kings,
Walk supreme to the heavens mighty symbol
—run up above them all,

Flag of stars! thick-sprinkled bunting!
WALT WHITMAN, Thick-Sprinkled Bunting.

Banner so broad advancing out of the night, I sing you haughty and resolute, . . .

Not houses of peace indeed are you, nor any nor all their prosperity, (if need be, you shall again have every one of those houses to destroy them,

You thought not to destroy those valuable houses, standing fast, full of comfort, built with money,

May they stand fast, then? not an hour except you above them and all stand fast.)

WHITMAN, Song of the Banner at Daybreak.

2
"Shoot, if you must, this old gray head,
But spare your country's flag," she said. . . .

"Who touches a hair of yon gray head Dies like a dog! March on!" he said.

WHITTIER, Barbara Frietchie.

When I think of the flag, . . . I see alternate strips of parchment upon which are written the rights of liberty and justice, and stripes of blood to vindicate those rights, and then, in the corner, a prediction of the blue serene into which every nation may swim which stands for these great things.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N. Y., 17 May, 1915.

The lines of red are lines of blood, nobly and unselfishly shed by men who loved the liberty of their fellowmen more than they loved their own lives and fortunes. God forbid that we should have to use the blood of America to freshen the color of the flag. But if it should ever be necessary, that flag will be colored once more,
and in being colored will be glorified and purified.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, 17 May, 1915.

Its red for love, and its white for law;
And its blue for the hope that our fathers saw,
Of a larger liberty.

Your banner's constellation types
White freedom with its stars,
But what's the meaning of the stripes?
They mean your negroes' scars.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the United States of North America. (1838)

England! Whence came each glowing hue
That tints your flag of meteor light,—
The streaming red, the deeper blue,
Crossed with the moonbeams' pearly white?
The blood, the bruise—the blue, the red—
Let Asia's groaning millions speak;
The white it tells of colour fled
From starving Erin's pallid cheek.

ner of Britain, hast thou Floated in conquering battle or flap to the Shot thro' the staff or the halyard, but ever we raised thee anew,

And ever upon the topmost roof our banner of England blew.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 148. See also under WOOING.

Tis an old maxim in the schools,
That flattery's the food of fools;
Yet now and then your men of wit
Will condescend to take a bit.

SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa, l. 769.

The wisest of the wise
Listen to pretty lies
And love to hear 'em told.

Doubt not that Solomon
Listened to many a one,—
Some in his youth, and more when he grew old.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, The One White Hair.

2
Love of flattery, in most men, proceeds from the mean opinion they have of themselves; in women, from the contrary.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

Your panegyrics here provide;
You cannot err on flattery's side.

SWIFT, On Poetry.

3
Of folly, vice, disease, men proud we see;
And, (stranger still!) of blockheads' flattery;
Whose praise defames; as if a fool should mean,

By spitting on your face, to make it clean.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 97.

IV—Flattery: Its Dangers

4
A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth
a net for his feet.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

5
Flattery corrupts both the receiver and giver.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

6
Remember to beware of soft and flattering sayings. (Sermones blandos blasosque cavere memento.)

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha de Moribus. Bk. iii,
No. 6.

We must beware of giving ear to flatterers. (Ca-vendum est ne assentatoribus patefaciamus auris.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 26.

7
He hurts me most who lavishly commends.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 20.

8
Nor in these consecrated bowers
Let painted Flattery hide her serpent-train in flowers.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 7.

9
Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me.

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 13

No adulation; 'tis the death of virtue;
Who flatters, is of all mankind the lowest
Save he who courts the flattery.

HANNAH MORE, Daniel.

10
They who delight to be flattered, pay for their folly by a late repentance. (Qui se laudari gaudent verbis subdolis, Sera dant pœnas turpes poenitentia.)

PLÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 13, l. 1.

11
The flatteries of a bad man cover treachery.
(Habent insidias hominis blanditiæ mali.)

PLÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 19, l. 1.

Your flattery is so much birdlime. (Viscus merus vestra est blanditia.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 16. (Act i, sc. 1.)

12
Thou shalt not fear sharp words, but dread fair words.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture.

13
No vizor does become black villainy
So well as soft and tender flattery.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 44.

O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery!

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l.
256.

14
Those worst of enemies, flatterers. (Pessimum inimicorum genus, laudantes.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 41.

15
All panegyrics are mingled with an infusion of poppy.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

16
Distrust mankind; with your own heart confer;

And dread even there to find a flatterer.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 233.

V—Flattery: Disdain of Flattery

17
Madam, before you flatter a man so grossly to his face, you should consider whether or not your flattery is worth his having

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark to Hannah More.
(FANNY BUNNEY, Diary, 1778.)

18
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for 's power to thunder.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 256.

19
Nay, do not think I flatter:
For what advancement may I hope from
thee,

That no revenue hast but thy good spirits?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 61.

By God, I cannot flatter; I do defy
The tongues of soothers.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 6.

He cannot flatter, he,
An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth!
An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain:
These kind of knaves I know.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 104.

20
Because I cannot flatter and speak fair, Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and
coz,

Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abused
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 47.

FLEA

¹
The flea, though he kill none, he does all the harm he can.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions.

²
He that lies with the dogs riseth with fleas
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum (1640)
Quoted by BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

³
"I cannot raise my worth too high;
O! what vast consequence am I!"
"Not of th' importance you suppose,"
Replies a Flea upon his nose;
"Be humble, learn thyself to scan;
Know, pride was never made for man."

So, Nat'ralists observe, a Flea
Hath smaller Fleas that on him prey;
And these have smaller fleas to bite 'em,
And so proceed ad infinitum.

SWIFT, On Poetry: A Rhapsody, l. 337. (1733) Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em,

And little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum
And the great fleas themselves, in turn, have greater fleas to go on;

While these again have greater still, and greater still, and so on.

AUGUSTUS DE MORGAN, A Budget of Paradoxes,
p. 377.

Big fleas have little fleas to plague, perplex and
bite 'em,

Little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum.

FLOWERS

I—Flowers: Apothegms

14 To create a little flower is the labour of ages
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

15 The faintest streak that on a petal lies
May speak instruction to imitate eyes.
BRYANT, The Mystery of Flowers.

Not a flower
But shows some touch, in freckle, streak or stain,
Of his unrivall'd pencil.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 241.

16 The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower.
COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness.

17 Flowers are words
Which even a babe may understand.

20 Earth laughs in flowers.
EMERSON, Hamaireya.

21 Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.
GRAY, Elgy Written in a Country Churchyard. St. 14.

The flower of sweetest smell is shy and lowly.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets: Pt. ii, Not Love, Not War.

22 One flower makes no garland.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. See also under SWALLOW.

23 The Amen! of Nature is always a flower.
O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

24 Only the flower sanctifies the vase.
ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, The Temple.

25 You are as welcome as the flowers in May.
CHARLES MACCLIN, Love à la Mode. Act i, sc. 1.

The flowers that bloom in the spring, Tra la,
Have nothing to do with the case.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act II.

Flowers that their gay wardrobe wear.

Flowers worthy of paradise.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 241.

Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 256.

A wilderness of sweets.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 294.

So from the root
Springs lighter the green stalk, from thence the leaves

More serene, last the bright consummate flower.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 479.

"A milkweed, and a buttercup, and cowslip," said sweet Mary,

"Are growing in my garden-plot, and this I call my dairy."

PETER NEWELL, Her Dairy.

One thing is certain and the rest is lies;
The Flower that once has blown for ever dies.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 63. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

names.

TENNYSO, The Princess: Prologue, l. 12.

One of the attractive things about the flowers is their beautiful reserve.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 17 June, 1853.

So great is their love of flowers. (Tantus amor forum.)

VERGIL, Georgics. No. iv, l. 205.

And 'tis my faith that every flower
Enjoys the air it breathes.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Written in Early Spring.

II—Flowers: Their Beauty

And because the breath of flowers is far sweeter in the air (where it comes and goes, like the warbling of music) than in the hand, therefore nothing is more fit for that delight than to know what be the flowers and plants that do best perfume the air.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Gardens.

I love these beautiful and peaceful tribes and wish I was better acquainted with them.

W. S. LANDOR, Letter to Southey, 1811. Referring to flowers.

Sweet letters of the angel tongue,

I've loved ye long and well,

And never have failed in your fragrance
sweet

To find some secret spell,—

A charm that has bound me with witching power,

For mine is the old belief,

That midst your sweets and midst your bloom,
There's a soul in every leaf!

MATURIN MURRAY BALLOU, Flowers.

Flowers are the sweetest things God ever made and forgot to put a soul into.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

As for marigolds, poppies, hollyhocks, and valorous sunflowers, we shall never have a garden without them, both for their own sake, and for the sake of old-fashioned folks, who used to love them.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Star Papers: A Discourse of Flowers.

Flowers have an expression of countenance as much as men or animals. Some seem to smile; some have a sad expression; some are pensive and diffident; others again are plain, honest and upright, like the broad-faced sunflower and the hollyhock.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, *Star Papers: A Dis-
course of Flowers*.

I love the gorse and heather,
And bluebells close beside—

I'll find my cap a feather,

And kiss a Highland bride!

CHARLES G. BLANDEN, The Rose Is a Royal Lady.

Thick on the woodland floor

Gay company shall be,

Primrose and Hyacinth

And frail Anemone,

Perennial Strawberry-bloom,

Woodsorrel's pencilled veil,

Dishevel'd Willow-weed

And Orchis purple and pale.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Idle Flowers.

I have loved flowers that fade,

Within whose magic tents

Rich hues have marriage made

With sweet unmemorial scents.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Shorter Poems. Bk. ii, No. 13.

The pink laburnum lays her cheek

In married, matchless, lovely bliss,

Against her golden mate, to seek

His airy kiss.

Tulips, in faded splendor drest,

Brood o'er their beds, a slumbrous gloom,

Dame Peony, red and ripe with bloom,

Swells the silk housing of her breast.

ALICE BROWN, A Benedictine Garden.

With a glitter toward the light.
Purple violets for the mouth,
Breathing perfumes west and south;
And a sword of flashing lilies,
Holden ready for the fight.
E. B. BROWNING, Hector in the Garden. St. 10.

² The south wind searches for the flowers whose fragrance late he bore,
And sighs to find them in the wood and by the stream no more.

BRYANT, The Death of the Flowers.

The windflower and the violet, they perished long ago,
And the brier-rose and the orchis died amid the summer glow;
But on the hill the golden-rod, and the aster in
the wood,
And the yellow sunflower by the brook, in autumn beauty stood,
Till fell the frost from the clear cold heaven, as falls the plague on men,
And the brightness of their smile was gone from upland, glade, and glen.
BRYANT, The Death of the Flowers.

³ Mourn, little harebells o'er the lea;
Ye stately foxgloves, fair to see;
Ye woodbines, hanging bonnily
In scented bowers;
Ye roses on your thorny tree,
The first o' flow'rs!
BURNS, Elegy on Captain Matthew Henderson.
Now blooms the lily by the bank,
The primrose down the brae;
The hawthorn's budding in the glen,
And milkwhite is the slae.

BURNS, Lament of Mary, Queen of Scots.

The snawdrop and primrose our woodlands adorn,
And violets bathe in the wet o' the morn.
BURNS, My Nannie's Awa.

⁴ Ye field flowers! the gardens eclipse you, 'tis true;
Yet, wildings of nature! I dote upon you,
For ye wait me to summers of old,
When the earth team'd around me with fairy delight,
And when daisies and buttercups gladden'd
my sight,
Like treasures of silver and gold.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Field Flowers.

"Of what are you afraid, my child?" inquired the kindly teacher.
"Oh, sir! the flowers they are wild," replied the timid creature.

PETER NEWELL, Wild Flowers.

⁵ The deep red cones of the sunach
And the woodbine's crimson sprays

Have bannered the common roadside
For the pageant of passing days.

BLISS CARMAN, An Autumn Garden.

We are the roadside flowers,
Straying from garden grounds;
Lovers of idle hours,
Breakers of ordered bounds. . . .
Who shall inquire of the season,
Or question the wind where it blows?
We blossom and ask no reason,
The Lord of the Garden knows.
BLISS CARMAN, Roadside Flowers.

⁶ I know not which I love the most,
Nor which the comeliest shows,
The timid, bashful violet
Or the royal-hearted rose:
The pansy in her purple dress,
The pink with cheek of red,
Or the faint, fair heliotrope, who hangs,
Like a bashful maid her head.
PHOEBE CARY, Spring Flowers.

⁷ O the green things growing, the green things growing,
The faint sweet smell of the green things
growing!
I should like to live, whether I smile or grieve,
Just to watch the happy life of my green things growing.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Green Things Growing.

⁸ And all the meadows, wide unrolled,
Were green and silver, green and gold,
Where buttercups and daisies spun
Their shining tissues in the sun.
JULIA C. R. DORR, Unanswered.

⁹ Why does the rose her grateful fragrance yield,
And yellow cowslips paint the smiling field?
JOHN GAY, Pastime, l. 71.

¹⁰ Through the laburnum's dropping gold
Rose the light shaft of Orient mould,
And Europe's violets, faintly sweet,
Purpled the mossbeds at its feet.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HERMANS, The Palm-tree.

¹¹ Farewell, dear flowers, sweetly your time ye spent,
Fit, while ye liv'd, for smell or ornament,
And after death for cures.
I follow straight without complaints or grief,
Since, if my scent be good, I care not if
It be as short as yours.
GEORGE HERBERT, Life.

¹² Fair pledges of a fruitful tree
Why do ye fall so fast?
Your date is not so past
But you may stay yet here awhile
To blush and gently smile

And go at last.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Blossoms.

1 What are the flowers of Scotland,
All others that excel?
The lovely flowers of Scotland,
All others that excel!
The thistle's purple bonnet,
And bonny heather bell,
Oh, they're the flowers of Scotland.
All others that excel!

JAMES HOGG, The Flowers of Scotland.

2 Yellow jappaned buttercups and star-disked dandelions,—just as we see them lying in the grass, like sparks that have leaped from the kindling sun of summer.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 10.

3 The cowslip is a country wench,
The violet is a nun;—
But I will woo the dainty rose,
The queen of every one.

THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

I remember, I remember
The roses, red and white,
The violets and the lily-cups,
Those flowers made of light!
The lilacs, where the robin built,
And where my brother set
The laburnum on his birthday,—
The tree is living yet.
THOMAS HOOD, I Remember, I Remember.

4 What to them is winter!
What are stormy showers!
Buttercups and daisies
Are these human flowers!
He who gave them hardships
And a life of care,
Gave them likewise hardy strength
And patient hearts to bear.

MARY HOWITT, Buttercups and Daisies.

5 And in his left be held a basket full
Of all sweet herbs that searching eye could cull:

Wild thyme, and valley-lilies whiter still
Than Leda's love, and cresses from the rill.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. I, l. 155.

Young playmates of the rose and daffodil,
Be careful ere ye enter in, to fill
Your baskets high
With fennel green, and balm, and golden pines,
Savory, jatter-mint, and columbines.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. IV, l. 572.

The rose
Blendeth its odour with the violet,—
Solution sweet.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 36.

And O and O
The daisies blow,
And the primroses are waken'd;

And the violets white
Sit in silver plight,
And the green bud's as long as the spike end.
KEATS, Fragment, in a letter to Haydon.

6 Shed no tear! O shed no tear!
The flower will bloom another year.
Weep no more! O weep no more!
Young buds sleep in the root's white core.
KEATS, Faery Song.

7 The loveliest flowers the closest cling to
earth,
And they first feel the sun: so violets blue;
So the soft star-like primrose—drenched in a dew—
The happiest of Spring's happy, fragrant birth.

JOHN KEBLE, Spring Showers.

8 Brave flowers, that I could gallant it like you
And be as little vain!

HENRY KING, A Contemplation Upon Flowers.

9 Need any man be told what flowers are,
That hold a star?

ALFRED KREYMBORG, Bloom.

10 Spake full well, in language quaint and olden,
One who dwelleth by the castled Rhine,
When he called the flowers, so blue and golden,
Stars, that in earth's firmament do shine.
LONGFELLOW, Flowers. St. 1.

The root of a forget-me-not caught the drop of water by the hair and sucked her in, that she might become a floweret, and twinkle as brightly as a blue star on the green firmament of earth.

FREDERICK WILHELM CAROVÉ, The Story Without an End. Carové, a resident of Coblenz, is the poet referred to in Longfellow's stanza.

11 Gorgeous flowerets in the sunlight shining,
Blossoms flaunting in the eye of day,
Tremulous leaves, with soft and silver lining,

Buds that open only to decay.

LONGFELLOW, Flowers. St. 6.

12 Set how the flowers, as at parade,
Under their colours stand displayed:
Each regiment in order grows,
That of the tulip, pink, and rose.

ANDREW MARVELL, A Garden.

13 Throw hither all your quaint enamell'd eyes
That on the green turf suck the honied showers,

And purple all the ground with vernal flowers.
Bring the rathe primrose that forsaken dies,
The tufted crow-toe, and pale jessamine,
The white pink, and the pansy freakt with jet,

The glowing violet,
The musk-rose, and the well-attir'd wood-
bine,
With cowslips wan that hang the pensive
head,
And every flower that sad embroidery wears:
Bid amaranthus all his beauty shed,
And daffadillies fill their cups with tears,
To strew the laureate hearse where Lycid lies.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 139.

On either side
Acanthus and each odorous bushy shrub
Fenc'd up the verdant wall; each beauteous
flower,
Iris all hues, roses, and jessamin Rear'd high their flourish'd heads between, and wrought
Mosaic; under foot the violet,
Crocus, and hyacinth with rich inlay
Broider'd the ground, more colour'd than with stone

Of costliest emblem.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. iv, l. 695.

Rose, and went forth among her fruits and
flowers,

To visit how they prosper'd, bud and bloom,
Her nursery; they at her coming sprung
And touch'd by her fair tendance gladlier grew.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. viii, l. 44.

The foreglove, with its stately bells
Of purple, shall adorn thy deils;
The wallflower, on each rifted rock,
From liberal blossoms shall breathe down,
(Gold blossoms flecked with iron brown,)
Its fragrance; while the hollyhock,
The pink, and the carnation vie
With lupin and with lavender,
To decorate the fading year.

D. M. MOD, The Birth of the Flowers. St. 14.

The Wreath's of brightest myrtle wove
With brilliant tears of bliss among it,
And many a rose leaf cull'd by Love
To heal his lips when bees have stung it.
THOMAS MOORE, The Wreath and the Chain.

Where fall the tears of love the rose appears,
And where the ground is bright with friend-
ship's tears,
Forget-me-nots, and violets, heavenly blue,
Spring glittering with the cheerful drops like dew.

NICOLAS MÜLLER, Paradise of Tears. (Bryant, tr.)

Here's Black-Eyed Susan weeping
Into exotic air,
And Bouncing Bet comes creeping
Back to her old parterre.
ADA FOSTER MURRAY, Unguarded.

He bore a simple wild-flower wreath:
Narcissus, and the sweet-briar rose;

Vervain, and flexile thyme, that breathe
Rich fragrance; modest heath, that glows
With purple bells; the amaranth bright,
That no decay nor fading knows,
Like true love's holiest, rarest light;
And every purest flower, that blows
In that sweet time, when Love most blesses,
When Spring on Summer's confines presses.

T. L. PEACOCK, Rhododaphne. Canto i, l. 107.

Here eglantine embalmed the air,
Hawthorn and hazel mingled there;
The primrose pale and violet flower;
Found in each clift a narrow bower;
Foxglove and nightshade, side by side,
Emblems of punishment and pride,
Grouped their dark hues with every stain
The weather-beaten crags retain.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 12.

Thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor

The azur'd harebell, like thy veins.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 220.

When daisies pied and violets blue

And lady-smocks all silver-white

And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue

Do paint the meadows with delight.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc.
2, l. 904.

In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white;
Like sapphire, pearl and rich embroidery.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 5, l. 74.

To strew thy green with flowers: the yellows,
blues,

The purple violets, and marigolds.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 15.

I know a bank where the wild thyme blows,
Where oxslips and the nodding violet grows,
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses and with eglantine.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 251.

Here's flowers for you:

Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed wth the sun
And with him rises weeping: . . . daffodils
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength—a malady
Most incident to maids: bold oxlips and
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one!

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 103.

And the Spring arose on the garden fair,
Like the Spirit of Love felt everywhere;

And each flower and herb on Earth's dark breast

Rose from the dreams of its wintry rest.

SHILLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. I, st. 2.

¹ The tufted basil, pun-provoking thyme,
Fresh baum, and marigold of cheerful hue.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Schoolmistress. St. 11.

² Were I, O God, in churchless lands remaining,
Far from all voice of teachers or divines,
My soul would find, in flowers of thy ordaining,

Priests, sermons, shrines!
HORACE SMITH, Hymn to the Flowers.

³ No dainty flower or herb that grows on ground,
No arborett with painted blossoms drest,

And smelling sweet, but there it might be found
To bud out fair, and her sweet smells throw all around.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto vi, st. 12.
Roses red and violets blue,

And all the sweetest flowers that in the forest grew.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto vi, st. 6.
Strowe me the ground with daffadownillies,
And cowslips, and kingcups, and loved lillies.

SPENSER, Shepherd's Calendar: April, l. 140.

⁴ The violets ope their purple heads;
The roses blow, the cowslip springs.

SWIFT, Answer to a Scandalous Poem, l. 150.

⁵ With roses musky-breathed,
And drooping daffodilly,
And silver-leaved lily,
And ivy darkly-wreathed,
I wove a crown before her,
For her I love so dearly.

TENNYSON, Anacreontics.

⁶ The gold-eyed kingcups fine,
The frail bluebell peereth over
Rare broidery of the purple clover.

TENNYSON, A Dirge. St. 6.

Here are cool mosses deep,
And thro' the moss the ivies creep,
And in the stream the long-leaved flowers weep,
And from the craggy ledge the poppy hangs in sleep.

TENNYSON, Lotos-Eaters: Choric Song. Pt. i.

⁷ The rose is fragrant, but it fades in time:
The violet sweet, but quickly past the prime:
White lilies hang their heads, and soon decay,
And white snow in minutes melts away.

TEZOCARUS, The Despairing Lover, l. 57. (Dryden, tr.)

⁸ The daisy, primrose, violet darkly blue;
And polyanthus of unnumbered dyes.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 529.

⁹ But when they had unloosed the linen band
Which swathed the Egyptian's body,—lo!
was found

Closed in the wasted hollow of her hand

A little seed, which sown in English ground
Did wondrous snow of starry blossoms bear,
And spread rich odours through our spring-tide air.

OSCAR WILDE, Athenasia. St. 2.

Flowers of remarkable size and hue,
Flowers such as Eden never knew.

R. H. BARHAM, The Nurse's Story.

¹⁰ Along the river's summer walk,

The withered tufts of asters nod;

And trembles on its arid stalk

The hoar plume of the golden-rod.

WHITTIER, The Last Walk in Autumn.

¹¹ The mysteries that cups of flowers enfold
And all the gorgeous sights which fairies do behold.

WORDSWORTH, Stanzas Written in Thomson's Castle of Indolence, l. 62.

III—Flowers: Their Language

¹² Flowers are Love's truest language; they betray,

Like the divining rods of Magi old,
Where precious wealth lies buried, not of gold,

But love—strong love, that never can decay!

PARK BENJAMIN, Sonnet.

¹³ Who that has loved knows not the tender tale

Which flowers reveal, when lips are coy to tell?

BULWER-LYTTON, The First Violets.

¹⁴ The delicate odor of mignonette,
The ghost of a dead and gone bouquet,

Is all that tells of her story, yet,
Could she think of a sweeter way?

BRET HARTE, A Newport Romance.

¹⁵ They speak of hope to the fainting heart,
With a voice of promise they come and part,
They sleep in dust through the wintry hours,
They break forth in glory—bring flowers,
bright flowers!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Bring Flowers.

¹⁶ An exquisite invention this,
Worthy of Love's most honeyed kiss,—
This art of writing billet-doux

In buds, and odours, and bright hues!

In saying all one feels and thinks

In clever daffodils and pinks;

In puns of tulips, and in phrases,

Charming for their truth, of daisies!

LEIGH HUNT, Love-Letters Made of Flowers.

Growing one's own choice words and fancies
In orange tubs, and beds of pansies;
One's sighs and passionate declarations,
In odorous rhetoric of carnations; . . .
Taking due care one's flowers of speech
To guard from blight as well as bathos,
And watering, every day, one's pathos!

LEIGH HUNT, Love-Letters Made of Flowers.

1
Yet, no—not words, for they
But half can tell love's feeling;
Sweet flowers alone can say
What passion fears revealing.
A once bright rose's wither'd leaf,
A tow'ring lily broken,—
Oh, these may paint a grief
No words could e'er have spoken.
THOMAS MOORE, The Language of Flowers.

2
In Eastern lands they talk in flowers,
And they tell in a garland their loves and cares;
Each blossom that blooms in their garden
bowers,
On its leaves a mystic language bears.
J. G. PERCIVAL, The Language of Flowers.

3
There's rosemary, that's for remembrance;
pray, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts. . . . There's fennel for you, and columbines: there's rue for you; and here's some for me. . . . O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy:
I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 175.

4
And ye talk together still,
In the language wherewith Spring
Letters cowslips on the hill.
TENNYSON, Adeline. St. 5.

5
Thanks to the human heart by which we live,
Thanks to its tenderness, its joys, and fears,
To me the meanest flower that blows can give
Thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 204.

6
Take the flower from my breast, I pray thee,
Take the flower, too, from out my tresses;
And then go hence; for, see, the night is fair,
The stars rejoice to watch thee on thy way.

UNKNOWN, (Ballad of the Dimboviza. No. 3.
English by Carmen Sylva and Alma Strettell.)

Here's eglantine,
Here's ivy!—take them as I used to do Thy flowers, and keep them where they shall not pine.
Instruct thine eyes to keep their colours true,
And tell thy soul their roots are left in mine.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xlv.

IV—Flowers: Individual

Quotations relating to the more important flowers will be found under their respective names: Buttercup, Daffodil, Daisy, etc.

Acacia

7
A great acacia, with its slender trunk
And overpoise of multitudinous leaves (In which a hundred fields might spill their dew

And intense verdure, yet find room enough)
Stood reconciling all the place with green.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 537.

8
Our rocks are rough, but smiling there
Th' acacia waves her yellow hair,
Lonely and sweet, nor loved the less
For flow'ring in a wilderness.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Light of the Harem.

Almond

9
Almond blossom, sent to teach us
That the spring days soon will reach us,
Lest, with longing over-tried,
We die, as the violets died.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Almond Blossom.

10
White as the blossoms which the almond tree,
Above its bald and leafless branches bears.

MARGARET JUNKIN PRESTON, Royal Preacher.

Amaranth

11
Immortal amaranth, a flower which once
In Paradise, fast by the Tree of Life,
Began to bloom, but soon for man's offence
To Heav'n remov'd, where first it grew, there grows,

And flow'rs aloft shading the Fount of Life,
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 353.

Anemone, see WINDFLOWER, infra.

Arbutus

12
Darlings of the forest!

Blossoming alone

When Earth's grief is sorest

For her jewels gone—

Ere the last snow-drift melts your tender buds have blown.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, Trailing Arbutus.

13
Pure and perfect, sweet arbutus
Twines her rosy-tinted wreath.

ELAINE GOODALE EASTMAN, The First Flowers.

14
The shy little Mayflower weaves her nest,
But the south wind sighs o'er the fragrant loam,

And betrays the path to her woodland home.
SARAH ELLEN WHITMAN, Waking of the Heart.

Asphodel

¹
With her ankles sunken in asphodel
She wept for the roses of earth which fell.
E. B. BROWNING, Calls on the Heart.

²
And rest at last where souls unbodied dwell,
In ever-flow'ring meads of asphodel.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiv, l. 19. (Pope, tr.)
By those happy souls who dwell
In yellow meads of asphodel.
POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 74.

Aster

³
Chide me not, laborious band!
For the idle flowers I brought;
Every aster in my hand
Goes home loaded with a thought.
EMERSON, The Apology.

⁴
The aster greets us as we pass
With her faint smile.
SARAH HELEN WHITMAN, A Day of the Indian
Summer, l. 35.

Azalea

⁵
And in the woods a fragrance rare
Of wild azaleas fills the air,
And richly tangled overhead
We see their blossoms sweet and red.
DORA READ GOODALE, Spring Scatters Far and Wide.

⁶
A very rapture of white;
A wedlock of silence and light:
White, white as the wonder undefiled
Of Eve just wakened in Paradise.
HARRIET McEWAN KIMBALL, White Azaleas.

⁷
The fair azalea bows
Beneath its snowy crest.
SARAH H. WHITMAN, She Blooms No More.

Barberries

⁸
Do you love barberries? . . .
There is something splendid about them:
They are not afraid of being warm and glad and bold;
They flush joyously like a cheek under a lover's kiss;
They bleed cruelly like a dagger-wound in the breast;
They flame up madly for their little hour,
Knowing they must die.
MARY ALDIS, Barberries.

Bluebells

⁹
To-night from deeps of loneliness I wake in wistful wonder
To a sudden sense of brightness, an im-manence of blue—

O are there bluebells swaying in the shadowy coppice yonder,
Shriven with the dawning and the dew?
LUCIA CLARK MARKHAM, Bluebells.

Broom

¹⁰
Oh the Broom, the yellow Broom,
The ancient poet sung it,
And dear it is on summer days
To lie at rest among it.
MARY HOWITT, The Broom Flower.

Buttercup, see separate heading.

Camomile, see ADVERSITY.

Celandine

¹¹
Long as there's a sun that sets,
Primroses will have their glory;
Long as there are violets,
They will have a place in story:
There's a flower that shall be mine,
'Tis the little Celandine.
WORDSWORTH, To the Small Celandine.

Eyes of some men travel far
For the finding of a star;
Up and down the heavens they go,
Men that keep a mighty rout!
I'm as great as they, I trow,
Since the day I found thee out,
Little Flower!—I'll make a stir,
Like a great astronomer.
WORDSWORTH, To the Small Celandine.

There is a flower, the lesser Celandine,
That shrinks, like many more, from cold and rain;
And, the first moment that the sun may shine.
Bright as the sun himself, 'tis out again!
WORDSWORTH, The Small Celandine.

Clover, see separate heading.

Compass Plant

¹²
Look at this vigorous plant that lifts its head from the meadow,
See how its leaves are turned to the north, as true as the magnet;
This is the compass-flower, that the finger of God has planted
Here in the houseless wild, to direct the traveller's journey.
LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. II, sec. IV, l. 140.

Convolvulus

¹³
There is an herb named in Latin Convolvulus (i.e. with wind), growing among shrubs and bushes, which carrieth a flower not unlike to this Lilly, save that it yieldeth no smell nor hath those chives within; for whiteness they resemble one another very much, as if Nature in making this flower were a learning and trying her skill how to frame the Lilly indeed.
PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxi, ch. 10.

Cowslip, Daffodil, Daisy, Dandelion, see separate headings.

Edelweiss

1 Ye living flowers that skirt the eternal frost!
S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni.

Eglantine

2 The fresh eglantine exhal'd a breath,
Whose odours were of pow'r to raise from death.

DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 96.

3 Rain-scented eglantine
Gave temperate sweets to that well-wooing sun.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 100.

Its sides I'll plant with dew-sweet eglantine.
KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 700.

Flower-de-Luce

4 Born in the purple, born to joy and pleasure,
Thou dost not toil nor spin,
But makest glad and radiant with thy presence
The meadow and the lin.

LONGFELLOW, Flower-de-Luce. St. 3.

Forget-me-not

5 The blue significant Forget-me-not.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Roe Wilson.

6 The sweet forget-me-nots,
That grow for happy lovers.

TENNISON, The Brook, l. 172.

Gentian

7 Then doth thy sweet and quiet eye
Look through its fringes to the sky,
Blue—blue—as if that sky let fall
A flower from its cerulean wall.

BRYANT, To the Fringed Gentian.

And the blue gentian-flower, that, in the breeze,
Nods lonely, of her beauteous race the last.

BRYANT, November.

8 Blue thou art, intensely blue;
Flower, whence came thy dazzling hue?
JAMES MONTEGOMERY, The Gentianella.

Goldenrod

9 Reaching up through bush and brier,
Sumptuous brow and heart of fire,
Flaunting high its wind-rocked plume,
Brave with wealth of native bloom,—
Goldenrod!

LEAH D. GOODALE EASTMAN, Goldenrod.

10 I know the lands are lit
With all the autumn blaze of Goldenrod.
HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Asters and Goldenrod.

11 Welcome, dear Goldenrod, once more,
Thou mimic, flowering elm!
I always think that Summer's store
Hangs from thy laden stem.
HORACE SCUDDER, To the Goldenrod at Mid-summer.

12 And in the evening, everywhere
Along the roadside, up and down,
I see the golden torches flare
Like lighted street-lamps in the town.
FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN, Golden-Rod.

Gorse

13 Mountain gorses, ever-golden,
Cankered not the whole year long!
Do ye teach us to be strong,
Howsoever pricked and holden
Like your thorny blooms, and so
Trodden on by rain and snow,
Up the hillside of this life, as bleak as where ye grow?

E. B. BROWNING, Lessons from the Gorse.

Mountain gorses, since Linnaeus
Knelt beside you on the sod,
For your beauty thanking God,—
For your teaching, ye should see us
Bowing in prostration now!

E. B. BROWNING, Lessons from the Gorse.

14 Love you not, then, to list and hear
The crackling of the gorse-flower near,
Pouring an orange-scented tide
Of fragrance o'er the desert wide?
WILLIAM HOWITT, A June Day.

Harebell

15 With drooping bells of clearest blue
Thou didst attract my childish view,
Almost resembling
The azure butterflies that flew
Where on the heath thy blossoms grew
So lightly trembling.

REGINALD HESEY, The Harebell.

16 Simplest of blossoms! To mine eye
Thou bring'st the summer's painted sky;
The May-thorn greening in the nook;
The minnows sporting in the brook;
The bleat of flocks; the breath of flowers;
The song of birds amid the bowers;
The crystal of the azure seas;
The music of the southern breeze;
And, over all, the blessed sun,
Telling of halcyon days begun.

DAVID M. MOM, The Harebell.

Hawthorn, see separate heading.

Grass, see separate heading.

Honeysuckle

17 And honeysuckle loved to crawl

Up the low crag and ruin'd wall.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto III, Introduction.

So doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle
Gentle entwine.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 45.

And bid her steal into the pleached bower,
Where honeysuckles, ripen'd by the sun,
Forbid the sun to enter, like favorites,
Made proud by princes, that advance their pride

Against that power that bred it.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
III, sc. 1, l. 7.

Hyacinth, Ivy, Jasmine, see separate headings.

Knapweed

By copse and hedgerow, waste and wall,
He thrusts his cushions red;
O'er burdock rank, o'er thistles tall,
He rears his hardy head:
Within, without, the strong leaves press,
He screens the mossy stone,
Lord of a narrow wilderness,
Self-centred and alone.
A. C. BENSON, Knapweed.

Lichen

Sharing the stillness of the unimpassioned rock, they share also its endurance; and while the winds of departing Spring scatter the white hawthorn blossom like drifted snow, and summer dims on the parched meadow the drooping of its cowslip-gold, far above, among the mountains, the silver lichen-spots rest, starlike, on the stone; and the gathering orange stain upon the edge of yonder Western peak reflects the sunsets of a thousand years.
RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Vol. v, pt. vi, ch. 10.

Lilac, Lily, Lotus, see separate headings.

Love-in-Idleness

Give me to live with Love alone
And let the world go dine and dress;
For Love hath lowly haunts. . . .
If life's a flower, I choose my own—
"Tis "love in Idleness."

LAMAR BLANCHARD, Dolce far Niente. St. 4.

Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,
And maidens call it love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I shew'd thee
once:
The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid
Will make or man or woman madly dote

Upon the next live creature that it sees.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act II, sc. 1, l. 165.

Marigold

No marigolds yet closed are,
No shadows great appear.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Daisies, Not to Shut So Soon.

The sun-observing marigold.

QUARLES, School of the Heart. Ode xxx, st. 5.

Mignonette

The Frenchman's darling.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 765. Cowper is referring to the mignonette. He is said to have been the one who gave this flower this now common name.

A pitcher of mignonette

In a tenement's highest casement,—

Queer sort of a flower-pot—yet

That pitcher of mignonette

Is a garden in heaven set

To the little sick child in the basement—

The pitcher of mignonette,

In the tenement's highest casement.

H. C. BUNNER, A Pitcher of Mignonette.

Mint

I am that flower,—That mint,—That columbine.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 661.

Moly

That moly

That Hermes once to wise Ulysses gave.

MILTON, Comus, l. 637.

Traveler, pluck a stem of moly,

If thou touch at Circe's isle,—

Hermes' moly, growing solely

To undo enchanter's wile!

EDITH M. THOMAS, Moly.

The root is hard to loose
From hold of earth by mortals; but God's power

Can all things do. 'Tis black, but bears a flower
As white as milk.

HOMER, Odyssey. (Chapman, tr.)

Morning-Glory

Was it worth while to paint so fair

Thy every leaf—to vein with faultless art

Each petal, taking the book light and air

Of summer so to heart? . . .

Thy silence answers: "Life was mine!

And I, who pass without regret or grief,
Have cared the more to make my moment fine,

Because it was so brief."

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The Morning-Glory.

¹ A morning-glory at my window satisfies me more than the metaphysics of books.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 24.

Myrtle

² The myrtle (ensign of supreme command, Consign'd by Venus to Melissa's hand)
Not less capricious than a reigning fair,
Oft favours, oft rejects a lover's prayer;
In myrtle shades oft sings the happy swain,
In myrtle shades despairing ghosts complain.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Written at the Request of a Gentleman, l. 3.

³ Once more,
Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never-severe,
I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude,
And with forc'd fingers rude,
Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 1.

⁴ While the myrtle, now idly entwin'd with his
crown,
Like the wreath of Harmodius, shall cover his sword.

THOMAS MOORE, O, Blame Not The Bard.

Narcissus

See also Hyacinth, under separate heading.

⁵ And narcissi, the fairest among them all,
Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess,
Till they die of their own dear loveliness.

SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 3.

Nettle

⁶ This corner of the farmyard I like most:
As well as any bloom upon a flower
I like the dust on the nettles, never lost
Except to prove the sweetness of a shower.
EDWARD THOMAS, Tall Nettles.

Pansy, see separate heading.

Pink

⁷ You take a pink,
You dig about its roots and water it,
And so improve it to a garden-pink,
But will not change it to a heliotrope.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 1044.

⁸ And I will pu' the pink, the emblem o' my
dear,
For zhe's the pink o' womankind, and blooms without a peer.

BURNS, O Love Will Venture In.

Poppy, Primrose, see separate headings.

Rhodora

⁹ In May, when sea-winds pierced our solitudes,
I found the fresh Rhodora in the woods,

Spreading its leafless blooms in a damp nook,
To please the desert and the sluggish brook.
The purple petals, fallen in the pool,
Made the black water with their beauty gay;
Here might the red-bird come his plumes to cool,

And court the flower that cheapens his array.
Rhodora! if the sages ask thee why
This charm is wasted on the earth and sky,
Tell them, dear, that if eyes were made for seeing,

Then Beauty is its own excuse for being:
Why thou wert there, O rival of the rose!
I never thought to ask, I never knew:
But, in my simple ignorance, suppose
The self-same Power that brought me there brought you.

EMERSON, The Rhodora.

That always mourns the dead.
THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

¹¹ The humble rosemary
Whose sweets so thanklessly are shed
To scent the desert and the dead.
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Light of the Harem.

Sensitive Plant

¹² A Sensitive Plant in a garden grew,
And the young winds fed it with silver dew;
And it opened its fan-like leaves to the light,
And closed them beneath the kisses of Night.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 1.

For the Sensitive Plant has no bright flower;
Radiance and odour are not its dower;
It loves, even like Love,—its deep heart is full;
It desires what it has not, the beautiful.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 19.

Shamrock, see Ireland.

Snowdrop

¹³ Close to the sod there can be seen
A thought of God in white and green. . . .
It is so holy and yet so lowly.
ANNA BUNSTON DE BARY, The Snowdrop.

¹⁴ The morning star of flowers.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, Snow-Drop.

¹⁵ Chaste Snowdrop, venturous harbinger of Spring,
And pensive monitor of fleeting years.
WORDSWORTH, To a Snowdrop.

Lone Flower, hemmed in with snows and white as they
But harder far, once more I see thee bend
Thy forehead, as if fearful to offend,

Like an unbidden guest. Though day by day,
Storms, rallying from the mountain tops, waylay
The rising sun, and on the plains descend,
Yet art thou welcome, welcome as a friend
Whose zeal outruns his promise!

WORDSWORTH, To a Sunflower.

Sunflower, see separate heading.

Sweet Basil

I pray your Highness mark this curious herb:
Touch it but lightly, stroke it softly, Sir,
And it gives forth an odor sweet and rare;
But crush it harshly and you'll make a scent
Most disagreeable

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Sweet Basil.

Sweet Pea

Here are sweet peas, on tiptoe for a flight;
With wings of gentle flush o'er delicate white,
An I taper fingers catching at all things,
To bind them all about with tiny rings

KEATS, I Stood Tiptoe Upon a Little Hill, l. 57.

Tuberose

The tuberose, with her silvery light,
That in the gardens of Mahy
Is call'd the Mistress of the Night,
So like a bride, scented and bright;
She comes out when the sun's away.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Light of the Harim.

Tulip

Mid the sharp, short emerald wheat, scarce risen three fingers well,
The wild tulip, at end of its tube, blows out its great red bell,
Like a thin clear bubble of blood, for the children to pick and sell.

ROBERT BROWNING, Up at a Villa: Down in the City. St. 6.

The tulip is a courtly quean,
Whom, therefore, I will shun.
THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

Not one of Flora's brilliant race
A form more perfect can display;
Art could not feign more simple grace
Nor Nature take a line away.
MONTGOMERY, On Planting a Tulip-Root.

Wallflower

Flower in the crannied wall,

I pluck you out of the crannies,
I hold you here, root and all, in my hand,
Little flower—but if I could understand
What you are, root and all, and all in all,
I should know what God and man is.

TENNISON, Flower in the Crannied Wall.

Wind-flower

Or, hide thou where the poppy blows,
With wind-flowers frail and fair.

BRYANT, The Arctic Lover.

Teach me the secret of thy loveliness,
That, being made wise, I may aspire to be
As beautiful in thought, and so express
Immortal truths to earth's mortality.

MADISON CRAWFORD, To a Wind-Flower.

Anemone, so well
Named of the wind, to which thou art all free.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Wild Flowers, l. 9.

Thou lookest up with meek, confiding eye
Upon the clouded smile of April's face,
Unharm'd though Winter stands uncertain by,
Eying with jealous glance each opening
grace

JONES VERY, The Wind-flower.

FLY

For Fly in Amber, see Amber

It was prettily devised of Æsop: The fly sat upon the axle-tree of the chariot-wheel, and said, What a dust do I raise!

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Van Glory.

What a dust have I rais'd! quoth the fly upon the coach.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 5476

The fly, which sitting upon a cart that was driven in the way, said he had raised a very great dust.

GUZZO, Civil Conversations Fo. 71, (1586)

Yet these are no more than the fly on the wheel.

WILLIAM GUNNALL, The Christian in Complete Armour, p. 299. (1679)

"Let us breathe now," said the fly at once [after the horses had dragged the coach up the hill]. "I have done so much that our passengers are at last on level ground." ("Respirons maintenant!"
dit la mouche aussitôt. "J'ai tant fait que nos gens sont enfin dans la plaine.")

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 9.

And so we plough along, as the fly said to the ox.
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act iii,
sc. 5.

The wanton boy that kills a fly
Shall feel the spider's enmity.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auricles of Innocence.

I killed a fly this morning—it buzzed, and I wouldn't have it!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

As willingly as one would kill a fly.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1, l. 142.

¹ Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 1. Hence, "A fly in the ointment."

² A fly is as untamable as a hyena.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

³ An actually existing fly is more important than a possibly existing angel

EMERSON, Letter to Moncure D. Conway.

⁹ Low trees have their tops, . . . the fly his spleen

JOHN LELY, Euphues, p. 316. (1580)

Ants have bile and flies have spleen. (Formice sua biles inest, habel et musca splenem.)

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica. Bk. III, ch. 3. (1646) Quoted as a proverb.

Even a fly hath its spleen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1388.

¹⁰ Busy, curious, thirsty fly,
Drink with me, and drink as I;
Freely welcome to my cup,

Couldst thou sip and sip it up,
Make the most of life you may;
Life is short and wears away,
Both alike are mine and thine,
Hastening quick to their decline;
Thine's a summer, mine no more,
Though repeated to three-score;
Three-score summers, when they've gone,
Will appear as short as one.

WILLIAM OLDYS, On a Fly Drinking Out of a Cup of Ale.

Go, poor devil, get thee gone! Why should I hurt thee? This world is surely wide enough to hold both thee and me.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy Vol. II, ch. 12. Uncle Toby is addressing a fly.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 13. (1659)

¹⁹ Flying without feathers is not easy; my wings have no feathers (Sine pennis volare haud facilius; sine alca pennis non habent.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 371. (Act v, sc. 2.)

He would fain fly but wanted feathers.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 11.

²⁰ He rode upon a cherub, and did fly; yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind.

Old Testament: Psalms, xviii, 10.

On cherubs and on cherubims

Full royally he rode;

And on the wings of all the winds

Came flying all abroad.

THOMAS STERNHOLD, A Metrical Version of Psalm xviii.

On wings of winds came flying all abroad.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 218.

1 For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;
Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies
of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down
with costly bales;
Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there
rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue.

Tennyson, Locksley Hall, l. 119.

2 Darius was clearly of the opinion
That the air is also man's dominion
And that with paddle or fin or pinion,
We soon or late shall navigate
The azure as now we sail the sea.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Darius Green and His Flying Machine.

"The birds can fly, an' why can't I?
Must we give in," says he, with a grin,
"T the bluebird an' phoebe are smarter 'n we be?
Jest fold our hands, an' see the swaller
An' blackbird an' catbird beat us boller? . . .
Jest show me that! er prove 't the bat
Hex got more brains than's in my hat,
An' I'll back down, an' not till then!"

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Darius Green and His Flying Machine.

FOLLY

8 The fog comes on little cat feet.
It sits looking over the harbor and city on silent haunches
and then, moves on.

CARL SANDBURG, Fog.

9 There must be something good in you, I know,
Or why does everyone abuse you so?

OWEN SEAMAN, In Praise of Fog.

10 To lose itself in a fog.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 34.

The starry welkin cover thou anon
With drooping fog as black as Acheron.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 357.

11 The yellow fog came creeping down
The bridges, till the houses' walls
Seemed changed to shadows, and St. Paul's Loomed like a bubble o'er the town.

OSCAR WILDE, Impression du Matin.

⁷ Brutes find out where their talents lie:
A bear will not attempt to fly;
A founder'd horse will oft debate,
Before he tries a five-barr'd gate;
A dog by instinct turns aside,
Who sees the ditch too deep and wide;
But man we find the only creature
Who, led by Folly, combats Nature;
Who, when she loudly cries, Forbear
With obstinacy fixes there;
And, where his genius least inclines,
Absurdly bends his whole designs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 91. (1670)

A fool will ask more questions than the wisest can answer.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

Examinations are formidable even to the best prepared, for the greatest fool may ask more than the wise man can answer.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 322.

14 Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools.

New Testament: Romans, i, 22.

15 A little group of wise hearts is better than a wilderness of fools.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: War.

16 The Italian seems wise, and is wise; the Spaniard seems wise, and is a fool; the French seems a fool, and is wise; and the English seems a fool and is a fool.

THOMAS SCOT, The Highwaies of God and the King, p. 8. (1623) Quoted as a proverb.

⁹ Folly is pursued, and confronted, by peril.
... But the wise man is fortified against all attacks. (Secuntur pericula et occurrunt. . . . Sapiens autem ad omnem incursum munitus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lix, sec. 8.

Folly may creep upwards toward wisdom, but wisdom never slips back into folly. (Stultitia ad sapientiam eripit, sapientia in stultitiam non revolvitur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, 19.

² Full oft we see
Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 1, l. 115.

⁸ Touchstone: The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely, what wise men do foolishly.
Celia: By my troth, thou say'st true; for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 2, l. 92.

The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 1, l. 34.
Quoted as "a saying."

⁴ Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 153.

Powers above in clouds do sit,
Mocking our poor apish wit,
That so lamely, with such state
Their high glory imitate.

THOMAS CAMPION, Life's Progress.

⁶ Servant: Thou art not altogether a fool.
Fool: Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 122.

Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 14.

⁶ Twenty wise men may easily add up into one fool.

J. A. SPENDER, Comments of Bagshot. Ch. 11.

⁷ Some people take more care to hide their wisdom than their folly.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

⁸ Wise men may think, what hardly fools would say.

SWINBURNE, Mary Stuart. Act iv, sc. 2.

⁹ Immortal gods! how much does one man excel another! What a difference there is between a wise person and a fool! (Di immortales, ho-mini homo quid præstat! Stulto intellegens quid interest!)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 232. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

¹⁰ Nor is he the wisest man who never proved himself a fool.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 244.

If thou hast never been a fool, be sure thou wilt never be a wise man.

THACKERAY, Love the Widower.

And he is oft the wisest man

Who is not wise at all.

WORDSWORTH, The Oak and the Broom. St. 7.

¹¹ A man of sense can artifice disdain,
As men of wealth may venture to go plain. . . .

I find the fool when I behold the screen,
For 'tis the wise man's interest to be seen.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 193.

VII—Fool's Paradise

¹² I would not be in a fool's paradise.

UNKNOWN, Paston Letters. Vol. ii, p. 109. (1462)

Thou shouldst not bring me in a fool's paradise.
Matthew's Bible: II Kings, iv. (1549)

¹³ Thy fairest prospects, rightly viewed,
The Paradise of Fools.

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, Ode on the Refinements in Metaphysical Philosophy.

¹⁴ The fool shall not enter into heaven, let him be ever so holy.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Why Men Enter Heaven.

¹⁵ A fool's paradise is better than a wiseacre's purgatory.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, The Deuce Is In Him. Act i, sc. 1.

¹⁶ In this fool's paradise he drank delight.
GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter 12.

¹⁷ The joyous Paradise of Fools
Has space to spare for young and old.
ROBERT CREWT-MILNES, Fool's Paradise.

¹⁸ A fool's paradise is a wise man's hell.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 320.

¹⁹ Even the paradise of fools is not an unpleasant abode while it is habitable.

DEAN W. R. INGE, (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 198.)

²⁰ Into a Limbo large and broad, since call'd
The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. lii, l. 495.

Limbus satuorum is the name given by the old schoolmen to the intermediate region between heaven and hell, where dwelt what Dante calls "the praiseless and the blameless dead," or, in other words, fools, idiots and lunatics.

¹ Hence the fool's paradise, the statesman's scheme,
The air-built castle and the golden dream.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 9.

² The fools we know have their own Paradise,
The wicked also have their proper Hell.
JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night. Pt. xi.

³ Promise of matrimony by a young gallant, to bring a virgin lady into a fool's paradise.
WEBSTER AND MARSTON, The Malcontent. Act v, sc. 3.

FOOT

⁴ Make your feet your friend.
J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy, p. 137. In other words, "Get out!"

⁵ My feet, they haul me Round the House,
They Hoist me up the Stairs;
I only have to steer them, and
They Ride me Everywheres.
GILBERT BURGESS, My Feet.

⁶ The many-twinkling feet so small and sylph-like,
Suggesting the more perfect symmetry
Of the fair forms which terminate so well.
BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act iv. See also under DANCING.

⁷ This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.
Old Testament: Daniel, ii, 32, 33.

It is the feet of clay that makes the gold of the image precious.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

⁸ Be swift their feet as antelopes,
And as behemoth strong.
EMERSON, Boston Hymn.

⁹ Better a bare foot than none.
GEORGE HEARNET, Jacula Prudentum.

¹⁰ From the foot, Hercules. (Ex pede, Herculem.)

HERODOTUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 82. Plutarch, as reported by Aulus Gellius (Noctes Atticæ, i, 1) tells how Pythagoras deduced the stature of Hercules from the length of his foot.

You shall not know the length of my foot.
JOHN LILLY, Enphues, p. 290. (1580)
Having now the full length of his foot, then shows she herself what she is.

THOMAS DEKKER, Works. Vol. i, p. 203.
Well, gossip, I know too the length of your foot.
D'AVENANT, Play-House to be Let. Act v.

¹¹ It frightens me to see all the footprints directed towards thy den, and none returning (Quia me vestigia terrent, Omnia te adversum spectantia, nulla retrorsum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 74. The fox speaking to the lion. "Vestigia nulla retrorsum" is the motto of the Hampden family and others.

¹² By the foot of Pharaoh!

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 3.

¹³ Her treading would not bend a blade of grass
Or shake the downy blue-ball from his stalk,
And where she went, the flowers took thickest root,

As she had sow'd them with her odorous foot.

BEN JONSON, The Sad Shepherd. Act i, sc. 1.

Whilst from off the waters fleet

Thus I set my printless feet

O'er the cowslip's velvet head,

That bends not as I tread.

MILTON, Comus, l. 896.

A foot more light, a step more true,
Ne'er from the heath-flower dashed the dew;

E'en the slight harebell raised its head,

Elastic from her airy tread.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 18.

The grass slops not, she treads on it so light.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1028.

Steps with a tender foot, light as on air,

The lovely, lordly creature floated on.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 72.

But light as any wind that blows

So fleetly did she stir,

The flower she touch'd on dipt and rose,

And turn'd to look at her.

TENNYSON, The Talking Oak, l. 129.

¹⁴ Feet that run on willing errands!

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. x, l. 33.

¹⁵ Whose feet are shod with silence.

LONGFELLOW, Tegner's Drapa. St. 6.

¹⁶ He stood a spell on one foot fust,

Then stood a spell on t'other,

An' on which one he felt the wust

He couldn't ha' told ye nuther.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

¹⁷ His very foot has music in't

As he comes up the stair.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, The Sailor's Wife.

Sometimes attributed to Jean Adam.

¹⁸ It is the foulness of the peacock's feet which doth abate his pride, and stoop his gloating-eyed tail.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

¹⁹ Right foot first. (Dextro pede.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 30.

²⁰ Make haste; the better foot before.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 170.

Come on, my lords, the better foot before.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3,
l. 192.

You should . . . put your best foot forward.
CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 10.

Here comes the lady! O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 6,
l. 15.

Nay, her foot speaks.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv,
sc. 5, l. 56.

O happy earth,
Whereon thy innocent feet do ever tread!
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto x, st. 9.

Her feet beneath her petticoat,
Like little mice, stole in and out,
As if they feared the light.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, A Ballad Upon a Wed- ding. St. 8. (1637)

Her pretty feet like snails did creep
A little out, and then,
As if they played at Bo-peep,
Did soon draw in again.
ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Mistress Susanna
Southwell: Her Feet. (1650)

The prettiest foot! Oh, if a man could but fasten his eyes to her feet, as they steal in and out and play at Bo-peep under her petticoats.
CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 2. (1695)

But from the hoop's bewitching round,
Her very shoe has power to wound.
EDWARD MOORE, Fables: The Spider and the
Bee. (1744)

And feet like sunny gems on an English green.
TENNYSON, Maud, l. 175.

FOP

Curl'd minion, dancer, coinor of sweet words!
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Sokrah and Rustum, l. 458.

The wealthy curled darlings of our nation.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 2, l. 68.

That dandy-despot, he,
That jewell'd mass of millinery,
That oil'd and curl'd Assyrian bull
Smelling of musk and of insolence.
TENNYSON, Maud, l. 231.

We've no accomplish'd blackguards, like Tom Jones,
But gentlemen in stays, as stiff as stones.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 110.

All affectation is bad. (Toda Afertacion es mala.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 25.
They are the affectation of affectation.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch. 3.
I marched the lobby, twirled my stick, . . .

The girls all cried, "He's quite the kick."
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Broad Grins.

The solemn fop; significant and budge;
A fool with judges, amongst fools a judge.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 299.

He cannot drink five bottles, bilk the score,
Then kill a constable, and drink five more;
But he can draw a pattern, make a tart,
And has the ladies' etiquette by heart.
COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 193.

Foppery atones
For folly, gallantry for ev'ry vice.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 689.

True fops help nature's work, and go to school
To file and finish God Almighty's fool.
DRYDEN, Man of Mode: Epilogue.

Squinting upon the lustre
Of the rich Rings which on his fingers glistre;
And, snuffing with a wrythend nose the Amber,
The Musk and Civet that perfum'd the chamber.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

Soft carpet-knights all scenting musk and amber.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 3.

Carpet knights are men who are by the prince's grace and favour made knights at home. . .
They are called carpet knights because they receive their honours in the court and upon carpets.

GERVASE MARKHAM, Booke of Honour. (1625)

Of all the fools that pride can boast,
A Coxcomb claims distinction most.
JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 5.

A greenery-yallery, Grosvenor Gallery
Foot-in-the-grave young man!
W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act ii.

There's Bardus, a six-foot column of fop,
A lighthouse without any light atop.
THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmasegg: Her First Step.

Fitted for girls; a ladies' man. (Puellis nuper idoneus.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 26, l. 1.

He has thrown his spats away,
He is wearing spurs today,
And the world will please take notice that the Yankee dude'll do!
S. E. KISER, The Yankee Dude'll Do.

A beau is one who, with the nicest care,
In parted locks divides his curling hair;
One who with balm and cinnamon smells
sweet,
Whose humming lips some Spanish air repeat;

Whose asked arms are smooth'd with pumice-stone,

And toss'd about with graces all their own:
A beau is one who takes his constant seat
From morn to evening, where the ladies meet;
And ever, on some sofa hovering near,
Whispers some nothing in some fair one's ear;
Who scribbles thousand billets-doux a day;
Still reads and scribbles, reads, and sends away: . . .

Who knows who flirts with whom, and still is found

At each good table in successive round.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 63. (Elton, tr.)
He, Cotta, who is a pretty man is a paltry man.
(Qui bellus homo, Cotta, pusillus homo est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 9.

1 Acquaint him to everything, that he may not be a Sir Paris, a carpet-knight, but a sidewy, hardy, and vigorous young man.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25.

Ye curious carpet knights, that spend the time in sport and play,

Abroad, and see new sights, your country's cause calls you away.

HUMPHREY GIFFORD, For Soldiers.

3 Nature made ev'ry fop to plague his brother, just as one beauty mortifies another.

POPE, Satires of Dr. John Donne. Sat. iv, l. 258.
Who knows a fool must know his brother;
One fop will recommend another.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 9, l. 11.

4 Sir Plume, of amber snuff-box justly vain,
And the nice conduct of a clouded cane.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iv, l. 123.
He was perfumed like a milliner;
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose, and too 't away again.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 36.

5 A beardless boy, A cocker'd, silken wanton.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 1, l. 69.
He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd,
as it were; too peregrinate, as I may call it.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 1, l. 13.

6 I call'd him Crichton, for he seem'd
All-perfect, finish'd to the finger-nail.

TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 22.

7 A fop? In this brave, licentious age
To bring his musty morals on the stage?

SAMUEL TUCKER, Adventures of Five Hours. Act v.

8 A man who can dominate a London dinner-table can dominate the world. The future belongs to the dandy. It is the exquisites who are going to rule.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act III.

9 A lofty cane, a sword with silver hilt,
A ring, two watches, and a snuff box gilt.
UNKNOWN, Recipe to Make a Modern Fop.

20 And hence no force, however great,

Can stretch a cord, however fine,

Into a horizontal line

That shall be absolutely straight.

WILLIAM WHIEWELL, Elementary Treatise on Mechanics: The Equilibrium of Forces on a Point. Vol. i, l. 44. (First edition, 1819)

A famous instance of the accidental use of rhyme and meter, which so annoyed its author when he was chaffed about it by Professor Adam Sedgwick at a dinner in Hall at Cambridge, that he deleted it from all later editions of his book. Sedgwick, or some other wag, polished the sentence up a little, for it really read, "Hence no force however great can stretch a cord however fine into a horizontal line which is accurately straight."

FOREIGNERS

1 Wide open and unguarded stand our gates,
Named of the four winds, North, South, East, and West. . . .

O Liberty, white Goddess! is it well
To leave the gates unguarded? On thy breast Fold Sorrow's children, soothe the hurts of Fate,

Lift the down-trodden but with hand of steel
Stay those who to thy sacred portals come
To waste the gifts of Freedom.

T. B. ALDRICH, Unguarded Gates.

2 Each breath
Of foreign air he draws seems a slow poison.
BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act i, sc. 1.

3 The more I saw of foreign lands, the more I

MARK TWAIN, What Paul Bourget Thinks of Us.

He reports the American joke correctly. In Boston they ask, How much does he know? In New York, How much is he worth? In Philadelphia, Who were his parents? And when an alien observer turns his telescope upon us, a natural apprehension moves us to ask, What is the diameter of his reflector?

19 If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 5.

20 It is sometimes expedient to forget even what you know. (Etiam oblivisci quod scis, interdum expedit.)
PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 234. Also printed quid scis, i.e., It is sometimes expedient to forget even who you are.

21 Men are men; the best sometimes forget.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 241.

When I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 255.

22 We bury love,
Forgetfulness grows over it like grass;

That is a thing to weep for, not the dead.
ALEXANDER SMITH, A Boy's Poem. Pt. III.

I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted,
And knew we should both forget.
SWINBURNE, An Interlude. St. 11.

And the best and the worst of this is
That neither is most to blame,
If you've forgotten my kisses
And I've forgotten your name.
SWINBURNE, An Interlude. St. 14.

Forget thee . . . Never—
Till Nature, high and low, and great and small Forgets herself, and all her loves and hates
Sink again into Chaos.

TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act I, sc. 3.

Of what significance the things you can forget?
A little thought is sexton to all the world.
H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

And have you been to Borderland?
Its country lies on either hand
Beyond the river I forget.

HERMAN KNICKERBOCKER VIEL, Borderland.

Go, forget me—why should sorrow
O'er that brow a shadow fling?
Go, forget me—and to-morrow
Brightly smile and sweetly sing.
CHARLES WOLFE, Go, Forget Me!

We bleed, we tremble; we forget, we smile—
The mind turns fool, before the cheek is dry.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 511.

FORGIVENESS

I—Forgive and Forgiven

They who forgive most shall be most forgiven.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

And throughout all Eternity
I forgive you, you forgive me.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Broken Love.

Now may the good God pardon all good men!
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 506.

But Thou art good; and Goodness still Delighteth to forgive.
ROBERT BURNS, A Prayer in the Prospect of Death.

But to have power to forgive,
Is empire and prerogative;
And 'tis in crowns a nobler gem
To grant a pardon than condemn.
BUTLER, An Heroical Epistle of Hudibras to His Lady, l. 135.

He who forgives readily only invites offense.

(Qui pardonne aisément invite à l'offenser.)
CORNWALL, Cinna. Act iv, sc. 4.

To forgive everyone is as much cruelty as to forgive no one. (Tam ignoscere omnibus crudelitas est quam nulli.)

SENeca.
But I forgive you. . . . I do, and you can't help yourself.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 42. Uriah
Heep speaking.

God may forgive you, but I never can.
QUEEN ELIZABETH, to the Countess of Nottingham.
(HUME, History of England. Ch. 44.)

And unforgiving, unforgiven dies.
UNKNOWN, Lines on the Death of Queen Caroline. (1821)

If anyone will take these two words to heart and use them for his own guidance and regulation, he will be almost without sin and will lead a very peaceful life. These two words are bear and forbear. (Ἀνέχου καὶ ἀνέχεσθαι.)

EMICLETUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ.
Bk. xvii, epis. 19, sec. 6.)

O Thou, who Man of baser Earth did make,
And ev'n with Paradise devise the Snake:
For all the sin wherewith the Face of Man
Is blackened—Man's forgiveness give,—and take!

FITZGERALD, Rubāiyāt of Omar Khayyām. St.
81. This stanza is not in Omar, but is an interpolation by Fitzgerald.

The offender never pardons.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculus Prudentum.

FORGIVENESS TO THE INJURED DOETH BELONG, see under INJURY.

It is just that he who asks forgiveness for his offenses should give it in turn. (Æquum est Peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 74.

Nobuddy ever fergits where he buried a hatchet.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 32.

One pardons in the degree that one loves. (On pardonne tant que l'on aime.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 330.

Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do.

New Testament: Luke, xliii, 34.

Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 12.

Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those that trespass against us.

Book of Common Prayer: The Lord's Prayer.

This is the version generally in use in English and American churches, both Catholic and Protestant.

Forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us.

New Testament: Luke, xi, 4.

1 And I think, in the lives of most women and men,

There's a moment when all would go smooth and even,

If only the dead could find out when To come back, and be forgiven.

OWEN MEREDITH, Aux Italiens.

2 Philosophy is toleration, and it is only one step from toleration to forgiveness.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act ii.

3 Forgiveness is better than revenge. (Συγγνώμῃ τῶν αἰσίων κρείσσον.)

PITTACUS, when he released Alcæus, after having him in his power. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 76.)

Forgiveness is better than revenge; for forgiveness is the sign of a gentle nature, but revenge the sign of a savage nature.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 68.

4 Only heaven Means crowned, not conquered, when it says "Forgiven."

ABELAIDE ANN PROCTER, A Legend of Provence.

5 Forgive others often, yourself never. (Ignoscito sæpe alter, nunquam tibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 325.

Pardon all but thyself.

7 Forgive that you may be forgiven. (Ut absolvaris, ignosce.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 28.

8 Pardon's the word to all.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 422.

I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 3, l. 131.

A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that have done scathe to us.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 316.

Not to relent in beastly, savage, devilish,

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 265.

9 May one be pardoned, and retain the offence?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 56.

10 God never pardons; his laws are irrevocable;

the mind that deserts its better knowledge must suffer.

God always pardons; for remorse is penitence, and penitence is new life, and returning peace.

WILLIAM SMITH, Thorndale. Pt. ii, sec. 13.

11 To understand everything makes one very indulgent. (Tout comprendre rend très indulgent.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. xviii, ch. 5.

To understand is to pardon. To understand everything is to forgive everything. (Comprendre c'est pardonner. Tout comprendre c'est tout pardonner.)

Both these phrases have been attributed to Madame de Staël, but are not found in her works. They are probably misquotations of—as well as great improvements on—the sentence from Corinne cited above.

The more we know, the better we forgive;

Whoc'er feels deeply, feels for all who live.

Attributed to MADAME DE STAËL, but exact source not discovered.

Know all and you will pardon all.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i.

He who understands everything understands nothing, and he who forgives everything forgives nothing.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies p. 93.

12 Only the brave know how to forgive. . . . A coward never forgave; it is not in his nature.

LAURENCE STERNE, Sermons. No. 12.

13 If the injured one could read your heart, you may be sure he would understand and pardon.

R. L. STEVENSON, Truth of Intercourse.

14 Sleep; and if life was bitter to thee, pardon; If sweet, give thanks; thou hast no more to live,

And to give thanks is good, and to forgive.

SWINBURNE, Ave atque Vale. St. 17.

15 Forgive! How many will say, "forgive," and find

A sort of absolution in the sound

To hate a little longer!

TENNYSOON, Sea Dreams, l. 60.

16 But to forgive our enemies their virtues—that is a greater miracle, and one which no longer happens.

(Mais à ses ennemis pardonner les vertus, C'est un plus grand miracle, et qui ne se fait plus.)

VOLTAIRE, Discours sur la Vraie Vertu.

17 The best of what we do and are,

Just God, forgive!

WORDSWORTH, Thoughts Suggested on the Banks of Nith.

II—Forgive and Forget

¹ "I can forgive, but I cannot forget," is only another way of saying, "I cannot forgive."

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

² Good, to forgive; Best, to forget!
Living, we fret; Dying, we live.

ROBERT BROWNING, Le Saisiaz: Dedication.

³ The memory and conscience never did, nor never will, agree about forgiving injuries.

LORD HALLIFAX, Works, p. 252.

⁴ All our great fray . . . is forgiven and forgotten between us quite.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

Pray you now, forget and forgive.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 84.
(c. 1605) Usually misquoted, "Forgive and forget."

Endeavour to forget, sir, and forgive.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act v, sc. 2. (1696)

Yon little thatch is where she lives,

Yon spire is where she met me;—

I think that if she quite forgives,

She cannot quite forget me.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, Mrs. Smith.

And railed on Lady Fortune in good terms, in good set terms.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 16.

12 Fortune knows neither reason or law. She is inclined to favor the wicked, and hates the just, as if to display her unreasoning force.

PALLADAS, (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 62.)

13 Fortune changes suddenly: life is changeable. (Actutum fortunæ solent mutarier: varia vita est.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 9.

14 The wheel goes round and round, And some are up and some are on the down, And still the wheel goes round.

JOSEPHINE POLLARD, The Wheel of Fortune.

For fortune's wheel is on the turn,

And some go up and some go down.

MARY F. TUCKER, Going Up and Coming Down.

15 Who thinks that Fortune cannot change her mind,

Prepares a dreadful jest for all mankind.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. ii, l. 123.

16 Dame Fortune is a fickle gipsy, And always blind, and often tipsy;

Sometimes, for years and years together,

She'll bless you with the sunniest weather,

Bestowing honour, pudding, pence,

You can't imagine why or whence;—

Then in a moment—Presto, Pass!—

Your joys are withered like the grass.

W. M. PRATT, The Legend of the Haunted Tree.

17 Fortune is glass; just as it becomes bright it is broken (Fortuna vitrea est; tum cum splendet frangitur.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 280. Said to be a maxim of Seneca.

18 On doubtful wings flies the inconstant hour, nor does swift Fortune keep faith with any. (Volat ambiguis mobilis alis Hora, nec ulli presens velox Fortuna fidem.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 39.

3 Fortune in men has some small difference made;

One flutters in rags, one flutters in brocade,
The cobbler apron'd, and the parson gown'd,
The friar hooded, and the monarch crown'd.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 193.

4 Fortune rules in all things; she raises to eminence or buries in oblivion from caprice rather than from principle. (Sed perfecta fortuna in omni re dominatur; ea res cunctas ex lubricine magis quam ex vero celebrat obscuratque.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 8, sec. 1.

5 Whatever Fortune has raised on high, she has raised but to bring low. (Quidquid in altum Fortuna tulit, Ruitura levat.)

V—Fortune: Its Power

8 Sovereign of all the gods is Fortune, and these other names are given her in vain; for she alone disposeth all things as she will.

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragmentis. Frag. 254.

9 Fortune, the great commandress of the world,
Hath divers ways to advance her followers:
To some she gives honour without deserving;
To other some, deserving without honour;
Some wit, some wealth; and some, wit without wealth;
Some wealth without wit; some nor wit nor wealth.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act v, sc. 1.

10 Thou wouldst have no divinity, O Fortune, if we had but wisdom; it is we that make a goddess of thee, and place thee in the skies. (Nullum numen habes, si sit prudentia: nos te, nos facimus, Fortuna, deam caloque locamus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 365.

11 Fortune rules all.

Fortune is God: all you endure and do
Depends on circumstance as much as you.

SHELLEY, Epigrams from the Greek Circumstance.

20 The power of fortune is confessed only by the miserable; for the happy impute all their success to prudence and merit.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

21 Fortune, not wisdom, rules the life of men. (Τύχη τὰ θνητὰ πράγματ' οὐκ εὐβουλία.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Callisthenes. (PLUTARCH, De Fortuna, 97.) Latinized by CICERO (Tusculanarum Disputationum, v, 9): Vitam regit fortuna, non sapientia.

VI—Fortune: Good and Bad

22 Ah! who can tell how many a soul sublime

Has felt the influence of malignant star,
And waged with Fortune an eternal war.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 3.

1 Incapable of compromises,
Unable to forgive or spare,
The strange awarding of the prizes
He had no fortitude to bear.
WILLA CATHER, A Likeness.

2 For I deem that contrarious Fortune profiteth more to men than Fortune debonaire.
CHAUCER, Boethius. Bk. ii, prose 8.

In losing fortune, many a lucky elf
Has found himself.
HORACE SMITH, Moral Alchemy. St. 12.

3 Fortune came smiling to my youth and woo'd
it,
And purple greatness met my ripened years.
DRYDEN, All for Love. Act i, sc. 1.

4 Vicissitudes of fortune, which spares neither man nor the proudest of his works, which buries empires and cities in a common grave.
GIBSON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 71.

5 The greatest reverses of fortune are the most easily borne, from a sort of dignity belonging to them.

parte*. Vol. iv, p. 267.

6 The bitter dregs of Fortune's cup to drain.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 85. (Pope, tr.)

7 You are sad, though fortunate. Take care that Fortune does not perceive this, or she will call you ungrateful. (Tristis es et felix. Sciat hoc Fortuna caveto Ingratum dicet te.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 79.

8 The most wretched fortune is safe, for it lacks fear of anything worse. (Fortuna miserrima tuta est, nam timor eventus deterioris best.)
OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 31.

His only solace was, that now
His dog-bolt fortune was so low,
That either it must quickly end
Or turn about again, and mend.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 39.

I wish thy lot, now bad, still worse, my friend,
For when at worst, they say, things always mend.
JOHN OWEN, To a Friend in Distress.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 233.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 164.

12 Will Fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach and no food;
Such are the poor, in health: or else a feast
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,

That have abundance, and enjoy it not.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 4,
l. 103.

13 When Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 119.

14 So was their fortune good, though wicked was their mind.

SPENSER, Fæerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ii, st. 43.

15 For ever, Fortune, wilt thou prove
An unrelenting foe to love.

JAMES THOMSON, To Fortune.

16 Where God and cruel fortune call, let us follow. (Quo Deus, et quo dura vocat Fortuna, sequamur.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 677.

17 A man is never so on trial as in the moment of excessive good-fortune.

LEW WALLACE, Ben Hur. Bk. v, ch. 7.

VII—Fortune: Architects of Fortune

18 Every man is the architect of his own fortune.
(Fabrum esse suæ quæque fortune.)

APPIUS CLAUDIUS CÆCUS, who held the office of censor in 312 B.C. His poems have not survived. (PSEUDO-SALLUST, Dua Epistula de Republica Ordinanda. Epis. i, sec. 1. These letters were addressed to Cæsar, and are attributed to Sallust on doubtful authority.
The entire sentence reads: "But these things teach us the truth of what Appius says in his verses, that everyone is the architect of his own fortune.")

It is a highway saying, that we are architects of our own fortune.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenianism, p. 454. (1707)

We have not a commoner saying among us than "Every man is the architect of his own fortune," and we have very few much older.

E. TEW, (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. xii, p. 515.)

1 It cannot be denied, but outward accidents conduce much to fortune: favour, opportunity, death of others, occasion fitting virtue. But chiefly the mould of a man's fortune is in his own hands: (Faber quisque fortunæ suæ.)

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: On Fortune.

2 Each person is the founder Of his own fortune, good or bad. BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Pilgrimage. Act i, sc. 1.

3 The brave man carves out his fortune, and every man is the son of his own works.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 4.

Each is the maker of his own fortune.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 66.

4 Every man's fortune is moulded by his character. (Mores cuique sui fingunt fortunam.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Atticus. Ch. 11.

A man's own character is the arbiter of his fortune.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 141.

5 The wise man is the maker of his own fortune, and, unless he be a bungling workman, little can befall him which he would desire to change.

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 2.

6 Every man is the maker of his own fortune.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 52.

7 A man's own manners do shape his fortune.

RICHARD TAYLOR, Proverbs. Fo. 37. (1539)

VIII.—Fortune: Mastery of Fortune

8 All fortune is to be conquered by bearing it. (Vincenda est omnia fortuna ferendo.)

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Quoted as a maxim.

9 Let not one look of fortune cast you down; She were not fortune, if she did not frown: Such as do bravest bear her scorns awhile, Are those on whom, at last, she most will smile.

JOHN BOYLE, Imitation of Horace.

10 Let not Fortune, which hath no name in Scripture, have any in thy divinity.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 25.

12 My worthy friend, ne'er grudge an' carp, Tho' Fortune use you hard and sharp; Come, kittle up your moorland harp Wi' gleesome touch!

Ne'er mind how Fortune waft an' warp; She's but a bitch.

BURNS, Second Epistle to J. Lapraik.

Fortune! if thou'lt but gie me still Hale breeks, a scone, an' whisky-gill, An' rowth o' rhyme to rave at will, Tak a' the rest.

BURNS, Scotch Drink. St. 21.

Is Fortune's fickle Luna waning?

E'en let her gang!

Beneath what light she has remaining,

Let's sing our sang.

BURNS, Epistle to James Smith.

13 I can enjoy her while she's kind;

But when she dances in the wind,

And shakes the wings, and will not stay,

I puff the prostitute away.

DRYDEN, Imitations of Horace. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 81.

14 Never think you Fortune can bear the sway, Where Virtue's force can cause her to obey.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, In Defence of Fortune. (PUTTENHAM, Art of Poësie: Of Ornament.)

15 A change of fortune hurts a wise man no more than a change of the moon.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1756.

16 Learn to bear great fortune well. (Bene ferre magnam Disce fortunam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 27, l. 74.

17 Ill fortune never crushed that man whom good fortune deceived not.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Fortuna.

18 Largesse! Largesse, Fortune!

Give or hold at your will.

If I've no care for Fortune

Fortune must follow me still.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Wishing-Caps.

If fortune favour I may have her, for I go about her;

If fortune fail you may kiss her tail, and go without her.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 212.

19 Fortune knows We scorn her most when most she offers blows.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 11, l. 73.

A man that fortune's buffets and rewards

Hast ta'en with equal thanks.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 72.

20 Blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well commingled,

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 73.

1 We ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, Act iv, sc. 2, l. 43.
Myself could else outfrown false fortune's frown.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act v, sc. 3, l. 6.
How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall,
While others play the idiots in her eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 134.

2 They make their fortune who are stout and wise.

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered, Bk. x, st. 20.

IX—Fortune Favors the Bold

3 Fortune favors the bold. (Audentis Fortuna juvat.)

VERGIL, Æneid, Bk. x, l. 784. Used in this form by many Latin writers. Sometimes written,
"Fors juvat audentes," as by CLAUDIAN, *Ad
Probinum*, l. 8.

4 Fortune favors the brave. (Fortis fortuna adjuvat.)

TERENCE, Phormio, Act i, sc. 4, l. 26. Used in this form by CICERO, De Finibus, bk. iii,
ch. 4, sec. 116, and by many others.

5 Hap helpeth hardy man alday, quoth he.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women, Pt.
v, l. 94.

6 Fortune and Venus help the bold. (Audentem Forsque Venusque juvat.)

OID, Ars Amatoria, Bk. i, l. 608.
Be bold: Venus herself aids the stout-hearted.
(Audeodum est: fortes adjuvat ipsa Venus.)

TIBULLUS, Odes, Bk. i, ode 2, l. 16.

7 Fortune is like a widow won,
And truckles to the bold alone.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Fortune-Hunter,
Canto ii. See also WIDOW: WOOING.

8 Fortune is not on the side of the faint-hearted.
SOPHOCLES, Phædra, Frag. 847.

X—Fortune Favors Fools

9 Fortune makes Folly her peculiar care.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 604.

10 'Tis a gross error held in schools,
That Fortune always favours fools.

JOHN GAY, Fables, No. 12.

11 Fortune favours fools.

BARNABE GOOGE, Eglogs, l. 74. (1563)

Does my patron lose? fortune favours fools!
SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Belshazzar.

Fortune, that favours fools.

BEN JONSON, The Alchemist: Prologue; Every Man Out of His Humour, Act i, sc. 1.

12 When fortune favors a man too much, she makes him a fool. (Fortuna nimium quem fovet, stultum facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae, No. 198.

13 O, I am fortune's fool!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act iii, sc.
l. 141.

FOX

14 Like Æsop's fox, when he had lost his tail, would have all his fellow foxes cut off theirs.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader. (Æsop, Fables.
Bk. v, fab. 5.)

15 The fox has many tricks, and the hedgehog only one, but that is the best of all.

ERASMUS, Adagia.

The fox has many tricks, and the cat only one,
but that the best of all. (i.e., climbing a tree.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Though the fox run, the chicken hath wings.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

16 A fox should not be of the jury at a goose's trial.

The fox may grow grey but never good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4545.

With foxes we must play the fox.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 5797.

17 The more the fox is cursed, the better he fares.

ROBERT GREENE, Frier Bacon, Sc. 11. (1594)

The cursed fox thrives the best.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 1.

18 At length the fox is brought to the furrier.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

19 Where the lion's skin will not reach, a little of the fox's must be used. ("Ὅπου γὰρ ἡ λεωνίη μὴ ἐφικεῖται, προσπατῶντες ἐκείνῃ τὴν ἀλεωνίην.")

LYSANDER. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Lysander, Ch.
7, sec. 4.)

Craft, where strength doth fail,

And piece the lion with the fox's tail!

JOHN WILSON, Androm. Commemius, iv, 4.

The lion's skin too short, you know . . .

Was lengthened by the fox's tail;

And art supplies, where strength may fail.

UNKNOWN, Agreeable Companion, 182.

⁴ An old fox is shy of a trap.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, p. 116.

⁵ The fox changes his fur, but not his habits.
(Vulpem pilum mutare, non mores.)

SUETONIUS, Twelve Cæsars: Vespasian, Ch. 16, sec. 3. Suetonius says that this expression was used by an old herdsman in reference to Vespasian, who had promised him liberty, but refused to confer it without payment.

FRANCE AND THE FRENCH

I—France: Familiar Phrases

⁶ Nec Pluribus impar.

DOUVIER, Motto, of the device of the rising sun, adopted by Louis XIV of France. It has been variously translated, but "I shine on more worlds than one" is as good as any. Fournier says it was devised by an antiquarian named Douvier.

⁷ Liberty, equality, fraternity. (Liberté, égalité, fraternité.)

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN is said to have suggested this phrase, which became the watchword of the French revolution, and which is still placed upon the front of every public building in France.

Be my brother, or I will kill thee.

SEBASTIAN CHAMFORT, paraphrasing the revolutionary watchword, "Fraternity or death," which he called a "brotherhood of Cain." "We will have equality, should we descend for it to the tomb." (CARLYLE, French Revolution, ii, 1, 12.)

The binding of the hands, the thrusting of the head out of the little national sash-window, the crash of the axe.

MACAULAY, Essays: Memoirs of Barère.

I have lived. (J'ai vécu.)

JOSEPH SIEYÈS, after the Reign of Terror, when asked what he had done. (MIGNER, Notices Historiques, i, 81.)

⁸ Nothing is changed in France: there is only one Frenchman the more. (Il n'y a rien de changé en France; il n'y a qu'un Français de plus.)

COMTE D'ARTOIS, afterwards CHARLES X OF FRANCE, in proclamation published in the Moniteur upon the restoration of Louis XVIII, April 12, 1814. Said to have been composed in his name by Comte Beugnot. (Contemporary Review, Feb., 1854. DE VAULABELLE, Hist. Deux Restaurations, ii, 30.)

Nothing is changed: there is only one animal more. (Il n'y a qu'un bête de plus.)

Caricature circulated in Paris the day after the arrival of Comte d'Artois, celebrating the arrival of the first giraffe for the zoological gardens. (See LADY MORGAN, Diary, August, 1818.)

Nothing is altered: there is only one Austrian less. Epigram on the death of Francis I, Emperor of Austria, 1535, when Metternich remained at the head of affairs.

⁹ Unhappy France! Unhappy king! (Malheureuse France! Malheureux roi!)

ÉTIENNE BÉQUET, Heading, of an article in the Journal des Débats, when Charles X was driven from the French throne.

¹⁰ What is the Third Estate? Every thing. What part has it in government? Nothing. What does it want? To become something. (Qu'est-ce le Tiers État? Tout. Qu'a-t-il? Rien. Que veut-il? Y devenir quelque chose.)

SEBASTIAN CHAMFORT. Given to Sieyès as title for a pamphlet.

¹¹ We will not cede either an inch of our territory or a stone of our fortresses.

JULES FAYE, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a circular to the diplomatic representatives of France abroad, 6 Sept., 1870, immediately after the fall of the empire.

We are so well equipped, that, if the war were to last ten years, we should not have to buy the button of a soldier's gaiter.

MARSHAL LEROUX, in June, 1870, speaking of the preparedness of the French forces.

We accept it with a light heart.

ÉMILE OLLIVIER, Prime Minister of France, on July 15, 1870, speaking of the declaration of war against Germany.

¹² That will go, that will last. (Ça ira, ça tiendra.)

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, according to Cassagnac (History of the Girondists, i, 373), who says that the Ça ira, the revolutionary song of France, was composed by an itinerant musician who took the refrain from this mot of Franklin's on the revolution.

If a sparrow cannot fall without God's knowledge, how can an empire rise without His aid?

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, proposing that the sessions of the Constitutional Convention, May, 1787, be opened with prayer.

MARSHAL ANTOINE JUNOT, when a bursting shell threw some dirt on a dispatch he was writing from Bonaparte's dictation, Toulon, Dec., 1793.

² Ye sons of freedom, wake to glory!
Hark! hark! what myriads bid you rise!
Your children, wives, and grandsires hoary,
Behold their tears and hear their cries!
(Allons, enfants de la patrie!

Le jour de gloire est arrivé!
Contre nous de la tyrannie
L'étendard sanglant est levé.)
ROUGET DE LISLE, La Marseillaise. (1792)

³ M. le Grand is about to pass a bad quarter of an hour. (Un mauvais quart d'heure.)

LOUIS XIII OF FRANCE, on the execution of Cinq-Mars, in 1642. (LADY JACKSON, Old Paris, i, 227.) Lady Jackson asserts that this French proverb was first used on this occasion.

⁴ The marquise has a very unpleasant day for her journey.

LOUIS XV, seeing that it was raining hard on the day when the body of Madame de Pompadour was taken from Versailles to Paris. (Nouvelle Biog. Univ.)

⁵ They sing, they will pay. (Ils chantent, ils payeront.)

CARDINAL MAZARIN, referring to the fact that the French received each new tax with satirical poems.

France is an absolute monarchy, tempered by songs.

CHAMFORT, Characters and Anecdotes, quoting an anonymous wit.

⁶ The empire, it is peace. (L'empire, c'est la paix.)

NAPOLEON III, Address, before the Chamber of Commerce at Toulouse, 9 Oct., 1852. (FERROLD, Life of Louis Napoleon.) In Germany this pronouncement was parodied, "L'empire, c'est l'épée"—The empire, it is the sword. (Kladderdatsch, 8 Nov., 1862.)

⁷ The King of France went up the hill

With twenty thousand men;

The King of France came down the hill,
And ne'er went up again.

UNKNOWN, Old Tartelet's Song. Quoted in a tract entitled Pigges Corantoe, or Newses from the North, London, 1642.

The king of France with twenty thousand men
Went up the hill, and then came down again;
The king of Spain with twenty thousand more,
Climbed the same hill the French had climbed before.

UNKNOWN, The King of France. (Sloane MS. No. 1489) An earlier version of Old Tartelet's Song. For other versions see Halliwell, Nursery Rhymes.

The song, "The King of France with Forty Thousand Men," has reference to the raising of 40,000 men by Henry IV, of France, in 1609-1610.

JAMES HOWELL, Letter to James Crofts, 12 May, 1620.

⁸ Adieu, pleasant land of France. Oh, my country, the dearest in the world! (Adieu, plaisant pays de France, O ma patrie la plus chérie!)

UNKNOWN. A song supposed to have been sung by Mary Stuart on leaving France to become Queen of Scotland, but really a forgery by De Querlon. Béranger gave the lines wide currency by taking them as the refrain for his song, Les Adieux de Marie Stuart.

⁹ Look at Marianne! (Voilà la Marianne!)

Shouted by the Royalists at Albi in 1830, when the Republicans were parading through the streets a painting of Minerva supposed to personify the Republic. Marianne, in the local slang, meant a prostitute.

III—France: Her Faults

⁵ The thirst for truth is not a French passion. In everything appearance is preferred to reality, the outside to the inside, the fashion to the material, that which shines to that which profits, opinion to conscience. That is to say, the Frenchman's centre of gravity is always outside him,—he is always thinking of others, playing to the gallery.

The French woman says, "I am a woman and a Parisienne, and nothing foreign to me appears altogether human."

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

There is a quality in which no woman in the world can compete with her [the French woman], —it is the power of intellectual irritation. She will draw wit out of a fool.

A nation of monkeys with the throat of parrots.

JOSEPH SEVÈS, referring to the French, Letter to Mirabeau.

Your nation is divided into two species: the one of idle monkeys who mock at everything; and the other of tigers who tear.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Madame du Deffand, 21
Nov., 1766.

Something of the monkey aspect inseparable from a little Frenchman.

1787.

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN

10
The body of Benjamin Franklin, Printer,
(like the cover of an old book, its contents torn out and stripped of its lettering and gilding), lies here, food for worms; but the work shall not be lost, for it will (as he believed) appear once more in a new and more elegant edition, revised and corrected by the Author.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Epitaph on Himself.

Composed in 1728, at the age of twenty-two.

It was not placed on his monument. Franklin was admittedly familiar with Cotton
Mather's Magnalia Christi. See also EPI-TAPHUS. REVEALED BY THE AUTHOR.

ican Literature*, p. 98.)

It is hardly necessary to state that Franklin did not originate all the "Sayings of Poor Richard." He himself tells us that they were "the wisdom of many ages and nations." Any one familiar with Bacon, Rochefoucauld, and Rabelais, as well as others, will recognize old friends in some of these sayings, while a study of the collections of Proverbs, made in the early part of the last century by Ray and Palmer, will reveal the probable source from which Poor Richard pilfered. Yet with but few exceptions these maxims and aphorisms had been filtered through Franklin's brain, and were tinged with that mother wit which so strongly and individually marks
so much that he said and wrote.

PAUL LEICESTER FORD, *The Sayings of Poor
Richard: Introduction*.

14
Put matchless Franklin! What a few
Can hope to rival such as you.
Who seized from kings their sceptred pride
And turned the lightning's darts aside.

PHILIP FRENEAU, On the Death of Benjamin Franklin.

15
I succeed him; no one could replace him.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, to the Comte de Vergenues, when the latter remarked, "You replace Mr Franklin," as envoy to France.

1 Nations should wear mourning only for their benefactors . . . Antiquity would have raised altars to this mighty genius, who, to the advantage of mankind, compassing in his mind the heavens and the earth, was able to restrain alike thunderbolts and tyrants.

MIRABEAU, Address, moving that the French National Assembly should go into mourning, when Franklin's death was announced.

"Antiquity," said Mirabeau, "would raise Altars to honor him!"

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Franklin.

2 Prudence is a wooden Juggernaut, before whom Benjamin Franklin walks with the portly air of a high priest.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

3 He snatched the thunderbolt from heaven, then the sceptre from tyrants. (Eripuit cœlo fulmen, max sceptra tyrannis.)

A. R. J. TURGOT, Inscription, for the Houdon bust of Franklin, 1778. According to Condorcet (Vie de Turgot, p. 200) this is the phrase as Turgot wrote it, but it is frequently misquoted, "Eripuit cœlo fulmen, sceptrumque tyrannis." Frederick von der Trenck, at his trial before the Revolutionary Tribunal of Paris, 9 July, 1794, asserted that he was the author of the line. (GARTENLAUPE, Last Hours of Baron Trenck.) Marinius (Astronomie, i, 104) has the line, "Eripuit Jovi fulmen viresque tonandi." Cardinal Melchior de Polignac (Anti-Lucretius, i, 96) published in 1745, has, "Eripuit fulmenque Jovi, Phœboque sagittas."

Notwithstanding my experiments with electricity the thunderbolt continues to fall under our noses and beards; and as for the tyrant, there are a million of us still engaged at snatching away his sceptre.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Felix Nogaret, commenting on Turgot's inscription.

I—Freedom: Definitions

4 Ah! freedom is a noble thing!
Freedom makes man to have liking!
Freedom all solace to man gives!
He lives at ease, that freely lives!

5 Freedom is not caprice, but room to enlarge.
C. A. BARTOL, Radical Problems: Open Questions.

FREEDOM

6 O Freedom! thou art not, as poets dream,
A fair young girl, with light and delicate limbs,
And wavy tresses. . . . A bearded man,
Armed to the teeth, art thou; one mailed
hand

Grasps the broad shield, and one the sword;
thy brow

Glorious in beauty though it be, is scarred
With tokens of old wars; thy massive limbs
Are strong with struggling

BRYANT, The Antiquity of Freedom.

7 Perfect freedom is reserved for the man who lives by his own work and in that work does what he wants to do

R. G. COLLINGWOOD, Speculum Mentis.

8 Restraint from ill is freedom to the wise.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman.
Pt. ii, l. 206.

But what is Freedom? Rightly understood,
A universal license to be good
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Liberty.

Where justice reigns, 'tis freedom to obey.
MONTGOMERY, Greenland. Canto iv, l. 88.

That sweet bondage which is freedom's self.
SHREVE, Queen Mab. Canto ix, l. 76.

Nought nobler is than to be free;

The stars of heaven are free because

In amplitude of liberty

Their joy is to obey the laws.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Things that Are More Excellent.

9 Is freedom anything but the right to live as we wish? Nothing else ("Ἄλλο τι εἶναι ἐλευθερία

He is free who lives as he chooses ("ἐλευθερός εἶναι ὁ γάρ ὡς βούληται.")
EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 1.

Is any man free except the one who can live as he chooses? (An quisquam est alius liber, nisi ducere vitam Cui licet ut libuit?)
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 83.

The only freedom which deserves the name, is that of pursuing our own good in our own way, so long as we do not attempt to deprive others of theirs, or impede their efforts to obtain it.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 1.

10 No man is free who is not master of himself.
(Οὐδὲς ἐλευθερός ἐαυτοῦ μὴ κρατῶν.)

EPICTETUS [?], Encheiridion. Frag. 35. Sto-bæus ascribes this maxim to Pythagoras.

11 Who then is free? The wise man, who is lord over himself, whom neither poverty, nor death, nor bonds fright, who bravely defies his passions, and scorns ambition, who in himself is a whole, smoothed and rounded, so that nothing from outside can rest on the polished surface, and against whom Fortune in her onset is ever defeated.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 83.

There will be no true freedom without virtue, no true science without religion, no true industry without the fear of God and love to your fellow-citizens. Workers of England, be wise, and then you must be free, for you will be fit to be free.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Placard, 1848.

Men are free when they are in a living homeland, not when they are straying and breaking away . . . The most unfree souls go west, and shout of freedom. Men are freest when they are most unconscious of freedom.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 261.

Man is created free, and is free, even though born in chains. (Der Mensch ist frei geschaffen, ist frei Und würd' er in Ketten geboren.)

SCHILLER, Die Worte des Glaubens. St. 2.

What is freedom? It means not being a slave to any circumstance, to any constraint, to any chance; it means compelling Fortune to enter the lists on equal terms. (Quæ sit libertas? Nulli rei servire, nulli necessitati, nullis casibus, fortunam in æquum deducere.)

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. ii, sec. 9.

Freedom is re-created year by year,
In hearts wide open on the Godward side.

J. R. LOWELL, Freedom, l. 21.

What other liberty is there worth having,
if we have not freedom and peace in our minds,—if our inmost and most private man is but a sour and turbid pool?

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 26 Oct., 1853.

Freedom exists only where the people take care of the government.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, N. Y., 4 Sept., 1912.

Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom, must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. iv.

II—Freedom: Apothegms

The cause of freedom is the cause of God.

W. L. BOWLES, To Edmund Burke.

Whilst freedom is true to itself, everything becomes subject to it.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol.

Depend upon it, the lovers of freedom will be free.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, 1780.

Hereditary bondsmen! know ye not

Who would be free themselves must strike
the blow?

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto ii, st. 76.

They can only set free men free . . .

And there is no need of that.

Free men set themselves free.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, The Slave.

Freedom suppressed and again regained bites with keener fangs than freedom never endangered. (Actiores autem morsus sunt intermissæ libertatis quam retenta.)

Regained my freedom with a sigh.

BYRON, The Prisoner of Chillon. St. 14.

Freedom our pain, and plenty our disease.

DRYDEN, Abdolon and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 32.

Wherever snow falls, man is free. Where the orange blooms, man is the foe of man.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1862.

Countries are well cultivated, not as they are fertile, but as they are free.

MONTESQUIEU.

No bad man is free. (Τοῖνυ οὐδ' ἐλευθερός ἐστιν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 4.

Usually quoted as the Stoic maxim, "All bad men are slaves." (Πάντες κακοὶ δούλοι.)

No man who is in fear, or sorrow, or turmoil is free, but whoever is rid of sorrows and fears and turmoils, that man is by the self-same course rid also of slavery.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 24.

Let them fear bondage who are slaves to fear,
The sweetest freedom is an honest heart.

JOHN FORD, The Lady's Trial. Act i, sc. 3.

Bred in the lap of Republican Freedom.

WILLIAM GODWIN, Enquiry. Bk. ii, 12, 402.

We are not free; it was not intended we should be. A book of rules is placed in our cradle, and we never get rid of it until we reach our graves. Then we are free, and only then.

E. W. HOWE, Howe's Monthly.

1 There is no freedom on earth or in any star for those who deny freedom to others.

Abbé JOSEPH SIEYÈS, in the Constituent Assembly, 10 AUG., 1789. (DUMONT, Recollections of Mirabeau.)

9 O, lift your natures up;
Embrace our aims: work out your freedom.

TENNISON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 74.

10 Ne'er yet by force was freedom overcome.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. ii, l. 494.

11 Man is free at the moment he wishes to be.

VOLTARE, Brutus. Act ii, sc. 1.

III—Freedom: Its Virtues

12 The time will come when men
Will be as free and equal as the waves,
That seem to jostle, but that never jar.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Tower of Babel, Act ii, sc. 1.

13 Yet, Freedom, yet thy banner, torn but flying,

Streams like the thunder-storm against the wind.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 98.

And Freedom hallows with her tread
The silent cities of the dead.

BYRON, On the Star of "The Legion of Honour".

14 No! Freedom has a thousand charms to show That slaves, how'er contented, never know. . . .

Religion, virtue, truth—whate'er we call
A blessing—freedom is the pledge of all.

WILLIAM COWPER, Table Talk, l. 260.

15 I want free life, and I want fresh air;
And I sigh for the canter after the cattle,
The crack of the whips like shots in a battle,
The melody of hoofs, and horns, and heads
That wars, and wrangles, and scatters and spreads;

The green beneath and the blue above,
And dash, and danger, and life and love!

FRANK DESPREZ, Lucia.

16 I am as free as nature first made man,
Ere the base laws of servitude began,
When wild in woods the noble savage ran.

DRYDEN, Conquest of Granada. Act i, sc. 1.

17 My angel—his name is Freedom—
Choose him to be your king;
He shall cut pathways east and west,
And send you with his wing.

EMERSON, Boston Hymn.

For what avail the plough or sail,
Or land or life, if freedom fail?

EMERSON, Boston.

18 Aye, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod!
They have left unstained what there they

Freedom to worship God!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

19 Oh, only a free soul will never grow old! (O, nur eine freie Seele wird nicht alt.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 140.

20 All the arts of pleasure grow when suckled by freedom. (Von der Freiheit gesäugt wachsen die Künste der Lust.)

SCHILLER, Der Spaziergang, l. 122.

21 Of old sat Freedom on the heights,
The thunders breaking at her feet;
Above her shook the starry lights;
She heard the torrents meet.

TENNISON, Of Old Sat Freedom.

And Freedom rear'd in that august sunrise
Her beautiful bold brow.

TENNISON, The Poet.

1 Only free peoples can hold their purpose and their honor steady to a common end, and prefer the interests of mankind to any narrow interest of their own.

WOODROW WILSON, War Address to Congress, 2 April, 1917.

2 Me this unchartered freedom tires;
I feel the weight of chance-desires;
My hopes no more must change their name,
I long for a repose that ever is the same.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 5.

IV—Freedom: Its Defense

3 This hand, to tyrants ever sworn the foe,
For Freedom only deals the deadly blow;
Then sheathes in calm repose the deadly blade,
For gentle Peace in Freedom's ballowed shade.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Inscription in an Album, 1842. See 2065:1.

4 "Freedom!" their battle-cry,—
"Freedom! or leave to die!"
G. H. BOXER, The Black Regiment.

5 Righteous monarchs,
Justly to judge, with their own eyes should see;
To rule o'er freemen should themselves be free.

HENRY BROOKE, The Earl of Essex. Act i. The lines are spoken by Queen Elizabeth.

Johnson was present when a tragedy was read in which there occurred this line: Who rules o'er freemen should himself be free. The company admired it much.—"I cannot agree with you," said Johnson, "it might as well be said, Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat."

BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, June, 1784.

6 For he was Freedom's champion, one of those,
The few in number, who had not o'erstept
The charter to chastise which she bestows
On such as wield her weapons; he had kept
The whiteness of his soul, and thus men o'er him wept.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto iii, st. 57.

7 For Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeath'd by bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft is ever won.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 123.

The greatest glory of a freeborn people
Is to transmit that freedom to their children.

WILLIAM HAVARD, Regulus. Act v. sc. 4.

All we have of freedom, all we use or know—
This our fathers bought for us, long and long ago.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The Old Issue.

8 Hope, for a season, bade the world farewell,
And Freedom shrieked—as Kosciuszko fell!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 381.

O what a loud and fearful shriek was there! . . .
Ah me! they saw beneath a Hireling's sword
Their Kosciuszko fall!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Sonnet: Kosciuszko.

9 Yes! to this thought I hold with firm persistence;
The last result of wisdom stamps it true;

He only earns his freedom and existence
Who daily conquers them anew.

GOETHE, Faust. Act v, sc. 6, l. 63. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

10 Off with the fetters
That chafe and restrain!
Off with the chain!

RICHARD HOVEX, Vagabondia.

11 In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,

With a glory in his bosom that transfigures
you and me;

As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,

While God is marching on.

JULIA WARD HOWE, Battle Hymn of the Republic.

12 Freedom needs all her poets: it is they
Who give her aspirations wings,
And to the wiser law of music sway
Her wild imaginings.

J. R. LOWELL, To the Memory of Hood. St. 4.

13 'Tis sweeter to bleed for an age at thy shrine
Than to sleep but a moment in chains!

THOMAS MOORE, Remember the Glories of Brien the Brave.

O Freedom! once thy flame hath fled,
It never lights again.

THOMAS MOORE, Weep On, Weep On.

14 Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered, yet we have this consolation within us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly. . . . It would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as freedom should not be highly rated.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis: Introduction.

15 Freedom and Arts together fall;
Fools grant whate'er Ambition craves,
And men, once ignorant, are slaves.

POPE, Brutus: Chorus, l. 26.

16 Blandishments will not fascinate us, nor will threats of a "halter" intimidate. For, under God, we are determined that whosoever, whensoever, or howsoever we shall be called to make our exit, we will die free men.

JOSIAH QUINCY, Observations on the Boston Port Bill, 1774.

17 O Freedom! if to me belong

Nor mighty Milton's gift divine,
Nor Marvell's wit and graceful song,
Still with a love as deep and strong
As theirs, I lay, like them, my best gifts on thy shrine!

WHITTIER, Poem.

The nations lift their right hands up and swear
Their oath of freedom.

WHITTIER, Garibaldi.

V—Freedom of Speech

Liberty of speech inviteth and provoketh liberty to be used again, and so bringeth much to a man's knowledge.

⁶ Beware, I say, beware, how thou fallest in with indigent friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam. Vol. i, p. 215.

I once had Money and a Friend;
Of either, thought I store.

I lent my Money to my Friend
And took his word therefor.

I sought my Money from my Friend,
Which I had wanted long.

I lost my Money and my Friend;
Now was not that a wrong?

UNKNOWN, Money and a Friend.

⁷ Those friends who are above interest are seldom above jealousy.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 243.

⁸ I have begun to be a friend to myself. (Amicus esse mihi coepi.)

HICATO, Fragments. Frag. 26.

That was indeed a great benefit; such a person can never be alone. You may be sure that such a man is a friend to all mankind.

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epis. vi, sec. 7. Commenting on Hecato's declaration.

Be a friend to thyself, and others will be so too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 847.

phoi*. Frag. 9.

Friends have all things in common. (Κοινὰ τὰ φίλων ἴσα.)

PYTHAGORAS. According to Timæus, Pythagoras was the first to say this. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras, Sec. 10.)

¹² With friends all things are in common. (Ami-corum esse omnia communia.)

CICERO, De Officiis, Bk. i, sec. 16. Quoted as a Greek saying.

It is an old saying that friends have all things in common. (Communia esse amicorum inter se omnia.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 803.

¹³ Common are the possessions of friends.
(Ὅ κοινὰ ἀποφύλαται τὰ τῶν φίλων.)

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship, Sec. 110. Quoted as a proverb.

¹⁴ Oh, how you wrong our friendship, valiant youth.

With friends there is not such a word as debt:

Where amity is tied with band of truth,
All benefits are there in common set.

ELIZABETH, LADY CAREY, The Tragedy of Marian.

¹⁵ The benefits of fortune are common among friends.

WILLIAM FULLWOOD, Enemy of Idleness, 91.
(1593)

¹⁶ What is thine is mine, and all mine is thine.
(Quod tuum est meum est: omne meum est autem tuum.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 47.

¹⁷ He that has much in common with his fellow-men will have much in common with a friend.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epls. xlviii, 3.

IV—Friends: Their Choice

¹⁸ He is like to be mistaken, who makes choice of a covetous man for a friend, or relieth upon the reed of narrow and poltroon friendship.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i,
sec. 36.

²⁰ Friends should not be chosen to flatter. The quality we should prize is that rectitude which will shrink from no truth. Intimacies which increase vanity destroy friendship.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, *Note-Book:
Friendship*.

²¹ Acquaintance I would have, but when 't depends

Not on the number, but the choice of friends.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

True happiness
Consists not in the multitude of friends,
But in the worth and choice. Nor would I have Virtue a popular regard pursue:

Let them be good that love me, though but few.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act iii, sc. 2.

¹ I would not enter on my list of friends, (Tho' grac'd with polish'd manners and fine sense

Yet wanting sensibility) the man
Who needlessly sets foot upon a worm.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 560.

² Fate makes relatives, but choice makes friends. (Le sort fait les parents, le choix fait les amis.)

DEJULLE, Pitid.

Friends—those relatives that one makes for one's self. (Les amis—tes parents que l'on se fait soi-même.)

DESCHAMPS, L'Ami.

³ 'Tis thus that on the choice of friends
Our good or evil name depends

JOHN GAY, Fables: Old Woman and Her Cats.

⁴ Choose thy friends like thy books, few but choice.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. (1659)

⁵ Friends are like melons. Shall I tell you why?
To find one good, you must a hundred try.

CLAUDE MÉRMET, Epigram.

⁶ Do not be rash to make friends and, when once they are made, do not drop them.

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Solon. Sec. 16.)

⁷ Choose for your friend him that is wise and good, secret and just, ingenious and honest, and in those things which have a latitude, use your own liberty.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

When I choose my friend, I will not stay till I have received a kindness; but I will choose such a one that can do me many if I need them; but I mean such kindnesses which make me wiser, and which make me better.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

A good man is the best friend, and therefore soonest to be chosen, longer to be retained; and indeed, never to be parted with.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *A Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

V—Friends: Their Value

⁸ Without friends no one would choose to live, even if he had all other goods. ("Ἄνευ φίλων οὐδεὶς θανάτου ἔσται ἄνθρωπος ἀγαθὰ ἔχων.")

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, sec. 1.

Friends are an aid to the young, to guard them from error; to the elderly, to attend to their wants; and to supplement their failing power of action; to those in the prime of life, to assist them to noble deeds.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, sec. 1.

⁹ No receipt openeth the heart but a true friend.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

From quiet homes and first begining,
Out to the undiscovered ends,
There's nothing worth the wear of winning
But laughter and the love of friends.

HILAIRE BELLOC, Sonnets and Verse: Dedicatory Ode.

¹⁰ I wish my deadly foe no worse
Than want of friends, and empty purse.

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Farewell to Town.

¹¹ Hand Grasps at hand, eye lights eye in good friendship, and great hearts expand
And grow one in the sense of this world's life.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. St. 7.

¹² Elysium is as far as to
The very nearest room,
If in that room a friend await Felicity or doom.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 4.

¹³ Who is more indefatigable in toil, when there is occasion for toil, than a friend? Who is readier to rejoice in one's good fortune?
Whose praise is sweeter? From whose lips does one learn the truth with less pain? What fortress, what bulwarks, what arms are more steadfast than loyal hearts?

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 31.

¹⁴ Best friend, my well-spring in the wilderness!
GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii, l. 486.
Friend more divine than all divinites.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv, l. 8.

¹⁵ A day for toil, an hour for sport,
But for a friend is life too short.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

We take care of our health; we lay up money;
we make our roof tight, and our clothing sufficient; but who provides wisely that he shall not be wanting in the best property of all,—friends?

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

¹⁶ O friend, my bosom said,
Through thee alone the sky is arched,
Through thee the rose is red.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Friendship.

¹⁷ Of all the means to insure happiness throughout the whole of life, by far the most important is the acquisition of friends.

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. No. 27.

¹⁸ A friend in the market is better than money in the chest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 119.

¹ Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere,
Heav'n did a recompense as largely send:
He gave to Mis'ry all he had, a tear,
He gain'd from Heav'n ('twas all he wish'd) a friend.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 121.

² Of all the heavenly gifts that mortal men commend,
What trusty treasure in the world can countervail a friend?

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, Of Friendship.

³ Thy friend put in thy bosom: wear his eyes Still in thy heart, that he may see what's there.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 46.

Life without a friend is death without a witness.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

⁴ We hae friends ane or twa that aft gie us a ca',
To laugh when we're happy or grieve when we're wa'.

JAMES HOOE, Moggy and Me.

⁵ Whilst in my senses I shall prefer nothing to a pleasant friend. (Nil ego contulerim jucundo sanus amico.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 44.

⁶ Without a horse and a dog and a friend, man would perish.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, Parnassus: On the Great Wall.

⁷ A true friend is the greatest of all blessings, and the one which we take least thought to acquire. (Un véritable ami est le plus grand de tous les biens et celui de tous qu'on songe le moins à acquérir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No.
544.

⁸ The thread of our life would be dark, Heaven knows!

If it were not with friendship and love intertwined.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh! Think Not.

⁹ This is the comfort of friends, that though they may be said to die, yet their friendship and society are, in the best sense, ever present, because immortal.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

A true friend unbosoms freely, advises justly, assists readily, adventures boldly, takes all patiently, defends courageously, and continues a friend unchangably.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

¹⁰ Honest men esteem and value nothing so much in this world as a real friend. Such a one is, as it were, another self.

PILPAY, Choice of Friends. Ch. iv.

¹¹ Nothing but heaven itself is better than a friend who is really a friend. (Homini amico, qui est amicus ita uti nomen possidet, Nisi deos ei nil præstare.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 385. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

Above our life we love a steadfast friend.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad ii.

To have the greatest blessing, a true friend.

MASSEINGER, Parliament of Love. Act iii, sc. 2.

¹² Where there are friends, there is wealth. (Ubi amici, esse ibidem opes.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act ii, l. 14.

They are rich who have true friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4957.

I am wealthy in my friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 193.

¹³ Friends given by God in mercy and in love;
My counsellors, my comforters, and guides;
My joy in grief, my second bliss in joy;
Companions of my young desires; in doubt
My oracles; my wings in high pursuit.

O, I remember, and will ne'er forget
Our meeting spots, our chosen sacred hours,
Our burning words, that utter'd all the soul,
Our faces beaming with unearthly love;
Sorrow with sorrow sighing, hope with hope
Exulting, heart embracing heart entire.

POLLOX, The Course of Time. Bk. v, l. 315.

¹⁴ Friend to my life (which did you not prolong,
The world had wanted many an idle song)!

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 77.

¹⁵ Neither armies nor treasures form the bulwarks of a throne, but friends. (Non exercitus, neque thesauri, præsidia regni sunt, verum amici.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 10, sec. 4.

¹⁶ Keep thy friend Under thy own life's key.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
I, sc. 1, l. 75.

Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 62.

I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul remembering my good friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 46.

¹⁷ But every road is rough to me that has no friend to cheer it.

ELIZABETH SHANZ, Sheshinbeg.

¹⁸ It is strange that a man can always tell how many sheep he has, but he cannot tell how many friends he has, so slight is the value he puts upon them.

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 13.)

WILLIAM SOMERVELL, The Hip.

² 'Tis pleasant to have found and proved a friend;

For him who good for good returns I hold
A friend more precious than unnumbered gold.

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 671.

³ Nothing can be purchased which is better than a firm friend. (Amico firmo nihil emelius potest.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. I, sec. 12.

⁴ Nothing makes the earth seem so spacious as to have friends at a distance; they make the latitudes and longitudes.

THOREAU, Letter to Mrs. E. Castleton, 22 May, 1843.

⁵ A friend is worth all hazards we can run.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night II, l. 571.

⁶ There is no treasure which may be compared unto a faithful friend;

Gold soon decayeth, and worldly wealth consumeth, and wasteth in the wind;
But love once planted in a perfect and pure mind endureth weal and woe;

The frowns of fortune, come they never so unkind, cannot it overthrow.

UNKNOWN, The Bride's Good-Morning. (Roxburghe Ballads.)

VI—Friends: Their Loyalty

⁷ I have loved my friends as I do virtue, my soul, my God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. II, sec. 5.

⁸ Let us be friends, Cinna, it is I who invite you. (Soyons amis, Cinna, c'est moi qui t'en convie.)

CORNELIUS, Cinna. Act v, sc. 3.

⁹ Then come the wild weather, come sleet or come snow,

We will stand by each other, however it blow.
SIMON DACH, Annie of Tharaw, l. 7. (Longfellow, tr.)

¹⁰ "Walk, my boy," replied the captain; "in the Proverbs of Solomon you will find the following words: 'May we never want a friend in need, nor a bottle to give him!' When found, make a note of."

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Vol. I, ch. 13.

What is the odds so long as the fire of souls is kindled at the taper of conviviality, and the wing of friendship never moults a feather?

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 2.

¹¹ Here's to the friends we can trust

When storms of adversity blow;
May they live in our songs and be nearest our hearts,

Nor depart like the year that's awa'.

JOHN DUNLOP, The Year That's Awa'.

¹² A friend ought to shun no pain, to stand his friend in stead.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pythias.

¹³ So, if I live or die to serve my friend,
'Tis for my love—'tis for my friend alone,
And not for any rate that friendship bears
In heaven or on earth.

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 433. (Dillon, tr.)

¹⁷ A good friend never offends.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 23. (1659)

¹⁸ Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,

Why wert thou not born in my father's dwelling?

CHARLES LAMB, The Old Familiar Faces.

¹⁹ Yes, we must ever be friends; and of all whp offer you friendship

Let me be ever the first, the truest, the nearest and dearest!

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. vi, l. 72.

²⁰ A true friend is forever a friend.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 71.

²¹ A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly; and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 24.

Neither make thy friend equal to a brother. (Μὴδὲ καὶ σὺν ἑτῷ ἵσον ἀδελφῷ ἀγαπῶν.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 707.

²² But oh! if grief thy steps attend,
If want, if sickness be thy lot,

And thou require a soothing friend,
Forget me not, forget me not!

AMELIA OPRE, Go, Youth Beloved.

Convey thy love to thy friend, as an arrow to the mark, to stick there, not as a ball against the wall, to rebound back to thee.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. iv, No. 100.

He is a good friend that doth thee good.
RIVERS, Dictes and Sayings, 57. (1477)

But he is my friend
That helps me in the end.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, iii, 288. (1640)

He was my friend, faithful and just to me.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 90.

If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 2, l. 175.

Life hath no joy like his who fights with Fate
Shoulder to shoulder with a stricken friend.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, Midshipman Lanyon.

To God, thy country, and thy friend be true.
HENRY VAUGHAN, Rules and Lessons. No. 8.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

UNKNOWN, Say It Now.

VII—Friends: Their Faults

While friends we were, the hot debates
That rose 'twixt you and me!
Now we are mere associates,
And never disagree.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

In friendship I early was taught to believe; . . .

I have found that a friend may profess, yet deceive.

BYRON, Lines to the Rev. J. T. Becker. St. 7.

A good friend, but bad acquaintance.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 54.

No discord should arise between friends, but if it does, then our care should be that the friendships appear to have been burned out rather than to have been stamped out.

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 21, sec. 78.

Never break off friendship, rather untie it, when those you become bound to appear cheats. Hall says, "I will use my friend as Moses did his rod:

while it was a rod he held it familiarly in his hand; When once a serpent, he ran away from it."

JAMES FUCKLE, The Club.

All are not friends that speak us fair.

JOHN CLAREE, Paramiologia, 128. (1639)

A slender acquaintance with the world must convince every man, that actions, not words, are the true criterion of the attachment of friends; and that the most liberal professions of good-will are very far from being the surest marks of it.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Social Maxims. Friendship.

There is a friend, which is only a friend in name.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxxvii, l.

Our best friends are the source of our greatest sorrow and bitterness.

CANDID FRIEND, see under CANDOR.

A broken friendship may be soldered, but will never be sound.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 27.

He who betrays his friend, shall never be
Under one roof, or in one ship, with me.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2. (Swift, tr.)

A friend is long a-getting and soon lost.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 324. (1580)

They that study man say of a friend, There's nothing in the world that's harder found, nor sooner lost.

WEBSTER AND ROWLEY, Cure for a Cuckold.
Act iii, sc. 1. (1661)

Here our long web of friendship I untwist.
MASSINGER, The Fatal Downy. Act. iii, sc. 1.

VIII—Friends and Enemies

3 If he draw aside from your proper end,
No enemy like a bosom friend.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

4 For much better it is
To bide a friend's anger than a foe's kiss.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Mirror of Good Manners, 21. (1570)

A friend's frown is better than a foe's smile.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, (1659)

5 Our friends, the enemy. (Nos amis, les ennemis.)

BÉRANGER, L'Opinion de ces Demoiselles. The French are said to have used the expression, "Nos amis, nos ennemis," when the Allies entered Paris after the abdication of Napoleon in 1814.

6 I have tried to make friends by corporeal gifts, but have only made enemies. I have never made friends but by spiritual gifts, by severe contentions of friendship, and the burning fire of thought.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Jerusalem.

7 Thy friendship oft has made my heart to ache:—

Do be my enemy, for friendship's sake.

WILLIAM BLAKE, To Hayley.

8 In life it is difficult to say who do you the most mischief, enemies with the worst intentions, or friends with the best.

BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It? Bk. III, ch. 17, heading.

9 Angry friendship is sometimes as bad as calm enmity.

EDMUND BURKE, An Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs.

10 For what man that hath friends through fortune,
Mishap will make them enemies, I guess:

This proverb is full sooth.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 254.

I no doubt deserved my enemies, but I don't believe I deserved my friends.

WALT WHITMAN, (BRADFORD, Biography and the Human Heart, p. 75.)

11 Greatly his foes he dreads, but more his friends;

He hurts me most who lavishly commends.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 19.

Friends I have made, whom Envy must commend,
But not one foe whom I would wish a friend.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Conference, l. 297.

12 Our enmities mortal, our friendships eternal.
(Mortalis inimicitias, sempiternas amicitias.)

CICERO, Pro Roburio Postumo, Ch. 12, sec. 33.

13 We should render a service to a friend to bind him closer to us, and to an enemy to make a friend of him.

CLEOBULUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus, 5.)

14 It is always safe to learn, even from our enemies; seldom safe to venture to instruct, even our friends.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, No. 286.

15 We read that we ought to forgive our enemies; but we do not read that we ought to forgive our friends.

COSIMO DE' MEDICI, of perfidious friends.
(BACON, Apothegms, No. 206.)

16 Friends are as dangerous as enemies.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Essays: Schloesser's Literary History.

17 He that can be a worthy enemy, will, when reconciled, be a worthier friend.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves: Of Reconciling Enemies.

18 You and I were long friends; you are now my enemy, and I am

Yours, Benjamin Franklin.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to William Strahan, 5 July, 1775.

19 Do good to thy friend to keep him, to thy enemy to gain him.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanac.

20 An open foe may prove a curse,
But a pretended friend is worse.

JOHN GAY, Fables, Pt. i, No. 17.

21 He rose without a friend, and sat down without an enemy.

HENRY GRATTAN, of Dr. Lucas after a speech in the Irish Parliament.

22 It is a misfortune for a man not to have a friend in the world, but for that reason he shall have no enemy.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 143.

He will never have true friends who is afraid of making enemies.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, No. 401.

No man's defects sought they to know;

So never made themselves a foe.

No man's good deeds did they commend;

So never rais'd themselves a friend.

MATTHEW PRATER, An Epitaph.

He makes no friend who never made a foe.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1082.

1 Save a man from his friends, and leave him struggle with his enemies.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, 328.

2 Invite your friend to a feast, but leave your enemy alone. (Τὸν φίλον ἐπὶ δαίρα καλεῖς, τὸν δ' ἐχθρὸν ἄρας.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 342.

3 Not hate, but glory, made these chiefs contend;

And each brave foe was in his soul a friend.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 364. (Pope, tr.)

4 I can defend myself from my enemies, but not from my friends.

HOMER, BEN ISAAC, Moral Maxims. (c. 870)

Appears in various forms in all literatures.

A feigned friend God shield me from his danger,
For well I'll save myself from foe and stranger.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fits, and Fancies.

From him whom I trust, God defend me; for from him whom I trust not I will defend myself.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, letter 75.

Against a foe I can myself defend,—
But Heaven protect me from a blundering friend!
D'ARCY WENTWORTH THOMPSON, Sales Attici.
Defend me from my friends; I can defend myself from my enemies.

MARÉCHAL DE VILLARS, when taking leave of Louis XIV. Also attributed in slightly different form to Voltaire: "May God defend me from my friends; I can defend myself from my enemies." The saying is, of course, much older. (See Notes and Queries, ser. vii,
No. 10, p. 428.)

5 When falls our dearest friend,
There may be refuge with our direst foe.
J. S. KNOWLES, The Wife. Act v, sc. 2.

6 Nothing is so dangerous as an ignorant friend:
better have a wise enemy. (Rien n'est si dangereux qu'un ami ignorant; Mieux vaudrait un sage ennemi.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 10.

Better to have a loving friend
Than ten admiring foes.

GEORGE MACDONALD, After Thomas à Kempis.
St. 2.

7 Our best friend is a blundering enemy.
JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 82.

8 If you never tell your secret to your friend, you will never fear him when he becomes your enemy.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 695.

9 Trust not yourself; but your defects to know,
Make use of ev'ry friend—and ev'ry foe.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 13.

10 What war could ravish, commerce could bestow,
And he return'd a friend who came a foe.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iii, l. 205.

11 To lasting toils expos'd, and endless cares,
To open dangers, and to secret snares;
To malice which the vengeful foe intends,
And the more dangerous love of seeming
friends.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. iii, l. 75.

12 Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 5.

One cried: "The wounds are faithful of a friend:
The wilderness shall blossom as the rose."
One answered: "Render the veil, declare the end, Strengthen her ere she goes."

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, From House to House.

13 Treat your friend as if he might become an enemy.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 401.

14 Inflict not on an enemy every injury in your power, for he may afterwards become your friend.

SADI, The Gulistan: Rules for Conduct in Life. No. 10.

15 It is better to break off a thousand friendships, than to endure the sight of a single enemy.

SADI, The Gulistan: Of Youth and Love.
No. 15.

16 Dear is my friend—yet from my foe, as from my friend, comes good:
My friend shows what I can do, and my foe
what I should

SCHILLER, Votive Tablets: Friend and Foe.

17 The zeal of friends it is that razes me,
And not the hate of enemies.
(Der Freunde Eifer ist's, der mich
Zu Grunde richtet, nicht der Hass der Feinde.)
SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act iii, sc. 18.

18 The angry prayers of our enemies make us falsely afraid, and the affection of our friends spoils us with kindly wishes.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epist. xciv, 54.

19 The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;

The poor advanced makes friends of enemies,
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend;
For who not needs shall never lack a friend,
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 214.

1 Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 4, l. 28.

2 The private wound is deepest: O Time most accurst
'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act v, sc. 4, l. 71.

3 Having some friends whom he loves dearly,
And no lack of foes, whom he laughs at sincerely.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Robert the Rhymer's Account of Himself.

4 Better new friend than an old foe.
SPENSER, Færie Queene. Bk. i, canto ii, st. 27.

Faint friends when they fall out most cruel foemen be.

SPENSER, Færie Queene. Bk. iv, canto ix, st. 27.

5 One enemy can do more hurt than ten friends can do good.

SWIFT, Letter, 30 May, 1710. (Quoted.)

6 He who has a thousand friends has not a friend to spare,
And he who has one enemy shall meet him everywhere.

ALI BEN ABU TALEB. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. Emerson ascribes the couplet to Omar Khayyâm.)

Whatever the number of a man's friends, there will be times in his life when he has one too few;
but if he has only one enemy, he is lucky indeed
if he has not one too many.

BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It?
Bk. ix, ch. 3.

The world is large when its weary leagues two loving hearts divide;

But the world is small when your enemy is loose
on the other side.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Distance.

7 Some great misfortune to portend,
No enemy can match a friend.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 119.

8 Foes in the forum in the field were friends,
By social danger bound.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iii, l. 218.

9 It takes your enemy and your friend, working together, to hurt you to the heart: the one to slander you and the other to get the news to you.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

10 If I have not a friend, God send me an enemy, that I may hear of my faults.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Sermons.

11 As good a foe that hurts not, as a friend that helps not.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dulle, p. 19.

12 A foe to God was ne'er true friend to man;
Some sinister intent taints all he does.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 704.

13 Perish our friends, so foes may die withal.
(Ἐπεὶ φίλοι οὖν ἐχθροί.)

UNKNOWN. QUOTED BY CICERO, Pro Rege Diao- laro, ix, 25, who puts it into Latin: Perant amici, dum inimici una interdicant. Cicero condemns the sentiment.

IX—Friends and Adversity

14 Faithful friends are hard to find:

Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Passionate Pilgrim, l. 407.

15 Let no man grumble when his friends fall off,
As they will do like leaves at the first breeze:
When your affairs come round, one way or t' other,

Go to the coffee-house, and take another.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 48.

16 If thou be poor, thy brother hateth thee,
And all thy friends do flee from thee, alas!

CHAUCER, Man of Law's Tale: Prologue, l. 22.

17 While the pot boils, friendship blooms.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, 95.

Pot friendship; cupboard love. (Ollæ amicitia.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

18 Interiorly, most people enjoy the inferiority of their best friends.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

19 Be more ready to visit friends in adversity than in prosperity.

CRILON. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Chilon. Sec. 3.)

Come slowly to the banquets of thy friends, but swiftly to their misfortunes.

CRILON. (STOBEIUS, Florilegium, iii, 79, 7.)

20 The swallows are at hand in summer time, but in cold weather they are driven away.

... So false friends are at hand in life's clear weather, but as soon as they see the winter of misfortune, they all fly away.

CICERO, Ad Herennium. Bk. iv, sec. 48.

Like summer friends,

Flies of estate and sunshine.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Answer.

When the sun shines on you, you see your friends.
Friends are the thermometers by which one may judge the temperature of our fortunes.

COUNTESS OF BLESSINGTON, Commonplace Book.

O summer-friendship,
Whose flattering leaves, that shadow'd us in our Prosperity, with the least gust drop off
In the autumn of adversity!

MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour. Act iii, sc. 1.

For men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
3, l. 78.

¹
In prosperity our friends know us; in adversity we know our friends.

CHEURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

²
Our very best friends have a tincture of jealousy even in their friendship.
C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 121.

³
For friendship, of itself a holy tie,
Is made more sacred by adversity.
DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 47.

⁴
If we from wealth to poverty descend, Want gives to know the flatterer from the friend.

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath: Her Tale, l. 485.

⁵
When Fortune's fickle, the faithful friend is found. (Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur.)

ENNIUS. (CICERO, De Amicitia, xvii, 64.)

⁶
In prosperity it is very easy to find a friend;
but in adversity it is the most difficult of all things.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 127.

⁷ Friends disappear with the dregs from the empty wine casks. (Diffugiunt cadis Cum sæce siccatis, amici.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 35, l. 26.

So vanish friendships only made in wine.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 379.

⁸
In time of prosperity friends will be plenty;
In time of adversity not one among twenty.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 20. (1659)

⁹
In the adversity of our best friends we always find something which does not displease us. (Dans l'adversité de nos meilleurs amis nous trouvons toujours quelque chose qui ne nous déplaît pas.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 99. This maxim was withdrawn from the third edition, probably because of the outcry it occasioned. (Maximes Supprimées. No. 583.)

This maxim more than all the rest

Is thought too base for human breast:

"In all distresses of our friends,
We first consult our private ends;
While nature, kindly bent to ease us,
Points out some circumstance to please us."

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 5. Swift defends the sentiment on the ground that good fortune is always sentimentally enhanced by contrast with the misfortunes of others.

Those who know the deception and wickedness of the human heart will not be either romantic or blind enough to deny what Rochefoucauld and Swift have affirmed as a general truth.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emchirdion. Cent. iv, 100.

¹ Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels

Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away

Like water from ye, never found again

But where they mean to sink ye.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 126.

² I have learned which friends of mine are true and which are false, now that I am no longer able to reward or punish either. (Tum se intellexisse, quos fidos amicos habuisset, quos infidos, cum jam neutris gratiam referre posset.)

Now that I no longer need,

I can get full many a feed.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

⁴ There is an old time toast which is golden for its beauty. "When you ascend the hill of prosperity may you not meet a friend."
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

X—Friend: A Friend in Need

⁵ A friend is known in necessity.

GEORGE ASHBY, Poems, p. 67. (c. 1470)

⁶ He that is thy friend indeed,

He will help thee in thy need:

If thou sorrow, he will weep;

If thou wake, he cannot sleep;

Thus of every grief in heart

He with thee doth bear a part.

These are certain signs to show

Faithful friend from faltering foe.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Passionate Pilgrim, l. 423.

⁷ To be a strong hand in the dark to another in a time of need.

HUGH BLACK, The Culture of Friendship.

⁸ Three things are known only in three places: Valour, which knows itself only in war; Wisdom, only in anger; and Friendship, only in need.

EMERSON, Journal, 1863. Quoted as a Persian saying.

⁹ Behold how much it stands a man in stead,

To have a friend answer in time of need.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. ii, No. 101. (1618)

¹⁰

But in deed,

A friend is never known till a man hath need.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

¹¹

At need shall men prove their friends.

ROBERT MANNYNG (ROBERT DE BRUNNE), Handlyng Synne, l. 2251. (1303)

¹²

A friend is not known but in need.

GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 83. (1683)

¹³

A friend in a pinch is a friend in deed, when deeds are needed (Is est amicus, qui in re dubia re juvat, ubi rest opus.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 113. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Nothing is dearer to a man than a friend in need.

(Nihil homini amicost opportunum amicus.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 425. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

¹⁴

I am not of that feather to shake off

My friend when he must need me.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 1, l. 100.

¹⁵

A safe companion is he that helps at need.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred, 247. (c. 1270)

A friend thou art in deed,

That helps thy friend in time of nipping need.

THOMAS HOWELL, Devises, 58. (1581)

A friend in need is a friend indeed.

RICHARD GRAVES, The Spiritual Quixote. Bk. vii, ch. 22, heading. (1772)

¹⁶

It is good to have friends, but bad to need them.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, 15. (1669)

XI—Friends: Old and New

¹⁷

No friend's a friend until he prove a friend.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Faithful Friends. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 50.

¹⁸

Are new friends who are worthy of friendship, to be preferred to old friends? The question is unworthy of a human being, for there should be no surfeit of friendships as there is of other things; and, as in the case of wines that improve with age, the oldest friendships ought to be the most delightful; moreover, the well-known adage is true: "Men must eat many a peck of salt together before the claims of friendship are fulfilled." (Multos modios salis simul edendos esse, ut amicitia munus expletum sit.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 19, sec. 67. See also under SALT.

¹⁹

Old friends burn dim, like lamps in noisome air;

Love them for what they are; nor love them less,

Because to thee they are not what they were.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Duty Surviving Self-Love.

1 Forsake not an old friend; for the new is not comparable to him: a new friend is as new wine; when it is old, thou shalt drink it with pleasure.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, ix, 10.

As old wood is best to burn, old horse to ride, old books to read, and old wine to drink, so are old friends always most trusty to use.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, 19. (1589)
For other quotations on old wine, old books, etc., see under AGE: ITS COMPENSATIONS.

2 Old friendships are like meats served up repeatedly, cold, comfortless, and distasteful. The stomach turns against them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, The Plain Speaker: On the Pleasure of Hating.

3 An old friend is a new house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 It is delightful to me to go mad over a friend restored to me. (Recepto Dulci mihi furere est amico.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. ii, ode 7, l. 27.

They are twice as good friends as they were before [they quarrelled].

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 62.

5 And newest friend is oldest friend in this: That, waiting him, we longest grieved to miss One thing we sought.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, My New Friend.

6 I find friendship to be like wine, raw when new, ripened with age, the true old man's milk and restorative cordial.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xlii, p. 77.

7 Ah, how good it feels!

The hand of an old friend.

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act iv, sc. 1.

8 We have been friends together

In sunshine and in shade.

CAROLINE NORTON, We Have Been Friends.

9 How much the best of a man's friends is his oldest friend! (Quam veterrimus homini optimus est amicus.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 71.

10 Old friends are best. King James used to call for his old shoes, for they were easiest for his feet.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Friends.

11 Should auld acquaintance be forgot, and never thought upon?

FRANCIS SMYTH, Auld Lang Syne. (JAMES

WATSON, Choice Collection of Scots Poems. Pt. iii, 1711.) This is the earliest known version of Auld Lang Syne, and is sometimes attributed to Sir Robert Ayton.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

Though they return with scars?

ALLAN RAMSAY, Auld Lang Syne. 1721. (See FITZGERALD, Stories of Famous Songs.)

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And never brought to mind?

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,

And auld lang syne?

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne. (1788) Burns himself in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop, speaks of Auld Lang Syne as an "old fragment," but, with the exception of the first stanza, the song is his. Allan Ramsay's song suggested nothing except the opening line and the title.

12 It's an owercome sooth for age an' youth,

And it brooks wi' nae denial,

That the dearest friends are the auldest friends,

And the young are just on trial.

R. L. STEVENSON, It's an Owercome Sooth.

13 Be courteous to all, but intimate with few, and let those few be well tried before you give them your confidence. True friendship is a plant of slow growth, and must undergo and withstand the shocks of adversity before it is entitled to the appellation.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter, Newburgh, 15 Jan., 1783.

14 Friendship's the wine of life; but friendship new . . .

Is neither strong nor pure.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 582.

XII—Friends: Behavior

15 We should behave to our friends as we would wish our friends to behave to us. (Ἵνα ὡς ἐλπίμεθα ἀλλοτρίοι ἑμῶν προσέποιεσθαι.)

ARISTOTLE (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, Sec. 21.)

If men are friends, there is no need of justice between them; whereas when they are just, they still need friendship. The just possess friendliness in its highest form.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, ch. 1, sec. 5.

16 My son, keep well thy tongue, and keep thy friend.

CHAUCER, The Manciples Tale, l. 215.

17 Between friends, frequent reproofs make the friendship distant.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 26.

Reprove your friends in secret, praise them openly. (Secrete amicos admone, lauda palam.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae.

Alas! I then have chid away my friend!

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 87.

¹ Be kind to my remains: and O defend,
Against your judgment, your departed friend!
DRYDEN, To Mr. Congreve, l. 72.

² To act the part of a true friend requires more conscientious feeling than to fill with credit and complacency any other station or capacity in social life.

SARAH STICKNEY ELLIS, Pictures of Private Life. Ser. ii, ch. 4.

³ There can never be deep peace between two spirits, never mutual respect, until, in their dialogue, each stands for the whole world.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

⁴ Better be a nettle in the side of your friend than his echo.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

If I mayn't tell you what I feel, what is the use of a friend?

THACKERAY, Unpublished Letters.

⁵ Do not expect friends to do for you what you can do for yourself. (Ne quid expectes amicos, quod tute agere possies.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Satura. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. ii, epis. 29, sec. 20.) The conclusion of a poetical rendering of Æsop's fable of the lark.

⁶ When our friends are present, we ought to treat them well; and when they are absent, to speak of them well.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 155.

⁷ He does good to himself who does good to his friend. (Sibi benefacit qui benefacit amico.)

ERASMUS, Familiar Colloquies.

⁸ The discussing the characters and foibles of common friends is a great sweetener and cement of friendship.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. No. 20.

⁹ When my friends are one-eyed, I look at their profile. (Quand mes amis sont borgnes, je les regarde de profil.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 4.

¹⁰ A judicious friend is better than a zealous.

J. S. KNOWLES, The Love Chase. Act ii, sc. 1.

¹¹ The greatest endeavor of friendship is not to show our faults to a friend, but to make him see his own. (Le plus grand effort de l'amitié n'est pas de montrer nos défauts à un ami; c'est de lui faire voir les siens.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 410.

¹² Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth
the countenance of his friend.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 17.

¹³ Unless you bear with the faults of a friend, you betray your own. (Amici vitium ni feras, facis tua.)

PULLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 10.

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 86.

¹⁴ A friend must not be wounded, even in jest.
(Amicum lœdere ne joco quidem licet.)

PULLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 54.

¹⁵ The inclination to lose a friend rather than a jest should be far from us. (Potius amicum quam dictum perendi.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratorio, vi, 3.

He that will lose his friend for a jest, deserves to die a beggar by the bargain.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and Profane
States: Of Jest*.

It is better to lose a new jest than an old friend.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, Vol. ii, p. 125. (1593)

¹⁶ When friendship is settled, you must trust;
before it is formed, you must pass judgment.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliū. Ep. iii, sec. 2.

¹⁷ The amity that wisdom knits not, folly
May easily untie.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 3, 110.

¹⁸ If it is abuse, why one is always sure to bear of it from one damned good-natured friend or another.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act i, sc. 1.

¹⁹ Hast thou a friend, as heart may wish at will?

Then use him so, to have his friendship still.
THOMAS YUSSE, Poems for a Parlour.

²⁰ The smoothest course of nature has its pains,
And truest friends, through error, wound our
rest.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 278.

All like the purchase, few the price will pay,
And this makes friends such miracles below.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 556.

XIII—Friends: Their Loss

See also Death: They Are All Gone

²¹ A man dies as often as he loses his friends.
(Homo toties moritur quoties amittit suos.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 17.

²² King Pandion he is dead,
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Philomel.

Friends depart, and memory takes them
To her caverns, pure and deep.

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Teach Me to Forget.

²³ Friends of my youth, a last adieu! haply some day we meet again;

Yet ne'er the self-same men shall meet; the years shall make us other men.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. i, st.
16

Farewell, dear friend, that smile, that harmless
mirth,

No more shall gladden our domestic hearth.

H. F. CARY, Epitaph on Charles Lamb.

1
As we sail through life towards death,
Bound unto the same port—heaven,—
Friend, what years could us divide?

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, A Christmas Blessing.

2
Let the soul be assured that somewhere in the universe it should rejoin its friend, and it would be content and cheerful alone for a thousand years

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

3
Green be the turf above thee,
Friend of my better days!
None knew thee but to love thee,
Nor named thee but to praise

PITZ-GREENE HALLIACK, On the Death of Joseph Rodman Drake.

For my boyhood's friend hath fallen, the pillar of my trust,

The true, the wise, the beautiful, is sleeping in the dust

G. S. HILLARD, On The Death of Motley.

4
I see no comfort in outliving one's friends, and remaining a mere monument of the times which are past.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 297.

5
Friendship between mortals can be contracted on no other terms than that one must sometime mourn for the other's death.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 17.

6
Thrice blessed are our friends:

They come, they stay—

And presently go away.

RICHARD R. KIRK, Thrice Blessed.

7
Let the loss of our friends be our only grief, and the apprehension of displeasing them
our only fear.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Epicurus, Leontion, and Ternaissa.

8
Come back! ye friends, whose lives are ended,
Come back, with all that light attended,
Which seemed to darken and decay
When ye arose and went away!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

O friend! O best of friends! Thy absence more Than the impending night darkens the landscape o'er!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

9
Friend after friend departs!

Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts
That finds not here an end.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Friends.

10
When I remember all
The friends, so link'd together,
I've seen around me fall,

Like leaves in wintry weather,
I feel like one Who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,

Whose lights are fled, Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!

THOMAS MOORE, Off in the Still Night.

The friends, who in our sunshine live,

When winter comes, are flown;

And he who has but tears to give,

Must weep those tears alone.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Thou! Who Dry'st the Mourner's Tear.

11
Of all my many friends, scarcely two or three of you are left to me (Vix duo tresve mihi de tot superestis amici)

OWID, Tristia. Bk i, eleg 5, l. 33.

12
For all are friends in heaven, all faithful
friends,

And many friendships in the days of time

Begun are lasting here, and growing still

ROBERT POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. v,
l. 336.

13
Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 23.

These are two friends whose lives were undivided:

So let their memory be, now they have glided
Under the grave; let not their bones be parted,
For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.

SHELLEY, Epitaph.

14
To lose a friend is the greatest of all evils, but endeavour rather to rejoice that you possessed him than to mourn his loss.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. xcix, 3.

To wail friends lost

Is not by much so wholesome-profitable

As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 759.

15
This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 293.

16
Friends I have had both old and young,
And ale we drank and songs we sung:

Enough you know when this is said,

That, one and all, they died in bed.

In bed they died, and I'll not go

Where all my friends have perished so.
CHARLES HENRY WEBB, Dum Vivamus Viligiamus.

1 But Fate ordains the dearest friends must part.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 232.

For friends, you know, must part.

UNKNOWN, Roxburgh Ballads, i, 253. (1620)

2 Each friend by fate snatch'd from us is a plume

Pluck'd from the wing of human vanity,
Which makes us stoop from our ærial heights
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 285.

FRIENDSHIP

I—Friendship: Definitions

3 It redoubleth joys and cutteth griefs in halves.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

4 Friendship is a word the very sight of which in print makes the heart warm

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta, Second Series: Emerson

5 Friendship! mysterious cement of the soul!
Sweet'ner of life, and solder of society!
ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 88.

6 Friendship is a slow grower, and never thrives unless ingrafted upon a stock of known and reciprocal merit

LOUIS CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

7 Friendship is nothing else than an accord in all things, human and divine, conjoined with mutual good-will and affection (Est enim amicitia nihil aliud nisi omnium divinarum humanarumque rerum cum benevolentia et caritate consensio)

CICERO, De Amicitia Ch. 6, sec. 20.

8 Friendship is a sheltering tree.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age.

9 Friendship is the gift of the gods, and the most precious boon to man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 16 July, 1855.

10 'Tis a French definition of friendship, rien que s'entendre, good understanding.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

I hate the prostitution of the name of friendship to signify modish and worldly alliances.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

11 Without confidence there is no friendship.
(ἢ ὁ ἀσπίστος αἰδέ φίλος.)

EPICURUS. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 11.)

12 Friendship is a disinterested commerce between equals.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i,
sc. 1.

Full of this maxim, often heard in trade,
Friendship with none but equals should be made.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, Fragment.

There is a maxim indeed which says—"Friendship can only subsist between equals."

THOMAS HOLCROFT, The School for Arragance.
Act iii, sc. 1.

Friendship is seldom lasting, but between equals, or where the superiority on one side is reduced by some equivalent advantage on the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 64.

There is little friendship in the world, and least of all between equals.

BACON, Essays: Of Followers and Friends.

13 Fame is the scentless sunflower, with gaudy
crown of gold;

But friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold.

O. W. HOLMES, No Time Like the Old Time.

14 Friendship is only a reciprocal conciliation of interests, and an exchange of good offices;
it is a species of commerce out of which self-love always expects to gain something.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 83.

15 That sacred and venerable name of friendship (Illud amicitie sanctum et venerabile nomen)

OVIN, Tristia Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 15.

16 Friendship is a union of spirits, a marriage of hearts, and the bond thereof virtue.

WILLIAM PENN, Frutes of Solitude. Pt. i.

There can be no Friendship where there is no Freedom. Friendship loves a Free Air, and will not be fenced up in straight and narrow Enclosures.

WILLIAM PENN, Frutes of Solitude. Pt. i.

The vital air of friendship is composed of confidence. Friendship perishes in proportion as this air diminishes.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. ix, No. 3.

17 Nothing is meritorious but virtue and friendship, and, indeed, friendship is only a part of virtue.

ALEXANDER POPE, his last words. (JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Pope.)

18 Friendship is equality. (Φίλον ἰσότηρα.)

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Pythagoras.
Sec. 10.)

19 To desire the same things and to reject the same things, constitutes true friendship.
(Idem velle atque idem nolle, ea demum firma amicitia est.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. 20, sec. 4.

¹ Ceremony was but devised at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 15.

Friendship should be surrounded with ceremonies and respects, and not crushed into corners. Friendship requires more time than poor, busy men can usually command.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

Friendship cannot live with ceremony, nor without civility.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 243.

² Friendship is the bond of reason.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

³ Friendship's the privilege
Of private men; for wretched greatness
knows

No blessing so substantial.

NATHANIEL TATE, The Loyal General.

⁴ Some friendships are made by nature, some by contract, some by interest, and some
by souls.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *A Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

Nature and religion are the bands of friendship, excellence and usefulness are its great endearments.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *A Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

⁵ Friendship is the marriage of the soul.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Friendship.

⁶ True friendship is of a royal lineage. It is of the same kith and breeding as loyalty and self-forgetting devotion and proceeds upon a higher principle even than they. For loyalty may be blind, and friendship must not be;
devotion may sacrifice principles of right choice which friendship must guard with an excellent and watchful care. . . . The object of love is to serve, not to win.

WOODROW WILSON, Baccalaureate Sermon,
Princeton, 9 May, 1907.

II—Friendship: Apothegms

⁷ Great souls by instinct to each other turn,
Demand alliance, and in friendship burn.
ADAMSON, The Campaign, l. 101.

⁸ The bird a nest, the spider a web, man friendship.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

⁹ What a thing friendship is, world without end!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess.
Sec. 17.

¹⁰ Friendship is more than is catell.

CHAUCER, The Romance of the Rose, l. 5540.

¹¹ The firmest friendships have been formed in mutual adversity, as iron is most strongly united by the fiercest flame.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

True friendship is like sound health, the value of it is seldom known until it be lost.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

¹² We were the twins of friendship.

JOHN FLETCHER, Wife for a Month. Act v, l.

¹³ A sudden thought strikes me,—let us swear an eternal friendship.

J. H. FREKE, The Rovers. Act i, sc. 1.

Madam, I have an inspiration! We will remain together!

GORTCH, Stella. Stella's paramour has shot himself in her presence and that of his wife, and makes the above remark to the latter.

It is this scene which Freke parodies in The Rovers.

Let us embrace and from this moment vow an eternal misery together.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act iv, sc. 2.

My fair one, let us swear an eternal friendship.
(Entre lui, vous et moi, jurons, jurons, ma belle, Une ardeur éternelle.)

MOLIÈRE, Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act iv, sc. 1.

Madam, I have been looking for a person who disliked gravity all my life; let us swear eternal friendship.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, p.
257.)

¹⁴ Friendship is not to be bought at a fair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1619.

¹⁵ Friendship closes its eye, rather than see the moon eclipse; while malice denies that it is ever at the full.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

¹⁶ Sweet is the scene where genial friendship plays

The pleasing game of interchanging praise.

O. W. HOLMES, An After-Dinner Poem.

¹⁷ If a man does not make new acquaintances, as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man, Sir, should keep his friendship in constant repair.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1755)

Keep your friendships in repair.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk

¹⁸ The endearing elegance of female friendship.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 46.

On firmer ties his joys depend
Who has a polished female friend!

CORNELIUS WHUR, The Female Friend.

¹ Friendships renewed demand more care than those which have never been broken. (Les amitiés renouvelées demandent plus de soins que celles qui n'ont jamais été rompues.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes, 560.

² The friendship between me and you I will not compare to a chain; for that the rains might rust, or the falling tree might break.
WILLIAM PENN, Treaty With the Indians.
(BANCROFT, History of the United States.)

³ When did friendship take
A breed for barren metal of his friend?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 134.

If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 21.

⁴ No friendship can survive the gift of gold. The generous can indeed forget that they have given, but the grateful can never forget that they have received.

WILLIAM SMITH, Thorndale. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

⁵ Either friendship or death.

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, p. 23a.

The virtue is no less to conserve friendship gotten, than the wisdom was great to get and win the same.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, ii, 177. (1567)

⁶ Friendship is to be purchased only by friendship.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 52.

III—Friendship: Its Virtues

⁷ The worst solitude is to have no true friendships.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Pt. i, bk. 6, Amicitia.

⁸ Friendship can smooth the front of rude despair.

RICHARD CAMBRIDGE, The Scribleraid. Bk i, l. 196.

⁹ Friendship adds a brighter radiance to prosperity and lightens the burden of adversity by dividing and sharing it. (Nam et secundas res splendiores facit amicitia, et adversas, partiens communicansque leviores.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 6, sec. 22.

They seem to take the sue from the heavens who take friendship from life, for we receive from the immortal gods no better or more delightful boon. (Solem enim e mundo tollere videntur ei, qui amicitiam e vita tollunt, qua nihil a diis immortalibus melius habemus nihil jucundius.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 13, sec. 47.

¹⁰ Complete unity of aim is the traditional condition of genuine and sincere friendship.

(Neque est ullum certius amicitiae vinculum quam consensus et societas consiliorum et voluntatum.)

CICERO, Pro Cnao Plancio. Ch. ii, sec. 5.

¹¹ There is a magic in the memory of schoolboy friendships; it softens the heart, and even affects the nervous system of those who have no heart.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 52.

¹² To friendship every burden's light.

JOHN GAY, The Hare with Many Friends.

¹³ A gen'rous friendship no cold medium knows, Burns with one love, with one resentment glows;

One should our int'rests and our passions be: My friend must hate the man that injures me.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 725. (Pope, tr.)

¹⁴ Friendship, peculiar boon of Heav'n,
The noble mind's delight and pride,
To men and angels only giv'n,
To all the lower world denied.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Friendship: An Ode.

¹⁵ Pure friendship is something which men of an inferior intellect can never taste.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 5.

¹⁶ Life is to be fortified by many friendships. To love, and to be loved, is the greatest happiness of existence.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir: Of Friendship. Vol. i, ch. 6, p. 122.)

IV—Friendship: Its Faults

¹⁷ The friendships of the world are oft Confederacies in vice, or leagues of pleasure.
ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 1.

¹⁸ The most fatal disease of friendship is gradual decay, or dislike hourly increased by causes too slender for complaint, and too numerous for removal.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 23.

The great effect of friendship is beneficence, yet by the first act of uncommon kindness it is endangered, like plants that bear their fruit and die.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 64.

¹⁹ Safe and frequented is the path of deceit under the name of friendship. (Tuta frequensque via est per amicit fallere nomen.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 585.

²⁰ Friendship is but a name. (Nomen amicitia est.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 740.

Friendship, like love, is but a name,
Unless to one you stint the flame.
The child, whom many fathers share,
Hath seldom known a father's care.

'Tis thus in friendships; who depend
On many, rarely find a friend.

JOHN GAY, The Hare with Many Friends.

And what is friendship but a name,
A charm that lulls to sleep;
A shade that follows wealth or fame,
But leaves the wretch to weep?

GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield,
Ch. 8.)

Friendship's an empty name, made to deceive
Those whose good nature tempts them to believe:

There's no such thing on earth; the best that we
Can hope for here is faint neutrality.

SAMUEL TUXE, Adventures of Five Hours
Act v, sc. 3. (An adaptation from Calderon.)

Friendship is but a word.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old
Debts. Act ii, sc. 1.

1 The name of friend is common, but faith in friendship is rare. (Vulgare amici nomen, sed rara est fides.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 9, l. 1.

2 What ill-starr'd rage
Divides a friendship long confirm'd by age?
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 173.

3 Friendship's full of dregs

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 240.

4 Trust not before you try,
For under cloak of great good-will Doth feign'd friendship be.

GEORGE TURNERVILLE, Of Light Belief, l. 1.

V—Friendship: Friendship and Love

5 In love one has need of being believed, in friendship of being understood.

ABEL BONNARD, The Art of Friendship. Pt. ii.

Love can die of a truth, as friendship of a lie.

ABEL BONNARD, The Art of Friendship. Pt. ii.

6 Yet I will but say what mere friends say,
Or only a thought stronger;
I will hold your hand just as long as all may,
Or so very little longer!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Lost Mistress.

No protesting, dearest!
Hardly kisses even!

Don't we both know how it ends?

How the greenest leaf turns screst,
Bluest outbreak—blankest heaven,
Lovers—friends?

ROBERT BROWNING, St Martin's Summer.

One should master one's passions, (love, in chief)
And be loyal to one's friends.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.

7 Love is only chatter,
Friends are all that matter.

GELETT BURGESS, Willy and the Lady.

8 Friendship is Love without his wings.

BYRON, L'Amitié est l'Amour Sans Ailes. The line is a translation of the title, which is a familiar French proverb.

If Cupid has wings, is it not that he may flutter hither and thither? (Si l'amour porte des ailes N'est-ce pas pour voltiger?)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Mariage de Figaro.

9 Friendship's a noble name, 'tis love refined.
SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Stolen Heiress, ii, 2.

10 Friendship often ends in love; but love, in friendship—never.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

11 To be capable of steady friendship and lasting love, are the two greatest proofs, not only of goodness of heart, but of strength of mind.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 235.

12 But love is lost; the art of friendship's gone;
Though David had his Jonathan, Christ his John.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 46.

13 Love seeks a guerdon; friendship is as God,
Who gives and asks no payment.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere.
Act i, sc. 1.

14 It is a rule in friendship, when Distrust enters in at the foregate, Love goes out at the postern.

HOWELL, Familiar Letters: To Dr. H. W.

15 Friendship, like love, is destroyed by long absence, though it may be increased by short intermissions.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 23.

Time, which strengthens Friendship, weakens Love.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4.

16 The feeling of friendship is like that of being comfortably filled with roast beef; love, like being enlivened with champagne.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

17 Love and friendship exclude each other.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 5.

In Friendship we only see those faults which may be prejudicial to our friends. In love we see no faults but those by which we suffer ourselves.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 5.

18 However rare true love may be, it is still less rare than true friendship. (Quelque rare que soit le véritable amour, il l'est encore moins que la véritable amitié.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 473.

19 A friendship that like love is warm;
A love like friendship, steady.

THOMAS MOORE, How Shall I Woo?

Oh call it by some better name,
For friendship sounds too cold.
THOMAS MOORE, Oh Call It by Some Better Name.

1 May the hinges of friendship never rust, or the wings of love lose a feather.

DEAN EDWARD BANNERMAN RAMSEY, Reminiscences of Scottish Life: A Trust.

2 Friendship is a prodigal, but love is a miser.
(L'amitié est prodigue, mais l'amour est avare.)

ROUSSEAU, Julie. Pt. vi, letter 14.

3 What is love? two souls and one flesh; friendship
two bodies and one soul.

JOSEPH ROX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. ix, No. 31.

4 He who is a friend, loves; he who loves is not therefore always a friend. So friendship profits always, but love sometimes is hurtful.
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epis. xxxv.

5 Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere
folly.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l.
181.

6 Friendship is constant in all other things,
Save in the office and affairs of love.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 182.

7 But, if at first her virgin fear
Should start at love's suspected name,
With that of friendship soothe her ear—
True love and friendship are the same.

JAMES THOMSON, Song: Hard Is the Fate.

When Psyche's friend becomes her lover,
How sweetly these conditions blend!
But, oh, what anguish to discover
Her lover has become—her friend!

MARY AINCE DE VERE, Friend and Lover.

8 Friendship, take heed, if woman interfere,
Be sure the hour of thy destruction's near.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, (FIELDING, Amelia.)

When love puts in, friendship is gone.

FLETCHER AND MASSINGER, The Lovers' Progress.
Act i, sc. 1. Quoted as a proverb.

A friend married is a friend lost.

HENRIK IBSEN, Love's Comedy. Act ii.
(Quoted as proverb)

FROG

9 Though boys throw stones at frogs in sport,
the frogs do not die in sport, but in earnest.

BION. (PLUTARCH, Water and Land Animals.
Sec. 7.)

Though this be play to you, 'Tis death to us.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, The Boys and the Frog.

10 Can these, indeed, be voices, that so greet

The twilight still? I seem to hear
Oboe and cymbal in a rhythmic beat
With bass-drum and bassoon; their drear
And droll crescendo louder growing.
Then falling back, like waters ebbing, flowing,—

Back to the silence sweet!
FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The Frogs.

11 Can I unmoved see thee dying
On a log, expiring frog?
DICKENS, The Pickwick Papers. Ch. xv.

12 There are not frogs wherever there is water;
but wherever there are frogs, water will be found.

GOETHE, Spruche in Prosa.

13 The frog's own croak betrays him.
W. G. BENJAM, Proverbs, p. 845.

14 I don't see no p'int about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.

MARK TWAIN, The Celebrated Jumping Frog.

FROST

15 These Winter nights against my window-pane
Nature with busy pencil draws designs
Of ferns and blossoms and fine spray of pines,
Oak-leaf and acorn and fantastic vines.
T. B. ALDRICH, Frost-Work.

He went to the windows of those who slept,
And over each pane, like a fairy, crept;
Wherever he breathed, wherever he stepped,
By the light of the morn, were seen

Most beautiful things, there were flowers and trees,

There were beehives of birds, and swarms of bees;
There were cities, with temples and towers; and these

All pictured in silver sheen!
HANNAH FLAGG GOULD, The Frost.

16 Frost and fraud have always foul ends.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 322. (1605)

Frost and fraud have dirty ends.
WILLIAM GURNALL, Christian in Complete Armour. Pt. ii, ch. 17. (1657)

17 The frost performs its secret ministry,
Unhelped by any wind.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Frost at Midnight, l. 1.

18 The frost which kills the harvest of a year, saves the harvests of a century, by destroying the weevil or the locust.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

19 On a lone winter evening, when the frost
Has wrought a silence.

KEATS, On the Grasshopper and Cricket.

20 An envious sneaping frost,

That bites the first-born infants of the spring.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 100.

Hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 107.

The earth, When it is baked with frost.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 256.

1 Fine as ice-ferns on January panes
Made by a breath.
TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 222.

2 What miracle of weird transforming
Is this wild work of frost and light,
This glimpse of glory infinite?
WHITTIER, The Pageant. St. 8.

6 Fruit out of season, sorrow out of reason.
HENRY FRIEND, Flowers and Fruit Lore, 207.

7 He that would have the fruit must climb the tree.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2366.

Who will the fruit that harvest yields, must take the pain.
JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis. Sig. M1.
(1577)

8 There is greater relish for the earliest fruit of the season.
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 29, l. 4.

What beautiful fruit! I love fruit, when it is expensive.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act i.

9 You should go to a pear-tree for pears, not to an elm.

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 674.

He who hopes this, would hope
To gather apples from the tamarisk,
And search for honey in the flowing stream.
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 747.

You may as well expect pears from an elm.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 40.

FUNERAL

10 Much bruit, little fruit. (Beaucoup de bruit, peu de fruit.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

11 Fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 200.

The weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 115.

Fruits that blossom first will first be ripe.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 383.

The ripest fruit first falls.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 153.

12 Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touched.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 27.

13 Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 63.
When swelling buds their od'rous foliage shed,
And gently harden into fruit, the wise
Spare not the little offsprings, if they grow Redundant.

JOHN PHILLIPS, Cider. Bk. i.

14 Fair fruit in an unwholesome dish
Are like to rot untasted.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
3, l. 129.

15 A little fruit a little while is ours,
And the worm finds it soon.
SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

FUNERAL

16 The care of funeral, the manner of burial, the pomp of obsequies, are rather a consolation to the living than of any service to the dead.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Civitas Dei. Bk. i, sec. 12.

Funeral pomp is more for the vanity of the living than for the honor of the dead. (La pompe des enterrements regarde plus la vanité des vivants que l'honneur des morts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No.
612.

Why is the hearse with scutcheons blazon'd
round,
And with the nodding plume of ostrich crown'd?
No; the dead know it not, nor profit gain;
It only serves to prove the living vain.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 231.

17 Ye undertakers! tell us,
'Midst all the gorgeous figures you exhibit,
Why is the principal conceal'd, for which
You make this mighty stir?

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 171.

18 Of all The fools who flocked to swell or see the show,

Who cared about the corpse? The funeral
Made the attraction, and the black the woe.
BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 10.

1 As grand
And griefless as a rich man's funeral.
SIDNEY DOBELL, A Musing on a Victory.

2 I've a great fancy to see my own funeral afore I die.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent: Continuation of Memoirs.

3 Worldly faces never look so worldly as at a funeral.

GEORGE ELIOT, Joner's Repentance.

If a man will observe as he walks the streets, I believe he will find the merriest countenances in mourning-coaches.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Works. Vol. iii, p. 400.

For sometimes they contain a deal of fun,
Like mourning coaches when the funeral's done.
BYRON, Beppo. St. 20. Referring to gondolas.

4 When this solemn mockery is o'er.
W. H. IRELAND, Vortigern. Act iii.

What tho' no friends in sable weeds appear,
Grieve for an hour, perhaps, then mourn a year,
And bear about the mockery of woe
To midnight dances, and the public show?

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 55.

5 What men prize most is a privilege, even if it be that of chief mourner at a funeral.
J. R. LOWELL, Democracy.

6 There's a grim one-horse hearse in a jolly round trot;
To the churchyard a pauper is going I wot;
The road it is rough, and the hearse has no springs,
And hark to the dirge that the sad driver sings—

Rattle his bones over the stones,
He's only a pauper whom nobody owns.
THOMAS NOEL, The Pauper's Drive.

7 Run, someone, and fetch the undertaker.
(Ecquis currit pollictorem accersere.)
PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 910. (Act v, sc. 2.)

Let me be his undertaker.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 223.

Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, 350.

8 After a funeral, a feast.
W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 731.

After a funeral, one drinks. (Après tout deuil, boit on.)
UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

The funeral baked meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 2, l. 180.

9 His obscure funeral,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,

No noble rite, nor formal ostentation.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 213.

10 All things that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral;
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 84.

Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

11 But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspired to Solon's happiness
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, 176.

12 We should have shone at a wake, but not at anything more festive.

MARK TWAIN, The Innocents Abroad. Ch. 2.

13 Fair youth, do you know what I'd do with you if you was my son?—No, sez he.—Wall, sez I, I'd appint your funeral to-morrow afternoon & the korps should be ready!
ARTEMUS WARD, Artemus Ward, His Book: Edwin Forrest as Othello.

14 When we attend a funeral, we are apt to comfort ourselves with the happy difference that is betwixt us and our dead friend.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety. No. 34.

15 There was a young fellow of Clyde
Who went to a funeral and cried;
When they asked who was dead,
He stammered and said,
"I don't know—I just came for the ride."
UNKNOWN, The Young Fellow of Clyde.

FUTILITY

16 To attack windmills. (Acometer molinos de viento.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. i, ch. 8.

To go into the water and grasp the foam. (Lo shui 'chin shui pao.)

UNKNOWN. A Chinese proverb.

17 With Sisyphus thus do I roll the stone,
And turn the wheel with damnd Ixion.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet xl.

With useless endeavor,
Forever, forever,
Is Sisyphus rolling
His stone up the mountain!
LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. v.

18 It's but little good you'll do a-watering the last year's crop.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 18.

¹ For none upon earth can achieve his scheme;
The best as the worst are futile here.

VICTOR HUGO, Early Love Revisited.

Inscribe all human effort with one word,
Artistry's haunting curse, the Incomplete!
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Canto xi, l. 1560.

² Still we persist; plough the light sand, and sow

Seed after seed, where none can ever grow.
(Nos tamen hoc agimus tenuique in pulvere sulcos

Ducimus et litus sterili versamus arato.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 48. (Gifford, tr.)

You may boldly say, you did not plough,
Or trust the barren and ungrateful sands
With the fruitful grain of your religious counsels.
MASSINGER, The Renegado. Act iv, sc. 3.

Plough the sands. (Arenas arantes.)
HERBERT ASQUITH, Speech, 21 Nov., 1894.

³ Lyke Saint George, who is ever on horse backe yet never rideth.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues. Pt. ii, p. 260.

He is like St. George on the signs, always on horseback and never rides on.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography.

Saint George, that swinged the dragon, and e'er since

Sits on his horse back at mine hostess' door.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 288.

doing nothing. (Gratis anhelans, multa agendo nihil agens.)

PHEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 5, l. 3.

⁵ You are wounding a Hydra. ("Τὸν ὕδρα ῥέμεις.")

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 426. The Hydra produced two heads for every one cut off.

'Tis a hydra's head contention; the more they stive the more they may; and as Praxiteles did by his glass, when he saw a scurvy face in it, brake it in pieces; but for that one he saw many more as bad in a moment.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
ii, sec. iii, mem. 7.

⁶ That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 211.

⁷ He has spent all his life in letting down buckets into empty wells; and he is frittering away his age in trying to draw them up again.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol.
i, p. 259.)

Defend me, therefore, common sense, say I,
From reveries so airy, from the toil
Of dropping buckets into empty wells,
And growing old in drawing nothing up!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 187.

To climb life's worn, heavy wheel
Which draws up nothing new.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 331.

⁸ But what am I?
An infant crying in the night:
An infant crying for the light,
And with no language but a cry.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. liv, st. 5.

⁹ To wash bricks: to waste your labor. (La-terem lavem.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 87. (Act i, sc. 4.)

¹⁰ Great cry and little wool, as the Devil said when he sheared the hogs.

UNKNOWN, David and Abigail.

Thou wilt at best but suck a bull,
Or shear swine, all cry and no wool.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 851.

FUTURE

¹¹ I never think of the future. It comes soon enough.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Interview, on Belgenland,
Dec., 1930.

¹² When I am dead, let the earth be dissolved in fire. ("Ἐὰν θανάτῳ γαῖα μείχθῃ πυρὶ.")

EURIPIDES, Bellerophon. Frag. 27. Put by Dio
(58, 23) into the mouth of Tiberius. Quoted by Suetonius (Twelve Caesars: Nero, 38, 1), who says that Nero rejoined, "Nay, rather while I live" ("Ἐπεὶ ζῶντος.")

After us the deluge. (Après nous le déluge.)

MADAME DE POMPADOUR, after the battle of Rossbach. (LAROUSSE, Fleurs Historiques.
MADAME DE HAUSSET, Mémoires, p. 19.) This saying, an old French proverb, has also been attributed to Louis XV.

¹³ Remember this also, and be well persuaded of its truth: the future is not in the hands of Fate, but in ours.

JULES JUSSELAND, Farewell Radio Talk to America, 10 April, 1932.

¹⁴ We fight and die, but our hopes beat high,
In spite of the toil and tears,
For we catch the gleam of our vanished dream
Down the path of the untrod years.

WILMA KATE MCFARLAND, The Untrod Years.

¹⁵ The future is a world limited by ourselves;
in it we discover only what concerns us and,
sometimes, by chance, what interests those whom we love the most.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliū. Epis. ci, sec. 9.

³ How many ages hence
Shall this our lofty scene be acted over
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 111.

⁴ Leave hereafter to the spirit and the wisdom of hereafter.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 2.

⁵ I dipt into the future far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world and all the wonder that would be.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 15.

⁶ We see by the glad light
And breathe the sweet air of futurity,
And so we live, or else we have no life.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 24.

To whom in vision clear
The aspiring heads of future things appear,
Like mountain-tops whose mists have rolled away.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. No. 43.

II—Future: Knowledge of the Future

⁷ For my part, I think that a knowledge of the future would be a disadvantage. (Atque ego ne utilem quidem arbitror esse nobis futuram rerum scientiam.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 22. Undoubtedly ignorance of future ills is more useful than knowledge of them. (Certe ignorantio futurorum malorum utilior est quam scientia.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 23. Seek not to know what must not be reveal'd;
Joys only flow where Fate is most conceal'd.
Too-busy man would find his sorrows more
If future fortunes he should know before;
For by that knowledge of his Destiny
He would not live at all, but always die.

DAYDEN, The Indian Queen. Act iii, sc. 2.

⁸ No means of predicting the future really exists, and if it did, we must regard what happens according to it as nothing to us.

EPICURUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 135.)

No man can tell what the future may bring forth.

DEMOSTHENES, Ad Leptinem. Sec. 162.

What the evening may bring forth is uncertain. (Quid vesper ferat incertum est.)

⁹ The mind of man is ignorant of fate, or of coming doom.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 501.

¹⁰ Cease to inquire what the future has in store, and take as a gift whatever the day brings forth. (Quid sit futurum cras, fuge querere: et Quem Fors dierum cunque dabit, lucro Appone.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 13.

¹¹ Oh, bless the law that veils the Future's face;
For who could smile into a baby's eyes,
Or bear the beauty of the evening skies,
If he could see what cometh on apace?

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Mimma Bella.

¹² Let the mind of man be blind as to future destiny. (Sit caeca futuri Mens hominum fati.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 14.

¹³ Heav'n from all creatures hides the Book of Fate,
All but the page prescribed, their present state:

From brutes what men, from men what spirits know;

Or who could suffer being here below?

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 77.

O blindness to the future! kindly giv'n,
That each may fill the circle mark'd by Heav'n;
Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
A hero perish or a sparrow fall,
Atoms or systems into ruin hurl'd,
And now a bubble burst, and now a world.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 85.

Not present good or ill the joy or curse,
But future views of better or of worse.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 71.

8 Gambling is the child of avarice, but the parent of prodigality.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

It is the child of avarice, the brother of iniquity,
and the father of mischief.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Bushrod Washington, 15 Jan., 1783. Referring to gaming.

9 The gamester, if he die a martyr to his profession, is doubly ruined. He adds his soul to every other loss, and by the act of suicide, renounces earth to forfeit Heaven.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

10 Who games, is felon of his wealth,
His time, his liberty, his health.

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure.

By gaming, we lose both our time and treasure,— two things most precious to the life of man.

craticus*, Bk. i. (1175)

Hazard is very mother of tyings
And of deceit, and cursed forswearings.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 263.

18 Oh, this pernicious vice of gaming!

EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester, Act i, sc. 1.

I'll tell thee what it says: it calls me villain, a treacherous husband, a cruel father, a false brother; one lost to nature and her charities; or to say all in one short word, it calls me—gamester.

EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester. Act ii, sc. 1.

Ay, rail at gaming—'tis a rich topic, and affords noble declamation. Go, preach against it in the city—you'll find a congregation in every tavern.

EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester. Act iv, sc. 1.

How, sir! not damn the sharper, but the dice?

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. ii, l. 13.

Sir, for a quart d'écu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 311.

And once or twice to throw the dice
Is a gentlemanly game,

But he does not win who plays with Sin
In the secret House of Shame.

GARRICK, DAVID

³ If manly sense, if Nature link'd with art;
If thorough knowledge of the human heart;
If powers of acting vast and unconfined;
If fewest faults with greatest beauties join'd, . . .

Deserve the preference;—Garrick! take the chair,

Nor quit it—till thou place an equal there.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad. Conclusion.

⁴ Our Garrick's a salad; for in him we see
Oil, vinegar, sugar, and saltiness agree.
GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 11.

Here lies David Garrick: describe me, who can,
An abridgment of all that was pleasant in man;
As an actor, confess'd without rival to shine;
As a wit, if not first, in the very first line;
Yet, with talents like these, and an excellent heart,
The man had his failings—a dupe to his art.
Like an ill-judging beauty, his colours he spread,
And beplaster'd with rouge his own natural red.
On the stage he was natural, simple, affecting:
'Twas only that when he was off, he was acting.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 93.

He cast off his friends as a huntsman his pack,
For he knew, when he pleas'd, he could whistle them back.

Of praise a mere glutton, he swallow'd what came,

And the puff of a dunce he mistook it for fame.
GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 107.

⁵ But what are the hopes of man? I am disappointed by that stroke of death, which has eclipsed the gaiety of nations, and impoverished the public stock of harmless pleasure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, *Lives of the Poets: Edmund
Smith*. Alluding to Garrick's death.

⁶ Here lie together, waiting the Messiah

The little David and the great Goliath.

UNKNOWN, Note in Thespian Dictionary, appended to the life of Garrick. Garrick and Johnson are buried close together in Westminster Abbey.

GENIUS

I—Genius: Definitions

⁷ Genius is mainly an affair of energy.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Literary Influence of Academies.

Genius . . . that energy which collects, combines, amplifies, and animates.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Pope.

⁸ Genius, that power which dazzles mortal
eyes,

Is oft but perseverance in disguise.

HENRY AUSTIN, Perseverance Conquers All.

⁹ What is genius? It is the power to be a boy again at will.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grisel, p. 249.

Genius has somewhat of the infantine:

But of the childish, not a touch nor taint.

ROBERT BROWNING, Prince Hohenstiel-Schwau-gau.

¹⁰ As diamond cuts diamond, and one hone smooths a second, all the parts of intellect are whetstones to each other; and genius, which is but the result of their mutual sharpening, is character too.

C. A. BARTOL, Radical Problems: Individualism.

¹¹ Genius is patience. (Le Génie, c'est la patience.)

BUFFON. (STEVENS, Study of the Life and Times of Madame de Staël. Ch. iii, p. 61.)

The sentence is not in Buffon's works, but Herauld de Séchelles (Voyage à Montbar, p.
15) also ascribes the statement to Buffon in a slightly different form: "Le génie n'est qu'un plus grande aptitude à la patience," Genius is nothing but the greatest aptitude for patience.

Patience is a necessary ingredient of genius.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. iv,
ch. 5.

¹² Every man who observes vigilantly and resolves steadfastly, grows unconsciously into genius.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtonians. Essay 21.

¹³ Genius, in one respect, is like gold,—numbers of persons are constantly writing about both,
who have neither.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii. No. 133.

¹ Genius is fostered by industry. (Ingenium industria alitur.)

CICERO, Pro Caelio. Ch. xix, sec. 45.

No man's genius, however shining, can raise him from obscurity, unless he has industry, opportunity, and also a patron to recommend him. (Neque enim culquam tam clarum statim ingenium, ut possit emergere, nisi illi materia, occasio, fautor etiam commendatorque contingat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vi, epis. 23.

Genius is the father of a heavenly line; but the mortal mother, that is industry.

THEODORE PARKER, Ten Sermons on Religion: Of the Culture of the Religious Powers.

If you have genius, industry will improve it; if you have none, industry will supply its place.

SIR JOSEPH REYNOLDS, Saying. As quoted by John Graham to Edinburgh Art Students.

Genius can never despise labour.

MADAME DE STAËL, (STEVENS, Life. Ch. 38.)

Genius is nothing but labour and diligence.

WILLIAM HOGARTH.

² To think, and to feel, constitute the two grand divisions of men of genius—the men of reasoning and the men of imagination.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 2.

³ Time, place, and action may with pains be wrought,

But genius must be born, and never can be taught.

DRYDEN, Epistle to Congreve, l. 59.

⁴ Genius is one per cent inspiration and ninety-nine per cent perspiration.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Newspaper Interview. (Quoted in Golden Book, April, 1931.)

⁵ Genius is religious. It is a larger imbibing of the common heart.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

To believe your own thought, to believe that what is true for you in your private heart is true for all men—that is genius.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

In every work of genius we recognize our own rejected thoughts: they come back to us with a certain alienated majesty.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

The miracles of genius always rest on profound convictions which refuse to be analyzed.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

⁶ Great geniuses have the shortest biographies. Their cousins can tell you nothing about them. They lived in their writings, and so their house and street life was trivial and commonplace.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

That necessity of isolation which genius feels.

Each must stand on his glass tripod if he would keep his electricity.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

Genius is lonely without the surrounding presence of people to inspire it.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Atlantic Essays: A Plea for Culture.

⁷ Genius even, as it is the greatest good, is the greatest harm.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

He is a blockhead; he is nothing but a genius.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk. Quoted as a French proverb.

⁸ Genius is the talent of a man who is dead.

EDMOND AND JULES DE GONCOURT, Journal.

⁹ Rules and models destroy genius and art.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches and Essays: On Taste.

Genius is always impatient of its harness; its wild blood makes it hard to train.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

Genius can only breathe freely in an atmosphere of freedom.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.

A genius in a reverend gown

Must ever keep its owner down;

'Tis an unnatural conjunction,

And spoils the credit of the function.

SWIFT, To Dr. Delany.

¹⁰ Perhaps, moreover, he whose genius appears deepest and truest excels his fellows in nothing save the knack of expression; he throws out occasionally a lucky hint at truths of which every human soul is profoundly though unutterably conscious.

HAWTHORNE, Mosses from an Old Manse: The Procession of Life.

¹¹ Man's genius is a deity.

HERACLITUS. (PLUTARCH, Platonic Questions. Sec. 1.)

¹² Gift, like genius, I often think only means an infinite capacity for taking pains.

JANE ELLICE HOPKINS, Work Amongst Working Men. (1870) (A correspondent in Notes and Queries for 13 Sept., 1879, p. 213, states that Miss Hopkins was the first to use the exact phrase, "Genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains." She was a social reformer, and her article referred to her work among the navvies at Cambridge.)

Charles Dickens in an after-dinner speech stated that genius was an infinite capacity for taking pains.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Cakes and Ale, p. 4.

Genius is an infinite love of taking pains.

J. M. BARRIE, Chancellor's Address, University of Edinburgh.

Genius . . . means the transcendent capacity of taking trouble.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

Genius has been defined as a supreme capacity for taking trouble. . . . It might be more fitly described as a supreme capacity for getting its possessors into trouble of all kinds.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 174.

1

Genius is the capacity of evading hard work.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 114.

Genius, cried the commuter,
As he ran for the 8:13,
Consists of an infinite capacity
For catching trains.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, An Ejaculation.

2

Genius is the ability to act rightly without precedent—the power to do the right thing the first time.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 39.

3

The true Genius is a mind of large general powers, accidentally determined to some particular direction.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Cowley.

4

Many a genius has been slow of growth. Oaks that flourish for a thousand years do not spring up into beauty like a reed.

G. H. LEWES, Spanish Drama: Life of Lope De Vega. Ch. 2.

5

All the means of action—
The shapeless masses, the materials—
Lie everywhere about us. What we need
Is the celestial fire to change the flint
Into transparent crystal, bright and clear.
That fire is genius!

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act 1, sc. 5.

6

I think it may as well be admitted that the disease of the endocrine glands called genius simply does not appear among women as frequently as it does among men. If one can find consolation in the thought, neither does idiocy.

ELSIE MCCORMICK, in New York World.

A good memory is an essential element of genius.

J. F. NISBET, The Insanity of Genius, p. 255.

8

Originality and genius must be largely fed and raised on the shoulders of some old tradition.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason. Vol. II, p. 101.

9

Genius consists in this, that the knowing faculty has received a considerably greater development than the service of the will demands. . . . The fundamental condition of genius is an abnormal predominance of sensibility over irritability and reproductive power.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, The World as Will and Idea. Sec. 20.

10

Only when genius is married to science, can the highest results be produced.

HERBERT SPENCER, Education. Ch. 1.

Genius without education is like silver in the mine.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

11

Genius is essentially creative; it bears the stamp of the individual who possesses it.

MADAME DE STAEL, Corinne. Bk. vii, ch. 1.

12

When a true genius appears in the world, you may know him by this sign, that the dunces are all in confederacy against him.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

In the republic of mediocrity genius is dangerous.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Liberty in Literature.

13

There is a certain characteristic common to all those whom we call geniuses. Each of them has a consciousness of being a man apart.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 44.

14

Of the three requisites of genius, the first is soul, and the second, soul, and the third, soul.

E. P. WHIPPLE, Literature and Life: Genius.

15

But on the whole, "genius is ever a secret to itself."

CARLYLE, Characteristics.

II—Genius: Apothegms

16

Improvement makes straight roads; but the crooked roads without improvement are the roads of Genius.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

17

Genius is of no country.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 207.

18

"Eccentricities of genius, Sam," said Mr. Pickwick.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 30.

Eccentricity is not a proof of genius, and even an artist should remember that originality consists not only in doing things differently, but also in "doing things better."

E. C. STEDMAN, Victorian Poets. Ch. 9.

19

Fortune has rarely condescended to be the companion of genius.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Poverty of the Learned.

Genius and its rewards are briefly told:

A liberal nature and a niggard doom,
A difficult journey to a splendid tomb.

JOHN FORSTER, Oliver Goldsmith: Dedication.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 12.

² Nor mourn the unalterable Days
That Genius goes and Folly stays.

EMERSON, In Memoriam.

³ When Nature has work to be done, she creates a genius to do it.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses and Lectures: The Method of Nature.

In all great works of art . . . the Genius draws up the ladder after him.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakespeare.

⁴ The first and last thing required of genius is the love of truth. (Das erste und letzte, was vom Genie gefordert wird, ist Wahrheits-Liebe.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. Pt. III.

⁵ The freemasonry of genius.

WILLIAM HARVEY, Lectures: Burke and Goldsmith.

⁶ Genius, like humanity, rusts for want of use.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, The Plain Speaker: On Application to Study.

⁷ A person of genius should marry a person of character. Genius does not herd with genius.
O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 12.

⁸ Unless one is a genius, it is best to aim at being intelligible.

ANTHONY HOPE, The Dolly Dialogues. No. 15.

⁹ Adversity reveals genius, prosperity hides it. (Ingenium res Adversæ nudare solent, celare secunde.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 8, l. 73.

Ill fortune is often an incentive to genius. (Ingenium mala sæpe movent.)

OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. II, l. 43.

The worship of genius never makes a man rich. (Amor ingenii neminem unquam divitem fecit.)

PETRONIUS ARBITER, Satyricon. Sec. 83.

Genius and virtue, like diamonds, are best plain-set—set in lead, set in poverty.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Domestic Life.

Hunger is the handmaid of genius.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

See also PORTAY AND POVERTY.

¹⁰ Genius never drops from the skies.

JAMES HUNTER, Pathos of Distance, p. 103.

¹¹ A man of genius has been seldom ruined but by himself.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, I, 381.)

¹² Many have genius, but, wanting art, are forever dumb.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 20.

¹³ How often the greatest geniuses lie hidden in obscurity! (Ut sæpe summa ingenia in occulto latent!)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, I, 165. (Act I, sc. 2.)

¹⁴ For genius renown endures deathless. (Ingenio stat sine morte decus.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. III, eleg. 2, l. 24.

The memory of genius is immortal. (Immortalis est ingenii memoria.)

SENeca, Ad Polydium. Sec. 37.

Genius survives: all else is claimed by death. (Vivitur ingenio: cætera mortis erunt.)

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: December: Colin's Emblem. Quoted probably from Consolatio ad Liviam, written shortly after the death of Mæcenas by an anonymous author. (See Notes and Queries, Jan., 1918, p. 12.)

Vivitur ingenio: that damn'd motto there
Seduced me first to be a wicked player.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle: Epilogue. The motto, "Vivitur ingenio," (Genius survives), was probably displayed in Drury Lane Theatre.

¹⁵ Premature genius seldom arrives at maturity. (Illud ingenorum velut præcox genus, non temere unquam pervenit ad frugem.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. I, ch. 3, sec. 10.

¹⁶ The lamp of genius burns more rapidly than the lamp of life. (Das Licht des Genie's bekam weniger Fett, als das Licht des Lebens.)

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act II, sc. 17.

¹⁷ If it were not for my respect for human opinion, I would not open my window to see the Bay of Naples for the first time; while I would go five hundred leagues to talk with a man of genius.

MADAME DE STAËL. (EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.)

¹⁸ When genius is punished, its fame is exalted. (Punitis ingenii, gliscit auctoritas.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. IV, sec. 35. Tacitus is telling of the burning, by order of the Roman Senate, of the books written by Crematius Cordus, and derides the stupidity which thinks it can suppress books by burning them, an action which, Tacitus says, has never produced any effect except infamy to the persons who ordered the burning and glory to the sufferers.

¹⁹ I have nothing to declare except my genius.

OSCAR WILDE, to the revenue officers, when he landed in America in January, 1882. (HARRIS, Oscar Wilde, p. 52.)

III—Genius: Its Virtues

1 Genius hath electric power
Which earth can never tame,
Bright suns may scorch and dark clouds lower,
Its flash is still the same.

LYDIA MARIA CHILLO, Marius Amid the Ruins of Carthage.

2 Philosophy becomes poetry, and science imagination, in the enthusiasm of genius.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 12.

3 To clothe the fiery thought
In simple words succeeds,
For still the craft of genius is
To mask a king in weeds.

EMERSON, The Poet.

We owe to genius always the same debt, of lifting the curtain from the common, and showing us that divinities are sitting disguised in the seeming gang of gypsies and peddlers.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

4 Genius, indeed, melts many ages into one, and thus effects something permanent, yet still with a similarity of office to that of the more ephemeral writer. A work of genius is but the newspaper of a century, or perchance of a hundred centuries.

HAWTHORNE, Mosses from an Old Manse: The Old Manse.

5 There is no work of genius which has not been the delight of mankind, no word of genius to which the human heart and soul have not, sooner or later, responded.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Rousseau and the Sentimentalists.

6 It is the privilege of genius that to it life never grows commonplace as to the rest of us.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy and Other Addresses: On Unveiling the Bust of Fielding.

7 There are two kinds of genius. The first and highest may be said to speak out of the eternal to the present, and must compel its age to understand it; the second understands its age, and tells it what it wishes to be told.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Pope.

8 This is the highest miracle of genius, that things which are not should be as though they were, that the imaginations of one mind should become the personal recollections of another.

MACAULAY, Essays: The Pilgrim's Progress.

9 Nature with Genius stands united in league everlasting;

What is promised by one, surely the other performs.

SCULLER, Steer, Bold Mariner, On.

IV—Genius: Its Faults

10 There was never a great genius without a tincture of madness. (Nullam magnum ingenium sine mixtura dementiae fuit.)

ARISTOTLE. (SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Bk. i, sec. 15.) Also quoted by other writers.

Great wits are sure to madness near allied,
And thin partitions do their bounds divide.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. I, l. 163. See also under SENSE.

I have heard, madam, your greatest wits have ever a touch of madness and extravagance in them.

DRYDEN AND CAVENDISH, Sir Martin Mar-All. Act V, sc. 1.

The heart and soul of genius may be mad, but the mind of true genius is ever as clear as the heavens seen through pine trees.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Materia Critica.

11 Men of genius are often dull and inert in society, as the blazing meteor when it descends to the earth is only a stone.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 13.

12 Strange power of Genius, that can throw
Round all that's vicious, weak, and low,
Such magic lights, such rainbow dyes
As dazzle ev'n the steadiest eyes.

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road. Extract xvi, l. 1.

What an impostor Genius is;
How, with that strong, mimetic art,
Which forms its life and soul, it takes

All shapes of thought, all hues of heart,
Nor feels, itself, one throb it wakes;

How like a gem its light may smile
O'er the dark path, by mortals trod,
Itself as mean a worm, the while,

As crawls at midnight o'er the sod.

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road. Extract xvi, l. 72.

13 It is the characteristic of a certain blunderer called genius to see things too far in advance.

CHARLES READE, Recipe for Writing Novels.

V—Genius and Talent

14 Doing easily what others find difficult is talent; doing what is impossible for talent is genius.

AMIEL, Journal, 17 Dec., 1856.

15 The eagle never lost so much time as when he submitted to learn of the crow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Men of genius are like eagles, that live on what the kill, while men of talents is like crows, that live on what has been killed for them.

JOSIAH BILLINGS, Talent and Genius.

1 Talent convinces—Genius but excites;
This tasks the reason, that the soul delights.
Talent from sober judgment takes its birth,
And reconciles the pinion to the earth;
Genius unsettles with desires the mind,
Contented not till earth be left behind;
Talent, the sunshine on a cultured soil,
Ripens the fruit, by slow degrees, for toil;
Genius, the sudden iris of the skies,
On cloud itself reflects its wondrous dyes: . . .

Talent gives all that vulgar critics need—
And frames a horn-book for the Dull to read;
Genius, the Pythian of the Beautiful,
Leaves its large truths a riddle to the Dull—
From eyes profane a veil the Isis screens,
And fools on fools still ask—"What Hamlet means?"

BULWER-LYTTON, Talent and Genius.

Talent repeats; Genius creates. Talent is a cistern; Genius a fountain. Talent deals with the actual, with discovered and realized truths, analyzing, arranging, combining, applying positive knowledge, and in action looking to precedents; Genius deals with the possible, creates new combinations, discovers new laws, and acts from an insight into principles. Talent jogs to conclusions to which Genius takes giant leaps. Talent accumulates knowledge, and has it packed up in the memory; Genius assimilates it with its own substance, grows with every new accession, and converts knowledge into power. Talent gives out what it has taken in; Genius what has risen from its unsounded wells of living thought. Talent, in difficult situations, strives to untie knots, which Genius instantly cuts with one swift decision. Talent is full of thoughts, Genius of thought; one has definite acquisitions, the other indefinite power.

E. P. WHIFFLE, Literature and Life: Genius.

2 Talent, lying in the understanding, is often inherited; genius, being the action of reason and imagination, rarely or never.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

3 We call partial half-lights, by courtesy, genius; talent which converts itself into money; talent which glitters to-day that it may dine and sleep well tomorrow.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

When the will is absolutely surrendered to the moral sentiment, that is virtue; when the will is surrendered to intellectual truth, that is genius. Talent for talent's sake is a bauble and a show. Talent working with joy in the cause of universal truth lifts the possessor to new power.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

4 Mediocrities sweat blood to produce rubbish.

Geniuses create wonders without an effort.
ANATOLE FRANCE, Opinions of Anatole France, p. 100.)

5 Nature is the master of talents; genius is the master of nature.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talk on Familiar Subjects: Art and Life.

6 Unpretending mediocrity is good, and genius is glorious; but the weak flavor of genius in a person essentially common is detestable.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

7 There is the same difference between talent and genius that there is between a stone mason and a sculptor.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Shakespeare.

8 Genius begins great works; labor alone finishes them. (Le génie commence les beaux ouvrages, mais le travail seul les achève.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 335.

9 Between talent and genius there is the same proportion as the whole to its part. (Entre esprit et talent il y a la proportion du tout à sa partie.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. No. 12.

10 Talent is that which is in a man's power; genius is that in whose power a man is.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Rousseau and the Sentimentalists.

11 Talk not of genius baffled. Genius is master of man.

Genius does what it must, and Talent does what it can.

GENTLEMAN

I.—Gentleman: Definitions

14 He is a Gentleman, because his nature
Is kind and affable to every creature.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 41.

Gentlemanliness, being another word for intense humanity.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. ix, ch. 7, sec. 23. We must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 2, l. 164.

15 Look who that is most virtuous alway,

Prive and spart, and most intendeth aye
To do that gentle deedes that he can,
And take him for the greatest gentle man.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 257.

He is gentle that doth gentle deedes.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 314.

It is almost a definition of a gentleman to say he is one who never inflicts pain.

CARDINAL NEWMAN.

The character of gentleman . . . is frequent in England, rare in France, and found, where it is found, in age or the latest period of manhood; while in Germany the character is almost unknown. But the proper antipode of a gentleman is to be sought for among the Anglo-American democrats.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria: Satyrane's Letters, No. 2.

Living blood and a passion of kindness does at last distinguish God's gentleman from Fashion's.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

The flowering of civilization is the finished man, the man of sense, of grace, of accomplishment, of social power—the gentleman.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: Fortune of the Republic.

Manners and money make a gentleman.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

It's not the gay coat makes the gentleman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

According to my mild way of thinking, it is not essential that a gentleman should be bright.

CORRA HARRIS. "I remember writing it, but have no idea where it occurs."—Letter to compiler.

What's a gentleman but his pleasure?

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, 15. (1573)

A gentleman is one who understands and shows every mark of deference to the claims of self-love in others, and exacts it in return from them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On the Look of a Gentleman.

His ideal Gentleman is . . . the calculating adventurer who affects the supercilious aid of a shallow dandy and cherishes the heart of a frog.

OLIVER H. G. LEIGH, Lord Chesterfield's Letters: Introduction.

He would be the finer gentleman that should leave the world untainted with falsehood, or disimulation, or wantonness, or conceit.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations, Bk. ix, sec. 2.

A gentleman's first characteristic is that fineness of structure in the body, which renders it capable of the most delicate sensations;

and of structure in the mind which renders it capable of the most delicate sympathies—one may say, simply, "fineness of nature."

RUSKIN, Modern Painters, Pt. ix, ch. 7, sec. 9.

A gentleman of our days is one who has money enough to do what every fool would do if he could afford it: that is, consume without producing.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

A gentleman ain't a man—leastways not a common man—the common man bein' but the slave wot feeds and clothes the gentleman beyond the common.

BERNARD SHAW, An Unsocial Socialist, Ch. 4.

II—Gentleman: Apothegms

I am a gentleman, though spoiled i' the breeding. The Buzzards are all gentlemen. We came in with the Conqueror.

RICHARD BROME, English Moor, Act ii, sc. 4.
See also under ANCESTRY.

His locked, letter'd, braw brass collar
Show'd him the gentleman an' scholar.

BURNS, The Two Dogs. The phrase, "a gentleman and a scholar" dates from 1621.

A gentleman by nature, and a scholar by education.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

Like two single gentlemen rolled into one.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, *Broad Grin:
Lodgings for Single Gentlemen*.

You are not like a Cerberus, three gentlemen at once, are you?

SHERIDAN, The Rivals, Act iv, sc. 2.

Gentleman is written legibly on his brow.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, *The Heir-at-
Law*, Act iii, sc. 1. (1797)

Though modest, on his unembarrass'd brow
Nature had written "gentleman."

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto ix, st. 83. (1821)

Take one more disguise, and put thyself into the habit of a gentleman.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Cutter of Coleman Street.
Act i, sc. 5. (1641) Hence: "Disguised as a gentleman."

I had rather have a plain russet-coated Captain, that knows what he fights for, and loves what he knows, than that which you call a Gentleman and is nothing else. I honour a Gentleman that is so indeed.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Letter to Sir W. Spring and Maurice Barrow, Sept., 1643.

Wherever I go the world cries "that's a gentleman, my life on't a gentleman!" and when y've said a gentleman, you have said all.

JOHN CROWNE, Sir Courtly Nice, (1665)

- ¹ Once a gentleman, and always a gentleman.
DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. ii, ch. 28.
To be a gentleman is to be one all the world over, and in every relation and grade of society.
R. L. STEVENSON, The American Emigrant.
- ² I shall be a gen'l'm'n myself one of these days, perhaps, with a pipe in my mouth, and a summer-house in the back garden.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 16.
- ³ What fact more conspicuous in modern history than the creation of the gentleman?
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

PHILIP STUBBS, Anatomic of Abuses, 122. (1583) Huloet (Abced, sig. N 5), in 1552, defined a "gentleman of the first head" as "ironice to be applied to such as would be esteemed a gentleman, having no point or quality of a gentleman." Robertson (Phraseology Generalis, 710) stated that it was equivalent to "Novus homo."

It don't cost nothin' to be a gentleman.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, reproving a rowdy.

2

But if you fail, or if you rise,
Be each, pray God, a gentleman.

W. M. THACKERAY, The End of the Play.

The Pall Mall Gazette is written by gentlemen for gentlemen.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 32.

4

With fascination in his very bow, . . .

A finished gentleman from top to toe.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 84.

5

The gentleman of honor, ragged sooner than patched.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 2.

E'en as he trod that day to God, so walked he
from his birth,

In simpleness and gentleness and honour and clean mirth.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Barrack Room Ballads:
Dedication.

And they rise to their feet as He passes by, gentlemen unafraid.

KIPLING, Barrack Room Ballads: Dedication.

6

Old Crestien rightly says no language can

Express the worth of a true Gentleman.

J. R. LOWELL, An Epistle to George William Curtis.

7

My master hath been an honourable gentleman; tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 238.

An absolute gentleman, full of the most excellent differences.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 112.

8

I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,
More daring or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 89.

This earth that bears thee dead

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 92.

A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 8, l. 35.

A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,

Framed in the prodigality of nature,

Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,
The spacious world cannot again afford.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 243.

An affable and courteous gentleman.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
i, sc. 2, l. 98.

9

We are gentlemen,

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes

Envy the great nor do the low despise.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 25.

10

And thus he bore without abuse

The grand old name of gentleman,

Defamed by every charlatan,

And soil'd with all ignoble use.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxi, st. 6.

O selfless man and stainless gentleman!

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien. l. 790.

GENTLENESS

11

The great mind knows the power of gentleness,

Only tries force because persuasion fails.

ROBERT BROWNING, Prince Hohenstiel-Schwangau.

12

If there be any good in gentleness, I trowe it to be only this, that it seemeth a manner imposed to gentle men, that they should not disgrace or degenerate from the virtues of their noble kindred.

CHAUCER, Boethius. Bk. iii, prose 6.

13

Power can do by gentleness what violence fails to accomplish. (Peragit tranquilla potestas Quod violenta nequit.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus Dictus Manlio Theodoro Consul, l. 239.

Gentleness succeeds better than violence. (Plus fait douceur que violence.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 3.

Might there not be

Some power in gentleness we dream not of?

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act i.

What would you have? Your gentleness shall force

More than your force move us to gentleness.

SHAKESPEARE, AS YOU Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 102.

Let gentleness my strong enforcement be.

SHAKESPEARE, AS YOU Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 118.

14

Severity is allowable where gentleness is in vain. (La violence est juste ou la douceur est vaine.)

CORNEILLE, Hirculus. Act i, sc. 2.

15

A gentle heart is tied with an easy thread.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

- ¹ Gentle of speech, beneficent of mind.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 917. (Pope, tr.)
But he whose inborn worth his acts commend,
Of gentle soul, to human race a friend.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 383. (Pope, tr.)
- ² It is only people who possess firmness who can possess true gentleness. Those who appear gentle generally possess nothing but weakness, which is readily converted into harshness.
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 479.
- ³ Speak gently! 'tis a little thing
Dropped in the heart's deep well;
The good, the joy that it may bring
Eternity shall tell.
G. W. LANGFORD, Speak Gently.
- ⁴ Gentle to others, to himself severe.
SAMUEL ROGERS, The Voyage of Columbus.
Canto vi.
- ⁵ They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 171.
This milky gentleness.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 364.
Touch'd with human gentleness and love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 25.
- ⁶ The gentleness of all the gods go with thee.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 46.
- ⁷ Gentle is that gentle does.
J. W. WARTER, Last of the Old Squires, p. 43.
Quoted as a proverb. See also under GENTLE-MAN.
- ⁸ Gentle in manner, strong in performance.
(Suaviter in modo, fortiter in re.)
A proverbial expression derived from a phrase of Claudio Aquaviva, "Fortes in fine conse-quendo, et suaves in modo." (Industria ad Curandos Animas Morbos, li. 1.) Aquaviva was General of the Society of Jesus, and his treatise was published in Venice in 1606.

GEORGE

- ⁹ I sing the Georges Four,
For Providence could stand no more.
Some say that far the worst
Of all the Four was George the First.
But yet by some 'tis reckoned
That worse still was George the Second.
And what mortal ever heard
Any good of George the Third?
When George the Fourth from earth descended,
Thank God the line of Georges ended.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Epigram, after hearing
Thackeray's lectures on the Four Georges.

- The injured Stewart line is gone,
A race outlandish fills their throne:
An idiot race, to honour lost—
Who know them best despise them most.
BURNS, On Seeing the Royal Palace at Stirling in Ruins.
- ¹⁰ Here every virtue pleased thou mayst behold
Which raised a hero to a god of old;
To form this One, the mixed ideas draw
From Edward, Henry, and the loved Nassau.
LAURENCE EUSDEN, Poet Laureate, 1718,
Birthday Ode to George I.
- ¹¹ Great friend of Liberty! in Kings a name
Above all Greek, above all Roman fame.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 1, l. 25. Referring to George II.
- ¹² In the first year of freedom's second dawn
Died George the Third; although no tyrant,
one
Who shielded tyrants. . . .
A better farmer ne'er brush'd dew from lawn,
A worse king never left a realm undone!
BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 8.
- He ever warr'd with freedom and the free:
Nations as men, home subjects, foreign foes,
So that they utter'd the word "Liberty!"
Found George the Third their first opponent.
BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 45.
- Talk no more of the lucky escape of the head
From a flint so unhappily thrown;
I think very different from thousands; indeed
'Twas a lucky escape for the stone.
JOHN WOLCOT, On a Stone Thrown at George III.
- ¹³ And where is Fum the Fourth, our royal bird?
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 78. Referring to George IV.
- How Monarchs die is easily explain'd,
And thus it might upon the Tomb be chisel'd,
"As long as George the Fourth could reign he reign'd,
And then he mislaid."
THOMAS HOOD, On a Royal Demise.
- That he was the handsomest prince in the whole world was agreed by men, and, alas! by many women.
THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George the Fourth.
- A corpulent Adonis of fifty.
LARGE HUNT, who was imprisoned for this referring to George IV, when Regent. (Examiner, 1813.)
- ¹⁴ Let George do it. (Laissez faire à Georges, il est l'homme d'âge.)
LOUIS XII of France. A satirical reference to his prime minister, Cardinal Georges d'Amboise. (c. 1500.) (See SLAUGHTER, Two Children in Old Paris, p. 233.) Translated into modern slang as meaning, "Let the other fellow do it."

GERMANY AND THE GERMANS

I—Germany: National Songs

¹ This is the German's fatherland,
Where wrath pursues the foreign band,—
Where every Frank is held a foe,
And Germans all as brothers glow;—
That is the land.—

All Germany's thy fatherland.
(Das ist des Deutschen Vaterland,
Wo Zorn verflücht den wälschen Tand,
Wo jeder Franzmann beisst Feind,
Wo jeder Deutsche beisst Freund—
Das soll es sein!

Das ganze Deutschland soll es sein!)

ERNST MORITZ ARNDT, Des Deutschen Vaterland.

² Germany, Germany over all, over all in the world! (Deutschland, Deutschland über Alles, über Alles in der Welt!)

A. H. HOFFMAN VON FALLERLEBEN, *Das Lied
der Deutschland*. First published in 1841, this song became very popular as a marching song during the World War.

Austria over all, if it only will. (Oesterreich über Alles wann es nur will.)

P. W. VON HORNICK. Title of pamphlet published in 1684.

Prussia over all. (Preussen über Alles.)

UNKNOWN. Title of song written in 1817.

³ French and Russian they matter not,
A blow for a blow and a shot for a shot,
We love them not, We hate them not;
We hold the Weichsel and Vosges gate,
We have but one and only hate;
We love as one, we hate as one,
We have one foe and one alone,
England!

(Was schiert uns Russe und Franzos?
Schuss wider Schuss und Stoss um Stoss,
Wir lieben sie nicht, Wir hassen sie nicht,
Wir schützen Weichsel und Wasgau pass,—
Wir haben nur einen einzigen Hass,
Wir lieben vereint, wir hassen vereint,
Wir haben nur einen einzigen Feind,
England!)

ERNST LIESSAUER, Hassgesang Gegen England.
St. 1. (1914) (Barbara Henderson, tr.)

We will never forego our hate,
We have all but a single hate,
We love as one, we hate as one,
We have one foe, and one alone,
England!

(Wir wollen nicht lassen von unserem Hass,
Wir haben alle nur einen Hass,
Wir lieben vereint, wir hassen vereint,
Wir haben all nur einen Feind:
England!)

At the Captain's mess, in the Banquet-hall,
Sat feasting the officers, one and all—
Like a sabre-blow, like the swing of a sail,

One raised his glass, held high to hail,
Sharp snapped like the stroke of a rudder's play,
Spoke three words only: "To the day!"

ERNST LIESSAUER, Hassgesang Gegen England.
"To the day!" (Auf den Tag!), the day,
that is, on which war would begin.

Twelve men of iron, drinking late,
Strike hands, and pledge a cup of hate:
"The Day!"

C. A. RICHMOND, The Day.

I pray that every passing hour
Your hearts may bruise and beat,
I pray that every step you take
May bruise and burn your feet.

ÉMILE CAMMAERTS, Vaux du Nouvel An, 1915, A L'Armée Allemande. (Lord Curzon, tr.) Observer, London, 10 Jan., 1915.

For agony and spoil

Of nations beat to dust,
For poisoned air and tortured soul,
And cold, commanded lust,
And every secret woe

The shuddering waters saw—
Willed and fulfilled by high and low—
Let them relearn the Law.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Justice, 24 Oct., 1918.

⁴ Dear Fatherland, no danger thine
Firm stand thy sons to watch the Rhine!
(Lieb Vaterland, magst ruhig sein, Fest stet und treu die Wacht am Rhein!)

MAX SCHNECKENBURGER, Die Wacht am Rhein.

⁵ Hail! thou as victor crowned! (Heil dir im Siegeskranz.)

B. G. SCHUMACHER. Title and refrain of Prussian national hymn.

II—Germany: Some Familiar Phrases

⁶ Our next war will be fought for the highest interests of our country and of mankind.
This will invest it with importance in the world's history. "World power or downfall" will be our rallying cry. (Weltmacht oder Nie-dergang.)

FRIEDRICH VON BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War. Ch. 5.

We Germans have a far greater and more urgent duty towards civilization to perform than the Great Asiatic Power. We, like the Japanese, can only fulfil it by the sword.

BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War. Ch. 13.

⁷ Just for a word, "neutrality," a word which in wartime had so often been disregarded—just for a scrap of paper, Great Britain is going to make war on a kindred nation who desires nothing better than to be friends with
her.

THEOBALD VON BETHMANN-HOLLEWE, German
Foreign Minister, to Sir Edward Goschen, British Ambassador, 4 Aug., 1914, (Despatch
by Sir Edward Goschen to British Foreign Office. War Encyclopedia, Govt. Ptg. Office, Wash., 1918.)

I will do my duty as I see it, without regard to scraps of paper called constitutions.

KING WILHELM I of Germany, Speech, to the Prussian Diet, which had refused to grant appropriations. (Harper's Weekly, 26 March, 1887.)

For what this whirlwind all aflame?

This thunderstroke of hellish ire,
Setting the universe afire?
While millions upon millions came
Into a very storm of war?

For a scrap of paper.

(Pourquoi cette trombe enflammée
Qui vient foudroyer l'univers?
Cet embrasement de l'enfer?
Ce tourbillonnement d'armées Par mille milliers de milliers?)

—C'est pour un chiffon de papier.)

PIÈRE HYACINTHE LOYSON, Pour un Chiffon de Papier. (Edward Brabrook, tr.)

1 Let us put Germany, so to speak, in the saddle! you will see that she can ride. (Setzen wir Deutschland, so zu sagen, in den Sattel! Reiten wird es schon können.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Parliament of the Confederation, 11 March, 1867.

We are not going to Canossa. (Nach Canossa gehen wir nicht.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Reichstag, May 14, 1872. It was to Canossa that Emperor Henry IV went to do three days' penance, barefoot, bareheaded, in the snow, before Pope Gregory VII, in January, 1077. Bismarck used the phrase at the beginning of the "Kulturkampf" contest with the Pope in 1872, to indicate that the revived German Empire would not surrender to the Papal claims. In the end the Pope won.

We Germans fear God, but nothing else in the world. (Wir Deutschen fürchten Gott, sonst aber Nichts in der Welt.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Reichstag, 1887.

BLOOD AND IRON, see WAR: DEFINITIONS.

2 German fury. (Furor teutonicus.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. 1, l. 255.

Destroyed by German fury, rebuilt by American generosity.

WHITNEY WARREN, Inscription, for library at Louvain, Belgium; finally rejected.

3 I beg that the small steamers . . . be spared if possible, or else sunk without a trace being left. (Spurlos versenkt.)

COUNT KARL VON LUXBURG, Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Aires, Telegram, to the Berlin Foreign Office, 19 May, 1917.

If neutrals were destroyed so that they disappeared without leaving any trace, terror would soon keep seamen and travelers away from the danger zones.

PROF. OSWALD FLAMCK, Berlin Woche. (See New York Times, 15 May, 1917.)

4 Der Kaiser auf der Vaterland

Und Gott on high, all dings gommmand,
Ve too, ach, don'd you understand?

Meinself—und Gott.

ALEXANDER MACGREGOR ROSE, Kaiser & Co. St. 1. First published in the Toronto Herald in 1897; recited by Captain Joseph Bullock Coghlan at a banquet at the Union League Club, New York, 21 April, 1899, on his return from the battle of Manila. Usually called, "Hoch der Kaiser." (See Stevenson, Famous Single Poems, p. 32.)

5 Shout! Let it reach the startled Huns!
And roar with all thy festal guns!

It is the answer of thy sons,

Carolina!

HENRY TIMROD, Carolina. Written in 1865, referring to Sherman's army. "Huns" became the popular name for the Germans in 1914.

6 Our German Fatherland to which I hope will be granted . . . to become in the future as closely united, as powerful, and as authoritative as once the Roman world-empire was, and that, just as in the old times they said, "Civis romanus sum," hereafter, at some time in the future, they will say, "I am a German citizen."

WILHELM II, Speech, Oct., 1900.

What was the old formula of Pan-Germanism? From Bremen to Bagdad, wasn't it?

WOODROW WILSON, Address, St. Louis, Mo., 5 Sept., 1919.

7 The Emperor's will is law. (Des Kaisers Wille ist des Gesetz.)

WILHELM II of Germany. (DAVIDSON, Imperialization of Germany. Forum, xliii, 252.)

If any man dares impugn our right, then drive in with your mailed fist! (Dann fahre darein mit gepanzerter Faust.)

WILHELM II of Germany, in his brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, at Kiel, on the eve of the latter's departure in 1897, in command of the German expedition against China. See Wilhelm II, vol. ii, p. 80.

It will now be my duty to see to it that this place in the sun shall remain our undisputed possession.

WILHELM II, Speech, on the acquisition of Kianchow, China, 18 June, 1901. Lebensraum (living room or space) became the equivalent Hitler slogan.

"That dog is mine," said those poor children; "that place in the sun is mine." Such is the beginning and type of usurpation throughout the earth. ("Ce chien est à moi," disaient ces pauvres enfants; "c'est là ma place au soleil." Voilà le commencement et l'image de l'usurpation.)

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 295.

A German quarrel. (Querelle d'allemand.)

A French phrase for an unjust quarrel.

III—Germany: Praise and Criticism

8 Germany is the only country I have visited where the hands of the men are better cared for than the hands of the women.

JOSEPHINE MILES, Germany.

⁶ If a man were drowning to-day he would have to shout for help in German.

SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, Speech, 1931. At a time when Germany was pleading for the cancellation of reparations.

⁷ It was a dictum of Porson, that "Life is too short to learn German"; meaning, I apprehend, not that it is too difficult to be acquired within the ordinary space of life, but that there is nothing in it to compensate for the portion of life bestowed on its acquirement.

THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Cryll Grange. Ch. 3.

⁸ Germans are honest men.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor, iv, 5, 73.

⁹ Ah, a German and a genius! a prodigy! Admit him.

²⁰ O'er all there hung a shadow and a fear;
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted.

THOMAS HOOD, The Haunted House.

- 1 Thin, airy shoals of visionary ghosts.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 46. (Pope, tr.)
- 2 All argument is against it, but all belief is for it.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to the appearance of men's spirits after death. (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)
- I look for ghosts; but none will force
Their way to me: 'tis falsely said
That there was ever intercourse
Between the living and the dead.
WORDSWORTH, The Affliction of Margaret, l. 57.
- I don't believe in ghosts, but I've been afraid of them all my life.
CHARLES A. DANA. (Quoted by BERT LESTON TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 156.)
- I expressed just now my mistrust of what is called Spiritualism . . . I owe it a trifle for a message said to have come from Voltaire's Ghost. It was asked, "Are you now convinced of another world?" and rapped out, "There is no other world—Death is only an incident in Life."
WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Joseph Vance. Ch. 11.
- 3 What gentle ghost, besprent with April dew,
Hails me so solemnly to yonder yew?
BEN JONSON, Elegy on Lady Jane Pawlet, l. 1.
- What beck'ning ghost along the moonlight shade
Invites my steps, and points to yonder glade?
POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 1.
- 4 So many ghosts, and forms of fright,
Have started from their graves to-night,
They have driven sleep from mine eyes away;
I will go down to the chapel and pray.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.
- 5 All houses wherein men have lived and died
Are haunted houses. Through the open doors
The harmless phantoms on their errands glide,
With feet that make no sound upon the floors.
LONGFELLOW, Haunted Houses. St. 1.
- The stranger at my fireside cannot see
The forms I see, nor hear the sounds I hear;
He but perceives what is; while unto me
All that has been is visible and clear.
LONGFELLOW, Haunted Houses. St. 4.
- 6 A thousand fantasies
Begin to throng into my memory
Of calling shapes, and beck'ning shadows dire,
And airy tongues, that syllable men's names
On sands, and shores, and desert wildernesses.
MILTON, Comus, l. 205.
- The other shape,
If shape it might be call'd that shape had none
Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb;
Or substance might be call'd that shadow seem'd.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 666.

- Whence and what are thou, execrable shape?
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 681.
- 7 But O as to embrace me she inclin'd,
I wak'd, she fled, and day brought back my night.
MILTON, Sonnet on His Deceased Wife.
- With a slow and noiseless footstep
Comes that messenger divine,
Takes the vacant chair beside me,
Lays her gentle hand in mine.
LONGFELLOW, Footsteps of Angels.
- 8 Men say that in this midnight hour,
The disembodied have power
To wander as it liketh them,
By wizard oak and fairy stream.
WILLIAM MOTTERWELL, Midnight.
- 9 Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 40.
- A figure like your father,
Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 199.
- 10 Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts
from hell,
Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
Thou comest in such questionable shape
That I will speak to thee.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 39.
- Alas, poor ghost!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 4.
- 11 Unhand me, gentlemen.
By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 84.
- 12 I am thy father's spirit,
Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 9.
- No ghost should be allowed to walk
And make such havoc with its talk:
When folks are dead, they should retire—
I have no patience with you, Sir!
CHARLES DALMON, To the Ghost of Hamlet's Father.
- 13 There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave
To tell us this.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 125.
- It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 138.
- Art thou there, truepenny?
Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 150.
- 14 The time has been,
That, when the brains were out, the man
would die,
And there an end; but now they rise again,

With twenty mortal murders on their crowns.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 79.

Avant! and quit my sight! let the earth hide thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;

Thou hast no speculation in those eyes

Which thou dost glare with!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 93.

Hence, horrible shadow! Unreal mockery, hence!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 106.

Now it is the time of night,

That the graves, all gaping wide,

Every one lets forth his sprite,

In the church-way paths to glide.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act v, sc. 1, l. 386.

For all that here on earth we dreadful hold,
Be but as bugs to fearene babes withall.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto xii, st. 25.

Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 2.

To the world no bugbear is so great

As want of figure and a small estate.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 67.

At desperate doings with a bauble-sword,

And other bugaboo-and-baby-work.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.

Pt. v, l. 949.

I seem'd to move among a world of ghosts,

And feel myself the shadow of a dream.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 17.

A footstep, a low throbbing in the walls,

A noise of falling weights that never fell,

Weird whispers, bells that rang without a hand,

Door-handles turn'd when none was at the door,

And bolted doors that open'd of themselves;

And one betwixt the dark and light had seen

Her, bending by the cradle of her babe.

TENNYSON, The Ring, l. 375.

There came a ghost to Marg'ret's door,

With many a grievous groan,

And aye he tirl'd at the pin,

But answer made she none.

UNKNOWN, Sweet William and May Marg'ret.

GIANT

The giant loves the dwarf.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Lorna Doone. Ch. 1. Quoted

as a proverb.

Pigmy placed on the shoulders of giants

see more than the giants themselves. (Pig-mei gigantum humeris importiti plusquam

ipsi gigantes vident.)

DIMACUS STELLA. (LUCAN, De Bello Civili, x, ii.) Quoted by Burton, Anatomy of Melan- choly: Democritus to the Reader.

For as our modern wits behold,

Mounted a pick-back on the old,

Much farther off, much further he,

Rais'd on his aged beast, could see.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 71.

A dwarf sees farther than the giant when he has the giant's shoulders to mount on.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Friend. Vol. i, p. 8.

A dwarf on a giant's shoulders sees farther of the two.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A giant will starve with what will surfeit a dwarf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 209.

There were giants in the earth in those days.

Old Testament: Genesis, vi, 4.

Strong were our sires, and as they fought they writ,

Conqu'ring with force of arms and dint of wit:

Theirs was the giant race before the flood.

DRYDEN, Epistle to Mr. Congreve, l. 3.

A fellow thirteen cubits high, (τρεκαίδεκαπυγυ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 17.

Great giants work great wrongs—but we are small,

For love goes lowly; but Oppression's tall.

THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

You Stump-o'-the-Gutter, you Hop-o'-my-

Thumb,

Your husband must from Lilliput come.

KANE O'HARA, Midas.

Far be it from me to tell them of the battles of the giants.

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 378. (Jowett, tr.)

A dwarf is not tall, though he stand upon a mountain-top; a giant keeps his height, even though he stands in a well. (Non est magnus pumilio, licet in monte constiterit; colossus magnitudinem suam servabit, etiam si

steterit in puteo.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epls. lxxvi, 32.

Pigmy are pigmies still, though perch'd on alps,

And pyramids are pyramids in vales.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 309.

A stirring dwarf we do allowance give

Before a sleeping giant.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii,

sc. 3, l. 146.

Shall a man go hang himself because he belongs to the race of pygmies, and not be the biggest pygmy that he can?

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

GIFTS AND GIVING

I—Gifts: Apothegms

To treat a poor wretch with a bottle of Burgundy, and fill his snuff-box, is like giving a pair of laced ruffles to a man that has never a shirt on his back.

TOM BROWN, Laconics.

But hang it—to poets who seldom can eat,
Your very good mutton's a very good treat;
Such dainties to them, their health it might hurt:
It's like sending them ruffles, when wanting a shirt.

GOLDSMITH, The Hunch of Venison, l. 33.

When they offer thee a heifer, run with a halter.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

When the pig's proffered, hold up the poke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs.

Gifts break rocks. (Dadivas quebrantan peñas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 35. Quoted by Fuller, Gnomologia. See also under BRISNEY.

Giving and keeping require brains.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

To give and keep there is need of wit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Be careful to whom you give. (Cui des videto.)
DIONYSIUS CATO(?), Disticha Moralia: Prologus, l. 17.

He that's liberal

To all alike, may do a good by chance,
But never out of judgement.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Spanish Curate. Act i, sc. 1.

Who gives to all denies all.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

One must be poor to know the luxury of giving.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

To give is the business of the rich. (Denn Geben ist Sache des Reichen.)

GOETTER, Hermann und Dorothea. Canto i, l. 15.

Poor and liberal; rich and covetous.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

It is said that gifts persuade even the gods. (Ἐλεῖται δῶρα καὶ θεοὺς λόγος.)

EURYPIDES, Medea, l. 964.

Gifts persuade the gods, gifts persuade noble kings. (Δῶρα θεοῖς πείθει δῶρ' ἀσέλοισι βασιλεῦσιν.)

PLATO, De Republica. Bk. iii. Quoted. Attributed to Hesiod by Suidas.

One gift well given recovereth many losses.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Give a thing, take a thing.

That's an old man's plaything.

UNKNOWN. (HALLIWELL, Proverb-Rhymes.)

Give a thing and take again,

And you shall ride in hell's wain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Steal the hog, and give the feet for alms.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Steal the goose and give the giblets in alms.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

When I gave you an inch, you took an ell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9.

Give an inch, he'll take an ell.

JOHN WEBSTER, Sir Thomas Wyatt.

What shall I give? What shall I not give? (Quid dem? Quid non dem?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 63.

The greatest grace of a gift, perhaps, is that it anticipates and admits of no return.

LONGFELLOW, Journals and Letters, 28 Feb., 1871.

Giving calls for genius. (Res est ingeniosa dare.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 62.

For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows; Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 101.

Let your portal be deaf to prayers, but wide to the giver. (Surda sit oranti tua janua, laxa ferenti.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 77. Ovid's advice to a woman.

Blessed is he who gets the gift, not he for whom it is meant. (Cui datum est, non cui destinatum.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43.

A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 8.

Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches and honour.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 16.

Giff-gaff makes gude friends.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish. Giff-gaff means one gift for another.

Giff-gaff was a good man, but he is soon weary.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

I am not in the giving vein today.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 119.

Sure the duke is in the giving vein.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act v, sc. 3.

The Gods themselves cannot recall their gifts.
TENNYSON, Tithonus, l. 49. Quoted.

Only he can be trusted with gifts who can present a face of bronze to expectations.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

II—Gifts: The Gift Horse

St. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistula ad Ephesus: Proem. Sometimes given: "Equi donati dentes non inspicuntur." Referred to as "ut vulgare proverbium est." The expression was used by St. Jerome, according to Archbishop Trench (Study of Words), when he replied to certain critics that they ought not to find fault with his writings, since they were free-will offerings.

A given horse may not be looked in the teeth.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria. Sig. C4. (c. 1520)

² He always looked a given horse in the mouth.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1532)

³ A given horse (we say) may not be looked in the mouth.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 49. (1539)

No man ought to look a given horse in the mouth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

⁴ I am resolved to ride this way [facing the tail], to make good the proverb, that I may not look a gift horse in the mouth.

HEAD and KIRKMAN, English Rogue, iii, 158. (1674)

⁵ He ne'er consider'd it, as loth
To look a gift-horse in the mouth,
And very wisely would lay forth
No more upon it than 'twas worth;
But as he got it freely, so
He spent it frank and freely too:
For saints themselves will sometimes be,
Of gifts that cost them nothing, free.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 489.

III—Giving and Receiving

⁶ It is more blessed to give than to receive.

New Testament: Acts, ix, 35.

It is more blisful to give than to take.

UNKNOWN, Dives and the Pauper. Fo. 2. (1536)

It is better to give than to take.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. v. (1546)

⁷ A man there was, though some did count him mad,
The more he cast away the more he had.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

So that the more she gave away,

The more, y-wis, she had alway.

CHAUCER, Remount of the Rose, l. 1159. Referring to Largesse.

The only things we ever keep

Are what we give away.

LOUIS GINASSIO, Song.

⁸ That man may last, but never lives,
Who much receives, but nothing gives:

Whom none can love, whom none can thank,
Creation's blot, creation's blank.

THOMAS GIBSON, When Jesus Dwelt.

⁹ To get by giving, and to lose by keeping,
Is to be sad in mirth, and glad in weeping.

CHRISTOPHER HARRIS, The Synagogue: The Church Still.

¹⁰ Give is a good girl, but Take is bad and she brings death. (Δός αγαθή, ἀρὰς δὲ κακὴ, θάνατος δόρατα.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 356.

¹¹ Who shuts his hand, hath lost his gold:
Who opens it, hath it twice told.

GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots.

Giving much to the poor
Doth enrich a man's store;
It takes much from the account
To which his sin doth amount.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

¹² The truly generous is the truly wise.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act iii, sc. 1.

¹³ The wise man does not lay up treasure. The more he gives to others, the more he has for his own.

LAO-TSEI, The Simple Way. No. 81.

¹⁴ Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over.

New Testament: Luke, vi, 38. (Date et dabitur vobis.—Vulgate.)

In giving, a man receives more than he gives, and the more is in proportion to the worth of the thing given.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Mary Marston. Ch. 5.

¹⁵ Who gives to friends so much from Fate secures.

That is the only wealth forever yours.
(Extra fortunam est quidquid donatur amicis;

Quas dederis solas semper habebis opes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 42.

¹⁶ Go and sell (that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 21.

The poor work miracles every day: we give them, and they give us treasure in heaven.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, 19.

¹⁷ For all you can hold in your cold, dead hand is what you have given away.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Peter Cooper. A translation of an ancient Sanscrit proverb.

¹⁸ The liberal soul shall be made fat.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 25.

¹⁹ The goods we spend we keep; and what we save we lose; and only what we lose we have.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Poemes. Bk. iv, sec.

70. An apothegm which occurs in various forms in many writers.

¹ Whatever I have given I still possess. (Hoc habeo quodcumque dedi.)

C. RABIRIUS. (SENECA, De Beneficiis, vi, 3, 1.)

² The hand that gives, gathers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

³ Back of the sound broods the silence, back of the gift stands the giving;

Back of the hand that receives thrill the sensitive nerves of receiving.

RICHARD REALT, Indirection.

⁴ What we give to the wretched is given to Fortune. (Misero datur quodcumque, fortune datur.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 697.

⁵ What we gave, we have;

What we spent, we had;

What we left, we lost.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon. (1419) (CLEVELAND, Genealogical History of the Family of Courtenay, p. 142.) Similar inscriptions are found on many old tombstones.

Quod expendi habui;

Quod donavi habeo;

Quod servavi perdidit.

RAVENSHAW, Antiente Epitaphes, p. 5. Quoted as the epitaph under the effigy of a priest.

⁶ I have spent; I have given; I have kept; I have possessed; I do possess; I have lost; I am punished; what I spent, I had; what I gave away, I have.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale xvi. Quoted as the epitaph on a sarcophagus.

IV—Gift and Giver

⁷ If thou doest aught good, do it quickly. For what is done quickly will be acceptable. Favors slowly granted are unfavorably received. (Si bene quid facias, facias cito. Nam cito factum Gratium erit. Ingratum gratia tarda facit.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xvii.

He gives by halves, who hesitates to give.

WILLIAM BROOKS, Letter to Lord Cornwallis.

⁸ For whoso giveth a gift, or doth a grace, Does it betimes, his thank is well the more.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 451.

Whate'er you give, give ever at demand, Nor let old age stretch long his palsied hand; Those who give late are importun'd each day, And still are teas'd because they still delay.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 457.

He that's long a-giving knows not how to give.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

⁹ Give nobly to indigent merit, and do not refuse your charity even to those who have no merit but their misery.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. (Undated. To be delivered after his death.)

Shut not thy purse-strings always against painted distress. . . . Rake not into the bowels of unwelcome truth to save a half-penny.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Decay of Beggars.

¹⁰ The good received, the giver is forgot.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, To Lord Halifax, l. 39. See also under Devil.

¹¹ Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xli, 4.

It is not the weight of jewel or plate,

Or the fondle of silk or fur;

'Tis the spirit in which the gift is rich,

As the gifts of the Wise Ones were,

And we are not told whose gift was gold,

Or whose was the gift of myrrh.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, The Spirit of the Gift.

¹² God loveth a cheerful giver.

New Testament: II Corinthians, ix, 7.

¹³ He giveth oft who gives what's oft refused.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Epigrammata Sacra, l. 103.

¹⁴ We do not quite forgive a giver. The hand that feeds us is in some danger of being bitten.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

¹⁵ The gift, to be true, must be the flowing of the giver unto me, correspondent to my flowing unto him.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

Rings and jewels are not gifts, but apologies for gifts. The only gift is a portion of thyself. . . . Therefore the poet brings his poem; the shepherd, his lamb; the farmer, corn; the miner, a gem; the sailor, coral and shells; the painter, his picture; the girl, a handkerchief of her own sewing.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

For the will and not the gift makes the giver. (Denn der Wille und nicht die Gabe macht den Geber.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act I, sc. 5.

¹⁶ Give, if thou canst, an alms: if not, afford, Instead of that, a sweet and gentle word.

ROBERT HERRICK, Alms.

Give unto all, lest he whom thou deny'st May chance to be no other man but Christ.

ROBERT HERRICK, Alms.

¹⁷ From Zeus are all strangers and beggars. (Ἰπὸς γὰρ Ἀδὲς εἰσὶν ἄνθρωποι ξένοι καὶ πτωχοὶ τοί.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 207.

By Jove the stranger and the poor are sent,
And what to those we give, to Jove is lent.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 207. (Pope, tr.)

1
To give awkwardly is churlishness. The most difficult part is to give, then why not add a smile?

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Of the Court.

2
That is no true alms which the hand can hold;
He gives only the worthless gold
Who gives from a sense of duty.

J. R. LOWELL, Vision of Sir Launfal. Pt. i, st. 6.

Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare;
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,
Himself, his hungry neighbor, and me.

J. R. LOWELL, Vision of Sir Launfal. Pt. ii, st. 8.

3
When you give. Give not by halves.

MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act ii, sc. 3.

4
Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them. . . . But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 1-3.

5
The obligation of a gift hath reference wholly unto the will of him that giveth.

11
He gives a double favor to a poor man who gives quickly. (Inopi beneficium his dat, qui dat celeriter.)

SENECA. (PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Proverbs of Seneca. No. 235.) Usually quoted, "Bis dat, qui cito dat," "He gives twice who gives quickly." Bacon quoted it in this form when he took his seat in Chancery, 7 May, 1617. It appears in some form in many of the classics, attributed to various authors. Langius (Polyanth. Noviss., p. 382) credits it to Publius Minus. Erasmus (Adagia, p. 265) credits it to Seneca.

Who gives at once gives twice. (El que luego Da, da dos veces.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 34.

He gives doubly who gives quickly. (Duplex fit bonitas, simul accessit celeritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 161.

He giveth twice that gives in a trice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12
Hamlet: I never gave you ought.

Ophelia: My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;

And, with them, words of so sweet breath composed,

As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,

Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 96.

13
To loyal hearts the value of all gifts
Must vary as the giver's.

Behold, I do not give lectures or a little charity,

When I give I give myself.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself, Sec. 40.

V—Gifts: Great and Small

17
Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee.

New Testament: Acts, iii, 6.

'Twas all he gave, 'twas all he had to give.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. 1,

l. 132.

18
I give thee sixpence I'll see thee damned first.

GEORGE CARLINO, The Friend of Humanity and the Knife-Grinder.

- 1 Give plenty of what is given to you,
Listen to pity's call;
Don't think the little you give is great,
And the much you get is small.
PHILIP CARY, A Legend of the Northland.
- 2 But covet earnestly the best gifts.
New Testament: I Corinthians, xii, 31.
- 3 The great gifts are not got by analysis. . . .
Nature hates calculators.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.
- 4 He that gives me small gifts would have me live.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
A little given seasonably excuses a great gift.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 5 A gift though small is welcome. (Δόσις δ' ὀλίγη τε, φιλία τε.)

A gift worthy of Apollo. (Munus Apolline dig-num.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 216. Referring to a book or poem.
- 7 "Here it is," said Father Phil, "here it is, and no denying it—down in black and white;
but if they who give are in black, how much blacker are those who have not given at all?"
SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 28.
- 8 Great gifts are for great men.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
- 9 Seven hundred pounds and possibilities is good gifts.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.

ingly; if thou hast but a little, be not afraid to give according to that little.
Apocrypha: Tobit, iv, 8.
Give what you have. To some one, it may be better than you dare to think.
LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 30.
- 11 I have found out a gift for my fair;
I have found where the wood-pigeons breed.
(Parsa mea Veneri sunt munera: nam que notavi
Ipse locum, aeris quo congressere palumbæ.)
VERON, Eclagues. No. iii, l. 68. (William Shenstone, tr.)
- 12 Give all thou canst: high Heaven rejects the lore

Of nicely-calculated less or more.
WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, 43.

VI—Gifts: Their Danger

- 13 We must take care to indulge only in such generosity as will help our friends and hurt no one . . . for nothing is generous, if it is not at the same time just. (Nihil est liberale, quod non idem justum.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 14, sec. 43.
- 14 A gift destroyeth the heart.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 7.

them. (Κακοῖ γὰρ ἀνδρῶν δῶρ' ὄφρα οὐκ ἔχει.)
EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 618.
A wicked man's gift hath a touch of its master.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 16 Thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.
Old Testament: Exodus, xxiii, 8.
- 17 The generous man pays for nothing so much as for what is given him.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.
I find nothing so dear as what is given me.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.
- 18 He is very fond of making things which he doesn't want, and then giving them to people who have no use for them.
ANTHONY HOPE, The Dolly Dialogues. No. 17.
- 19 The prodigal and the fool give what they despise and hate, and this seed produces a crop of ingrates. (Prodigus et stultus donat que spernit et odit; Hæc seges ingratos tulit.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 20.
- 20 He who has given this to-day, may, if he pleases, take it away to-morrow. (Qui dedit hoc hodie, cras, si volet, auferet.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 33.
The good that can be given, can be removed.
(Dati bonum quod potuit, auferri potest.)
LUCILIUS. (SENeca, Epistula ad Lucilium.
Epis. viii, sec. 10.)
What can be given can also be taken away. (Quod dari posset, et eripi posse.)
SENeca, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xcviii, 13.
- 21 "He sent out great gifts indeed." But he sent them on a hook, and is it possible that the fish can love the fisherman? ("Munera magna tamen misit." Sed misit in hamo; Et piscatorem piscis amare potest?)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, ep. 63, l. 5.
Whoever makes great presents, expects great presents in return. (Quisquis magna dedit, voluit sibi magna remitti.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. lix, l. 3.

Take gifts with a sigh: most men give to be paid.
JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

1 I give that you may give. (Do ut des.)
BISMARCK, Maxim.

2 Thy pompous delicacies I condemn,
And count thy specious gifts no gifts but guiles.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. II, l. 390.

Their offers should not charm us,
Their evil gifts would harm us.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Goblin Market.

3 All the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act I, sc. 2, l. 194.

4 The gifts of a foe are not gifts, and have no value. (Ἐχθρῶν δῶρα δῶρα τοῖς ἐχθροῖς.)
SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 665. A proverb.

The gifts of an enemy seemed to them much to be feared. (Les dons d'un ennemi leur semblaient trop à craindre.)
VOLTAIRE, Henriade. Ch. 2.

5 The deadly gift of Minerva. (Donum exitiale Minervæ.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. II, l. 31. Referring to the gift of the wooden horse which led to Troy's downfall. See also under GREECE.

VII—Gifts: Generosity

6 Our generosity should never exceed our means. (Ne benignitas major esset quam facultates.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 14, sec. 44.

Bounty has no bottom. (Largitionem fundum non habere.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. II, ch. 15, sec. 55. Quoted as "a common proverb."

7 A hand as liberal as the light of day.
COWPER, Hope, l. 410.

8 It is always so pleasant to be generous, though very vexatious to pay debts.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

9 A man being sometimes more generous when he has but a little money than when he has plenty, perhaps through fear of being thought to have but little.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

10 Generosity is the flower of justice.

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 19 Dec., 1850.

11 I had rather be a beggar and spend my last dollar like a king, than be a king and spend my money like a beggar.

LONGFELLOW, Liberty of Man, Women and Child.

12 What is called liberality is often merely the vanity of giving. (Ce qu'on nomme libéralité n'est le plus souvent que la vanité de donner.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 263.

13 The very name of Liberality sounds Liberty.
(Le nom même de la Libéralité sonne Liberté.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 6.

14 He partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act III,
sc. 13, l. 66.

For his bounty,
There was no winter in 't; and autumn 'twas
That grew the more by reaping.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act V,
sc. 2, l. 86.

My purse, my person, my extremest means
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act I,
sc. 1, l. 138.

15 Good-humour and generosity carry the day with the popular heart all the world over.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On Vagabonds.

16 I have always been deeply impressed by an old Jewish proverb which says, "What you give for the cause of charity in health is gold; what you give in sickness is silver;
what you give after death is lead."

NATHAN STRAUS. First paragraph of Will.

VIII—Gifts of the Gods

17 God's gifts put man's best dreams to shame.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xxvi.

18 That gift of his, from God descended.
Ah! friend, what gift of man's does not?

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas Eve. Canto xvi.

19 Gifts come from above in their own peculiar forms. (Die Gaben Kommen von oben herab, in ihren eignen Gestalten.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea. Canto v,
l. 69.

20 Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

NEW TESTAMENT: James, i, 17.

21 How blind men are to Heaven's gifts! (O munera nondum Intellecta deum!)

LUCAN, De Bella Civili. Bk. v, l. 528.

22 God has given some gifts to the whole human race, from which no one is excluded. (Deus quædam munera universo humano generi dedit, a quibus excluditur nemo.)

SENeca, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 28.

1 O you gods!

Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And smatch them straight away?

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act III, sc. 1, l. 23.

2 For whatever a man has, is in reality only a gift. (Denn was ein Mensch auch hat, so sind's am Ende Gaben.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. II, l. 19.

3 A gift of that which is not to be given
By all the blended powers of earth and heaven.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. II, No. 1.

That every gift of noble origin
Is breathed upon by Hope's perpetual breath.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. No. 20.

GIRL

4 Oh, you mysterious girls, when you are fifty-two we shall find you out. You must come into the open then.

J. M. BARRETT, The Little White Bird. Ch. 1.

5 Girls are so massive and complete,
The ponderous important feet . . .
These awe me so I half-way miss
The fact that girls are made to kiss.

ROBERT LOUIS BURNES, Girls.

6 'Tis true, your budding Miss is very charming,
But shy and awkward at first coming out,
So much alarm'd that she is quite alarming,
All Giggle, Blush—half Pertness, and half Pout, . . .

The Nursery still lisps out in all they utter—
Besides, they always smell of bread and butter.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 39.

7 Let every girl attend to her spinning. (Cada puta hille.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. I, ch. 46.

8 I grudge no expense in your education, but I positively will not keep you a Flapper.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Sept., 1749.
Chesterfield's reference is to Swift (Gulliver's Travels: Voyages to Laputa), who tells how the Laputians were so absent-minded that a "flapper" was necessary to brush their eyelids from time to time, to keep them from falling over precipices, etc.

See the three skirts in the back? That's the Missus and the two squabs. Young one's only a flapper.
HARRY LAUREN WILSON, Summer Song. (1912)

"Flapper" was further popularized by Scott Fitzgerald in 1920.

If there's anything in a beauty nap most o' the flappers I see must suffer from insomnia.

KEN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 119.

If a davenport is a sheik's workbench, a rumble seat is a flapper's showcase.

G. E. SAMS, Pathfinder. No. 1866.)

9 One of those little prating girls,
Of whom fond parents tell such tedious stories.

DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act I, sc. 1.

10 My gal is a high born lady,
She's black but none too shady,
Feather'd like a peacock, just as gay,
She is not colored, she was born that way.

BARNES FAGAN, My Gal Is a High Born Lady.

11 They are not young ladies, they are young persons.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act I.

12 Girls like to be played with, and rumpled a little, too, sometimes.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act v, 1.

But lest, by frail desires misled,
The girls forbidden paths should tread,
Of ignorance raised the safe high wall;
We sink ha-has, and show them all.
Thus we at once solicit sense,
And charge them not to break the fence.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 274.

Defiant love sonnets demanding nude joys lure girls to be naughty
and live like the boys.

ALFRED KERRYMORE, E.S.V.M.—Authors in Epigram.

You may tempt the upper classes
With your villainous demi-tassees,
But Heaven will protect the working-girl!
EDGAR SMITH, Heaven Will Protect the Working-Girl. Sung with great success by Marie Dressler in Tillie's Nightmare, 1909.

13 When she was a girl (forty summers ago)
Aunt Tabitha tells me they never did so.

O. W. HOLMES, The Post at the Breakfast-Table: Aunt Tabitha.

14 Wretched, un-idea'd girls.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1752.)

15 This all girls learn before their alphabet.
(Hoc discunt omnes ante alpha et beta puellæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 209. Referring to love of money.

16 There was a little girl
Who had a little curl

Right in the middle of her forehead,
And when she was good

She was very, very good,

But when she was bad she was horrid.

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW (?). According to Longfellow's son (ERNEST W. LONGFELLOW, Random Memories, p. 15), this little chant was composed while the poet was walking up and down his garden, carrying his second daughter, "Edith with the golden hair," in his arms. (See also BLANCHE R. TUCKER-MACHETTA, Home Life of Longfellow, p. 90.)

Perhaps it is better so—this world is a hard place for girls.

The most impudent hussy I have ever seen. (Quam ego unam vidi mulierem audacissimam.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 521. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

We yet call a wench that skippeth or leapeth like a boy, a tomboy.

RICHARD ROWLANDS, Antiquities Concerning the English Nation, p. 234. (1605)

You bring up your girls as if they were meant for sideboard ornaments; and then complain of their frivolity.

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: Queen's Gardens. Sec. 80.

But the full sum of me . . . Is an unleson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd: Happy in this, she is not yet so old But she may learn; happier than this, She is not bred so dull but she can learn.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 159.

'Tis a credit to any good girl to be neat, But quite a disgrace to be fine.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, Neatness.

For a good-natured girl is loved best in the main, If her dress is but decent, though ever so plain.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, Faithful.

Queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls.

GLADSTONE, W. E.

An almost spectral kind of phantasm of a man—nothing in him but forms and ceremonies and outside wrappings.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter, 23 March, 1873.

A sophisticated rhetorician, inebriated with the exuberance of his own verbosity, and gifted with an egotistical imagination that can at all times command an interminable and inconsistent series of arguments to malign an opponent and glorify himself.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 27 July, 1878.

He has not a single redeeming defect.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI. Referring to Gladstone.

He has one gift most dangerous to a speculator, a vast command of a kind of language, grave and majestic, but of vague and uncertain import.

MACAULAY, Essays: Gladstone on Church and State.

The rising hope of those stern and unbecoming Tories.

MACAULAY, Gladstone on Church and State.

The faculty of concealing his thoughts in words, of separating conviction from argument, was not the least striking of the great statesman's talents.

AGNES REPPNER, In Life.

GLORY

I—Glory: Definitions

True glory takes deep root and spreads its branches wide; but all pretences soon fall to the ground like fragile flowers, and nothing counterfeit can be lasting. (Vera gloria radices agit atque etiam propagatur, ficta omnia celeriter tamquam flosculi decidunt, nec simulatum potest quicquam esse diuturnum.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. II, ch. 12, sec. 43.

¹ Glory follows virtue as if it were its shadow.
(Gloria virtutem tanquam umbra sequitur.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. I, ch. 45, sec. 110.

Of all the rewards of virtue, if we are to take any account of rewards, the most splendid is glory; for it is glory alone that can offer us the memory of posterity as a consolation for the shortness of life, so that, though absent, we are present, though dead, we live; it is by the ladder of glory only that mere men appear to rise to the heavens.

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. 35, sec. 97.

Glory is never where virtue is not. (La gloire n'est jamais où la vertu n'est pas.)

LE FRANC, Didon.

He that would have his virtue published, is not the servant of virtue, but glory.

BEN JONSON, Explorato: De Sibi Molestis.

² Glory, built
On selfish principles, is shame and guilt.

³ He will have true glory who despises glory.
(Gloriam qui spreverit, veram habet.)

FABIUS MAXIMUS. (Livy, History. Bk. xii, 39.)

⁴ True glory dwells where glorious deeds are done.

Where great men rise whose names athwart
the dusk

Of misty centuries gleam like the sun!

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, The City's Crown.

⁵ Popular glory is a perfect coquette; her lovers must toil, feel every inquietude, indulge every caprice, and perhaps at last be jilted into the bargain. True glory, on the other hand, resembles a woman of sense; her admirers must play no tricks. They feel no great anxiety, for they are sure in the end of being rewarded in proportion to their merit.

GOLDSMITH, The Bee. No. 6.

⁶ No flowery road leads to glory. (Aucun chemin de fleurs ne conduit à la gloire.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 17, l. 35.

⁴ Sound, sound the clarion, fill the fife,
To all the sensual world proclaim
One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name.

MAJOR THOMAS OSBERT MORDAUNT, A Poem, Written During the Last German War. First published in The Bee, Edinburgh, 12 Oct., 1791. Used by Sir Walter Scott at the head of ch. 13, bk. ii, of Old Mortality. The "Last German War" referred to in the title of the poem was the Seven Years' War, 1756-1763, between Austria and Prussia. Major Mordaunt was with the 10th Dragoons, which was in Germany at the close of the war. (See Literary Digest, 31 Sept., 1920, p. 38.) BIRRELL, More Obiter Dicta (1924) ventures the opinion that Scott, glancing over the proof of Mordaunt's "vapid verses," caught fire at the tenth stanza, and sitting down, "in a fine frenzy dashed off the immortal lines. This is not proof positive," Birrell adds, "but it is good enough for me."

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, ep. 25, last line.

Those glories come too late
That on our ashes wait.

A translation of Martial's epigram used on the title-page of the posthumous poems of Richard Lovelace, 1659.

Seldom comes Glory till a man be dead.

ROBERT HEARICK, Hesperides. No. 624.

¹⁹ If glory comes after death, I am in no hurry. (Si post fata venit gloria non propero.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 10, l. 12.

²⁰ Who pants for glory finds but short repose:
A breath revives him, or a breath o'erthrows.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 2, l. 300.

A breath can make them, as a breath has made.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 54.

²¹ Alas! how difficult it is to retain glory! (Hec, quam difficilis glorie custodia est.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 233.

²² Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself.

Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 133.

I have ventured,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 358.

Like madness is the glory of this life.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 139.

Who would be so mock'd with glory?

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 33.

Avoid shame, but do not seek glory; nothing
so expensive as glory.

SYDNEY SMITH. (Lady Holland, Memoir. Ch. 4.)

How swiftly passes away the glory of the world! (O quam cito transit gloria mundi.)
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Pt. i, ch. 3.

So passes away the glory of the world. (Sic transit gloria mundi.)

The sentence used during the ceremony of enthroning a new Pope at the moment that flax is burned to indicate the transitoriness of earthly grandeur. Perhaps derived from the phrase by Thomas à Kempis. A similar rite is said to have been used in the triumphal processions of the Roman Republic.
(ZONARA, Annales. Basle, 1553.)

4

Short is the glory that is given and taken by men; and sorrow followeth ever the glory of the world.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
ii, ch. 6.

5

We rise in glory as we sink in pride.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 508.

GLOW-WORM

6

Tasteful illumination of the night,
Bright scattered, twinkling star of spangled
earth.

JOHN CLARE, To the Glowworm.

7

While many a glowworm in the shade
Lights up her love torch.

COLERIDGE, The Nightingale.

Glow-worms on the ground are moving,
As if in the torch-dance circling.

HEINE, Donna Clara. St. 17.

9

Her eyes the glow-worm lend thee.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Night-Piece, to Julia.

10

Ye living lamps, by whose dear light
The nightingale does sit so late;
And studying all the summer night,

Her matchless songs does meditate.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Mower to the Glow-worm.

11

Here's a health to the glow-worm, Death's sober lamplighter.

OWEN MEREDITH, An Café.

12

When evening closes Nature's eye,
The glow-worm lights her little spark
To captivate her favourite fly

And tempt the rover through the dark.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Glow-worm.

Shine, little glow-worm, glimmer.

LILLA CAYLEY ROBINSON, The Glow-Worm.
The great song success of The Girl Behind the Counter. (1905)

13

The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 89.

Twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,

To guide our measure round about the tree.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 3, l. 82.

Like a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 43.

Among the crooked lanes, on every hedge,
The glow-worm lights his gem; and, through the dark,

A moving radiance twinkles.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer. l. 1682.

15

There the glow-worms hang their lamps.
WORDSWORTH, The Primrose of the Rock.

I—God: Definitions

16

God's wisdom and God's goodness!—Ay, but fools

Mis-define these till God knows them no more.

Wisdom and goodness, they are God!—what schools

Have yet so much as heard this simpler lore?
This no Saint preaches, and this no Church
rules:

'Tis in the desert, now and heretofore.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Divinity. St. 3.

17

God is the poet, men are but the actors.

HONORÉ DE BALZAC, Christian Socrates.

God Himself is the best Poet,

And the Real is his song.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 36.

God is the perfect poet,

Who in his person acts his own creations.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. II, ed. fin.

God on His throne is eldest of poets:
Unto His measures moveth the Whole.

WILLIAM WATSON, England My Mother. Pt. II.

1 When we say God, we seem to denote a substance, but it is a substance that is supersubstantial. (Nam cum dicimus "deus," substantiam quidem significare videmur, sed eam quæ sit ultra substantiam.)

BOETHIUS, De Trinitate. Ch. 4, sec. 15.

The gods possess the form of man; yet their form is not corporeal, but only resembles bodily substance. (Homines esse specie deos contitendum est; nec tamen ea species corpus est, sed quasi corpus.)

GAIUS VELLEIUS, expounding the Epicurean doctrine. (CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. I, ch. 18, sec. 49.)

"God has not body, but a semblance of body": what "a semblance of body" may mean, in the case of God, I cannot understand; nor can you either, Velleius, only you won't admit it. (Non corpus esse in deo sed quasi corpus: . . . in deo quid sit quasi corpus intellegere non possum. Ne tu quidem, Vellei, sed non vis fateri.)

COTTA, refuting Velleius. (CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. I, ch. 24, sec. 68.)

2 God is not one thing because He is, and another thing because He is just; with Him to be just and to be God are one and the same. (Neque enim aliud est quod est, aliud est quod justus est, sed idem est esse deo quod justo.)

BOETHIUS, De Trinitate. Ch. 4, sec. 19.

3 No worldly thing
Can a continuance have
Unless love back again it bring Unto the cause which first the essence gave.
(Quia non aliter durare queant,
Nisi converso rursus amore
Refuant causæ quæ dedit esse.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk. IV, ch. 6, l. 46.

From thee, great God, we spring, to thee we tend,
Path, motive, guide, original, and end.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 7. Paraphrasing Boethius.

God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide and lantern to my feet.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act II, sc. 3, l. 24.

4 A picket frozen on duty—
A mother starved for her brood—
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the rood;
And millions who, humble and nameless,
The straight, hard pathway trod—
Some call it Consecration,
And others call it God.
W. H. CARSWELL, Each in His Own Tongue.

5 God is to me that creative Force, behind and in the universe, who manifests Himself as energy, as life, as order, as beauty, as thought, as conscience, as love.

HENRY SLOAN COFFIN. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 125.)

6 God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 465.

Every law of matter or the body, supposed to govern man, is rendered null and void by the law of Life, God.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 380.

7 God is not a cosmic bell-boy for whom we can press a button to get things.

HARRY EMERSON FORDICE, Prayer.

8 Who believes that equal grace
God extends in every place,

Little difference he scaos

'Twixt a rabbit's God and man's.

BRET HARTE, Battle Bunny: Envoi.

9 O thou, whose certain eye foresees
The fix'd event of fate's remote decrees.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. IV, l. 627. (Pope, tr.)

10 The God of many men is little more than their court of appeal against the damnatory judgment passed on their failures by the opinion of the world.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 138.

11 God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

New Testament: John, IV, 24.

There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.

New Testament: I John, V, 7.

12 God, to be God, must transcend what is. He must be the maker of what ought to be.

RUFUS M. JONES. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 63.)

13 One sole God; One sole ruler,—his Law;
Ooe sole interpreter of that law—Humanity.

MAZZINI, Young Europe: General Principles.

14 God is a geometrician. ('O Geōs γεωμετρει.)

PLATO. (PLUTARCH, Symposium.) Quoted as a traditional saying of Plato, but not found in his works.

God is like a skillful geometrician.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. I, sec. 16.

Nature geometrizes and observeth order in all things.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Garden of Cyrus. Ch. 3.

God acts the part of a Geometrician. . . . His government of the world is no less exact than His creation of it.

JOHN NORMAN, Practical Discourses. Vol. II, p. 228. Paraphrasing Plato.

By a carpenter mankind was created and made, and by a carpenter meet it was that man should be repaired.

ERASMUS, Paraphrase of St. Mark.

God is truth and light his shadow.

PLATO. Not Plato's exact words, but the essence of Secs. 506-510 of The Republic.

God is light

And never but in unapproached light
Dwelt from eternity.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. III, l. 3.

The Lord is my light and my salvation.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxvii, 1. (Dominus illuminatio mea.—Vulgate.)

God is a light that is never darkened; an unwearied life that cannot die; a fountain always flowing; a garden of life; a seminary of wisdom; a radical beginning of all goodness.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. I.

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 1.

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 2.

A mighty fortress is our God,

A bulwark never failing.

(Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott, Ein gute Wehr und Waffen.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Ein Feste Burg. (Hedge, tr.)

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name

Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act II, sc. 1, l. 26.

I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

New Testament: Revelation, xxi, 13.

God is alpha and omega in the great world: endeavour to make Him so in the little world; make Him thy evening epilogue and thy morning prologue . . . so shall thy rest be peaceful, thy labours prosperous, thy life pious, and thy death glorious.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Cent. II, No. 28.

God is an unutterable sigh, planted in the depths of the soul. (Gott ist ein unaussprechlicher Seufzer, im Grunde der Seele gelegen.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER.

God is an unutterable Sigh in the Human Heart, said the old German mystic. And therewith said the last word.

HAYDOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. I, p. 190.

Tell them, I AM, Jehovah said
To Moses; while earth heard in dread,
"And, smitten to the heart,

At once above, beneath, around,
All Nature, without voice or sound,

Replied, O LORD THOU ART.

¹⁷ God helps them who help themselves. (Θεὸς Ἀθνητῶν καὶ χεῖρα κίσει.)

A proverb in all languages: Spanish, "Quien se muda, Dios le ayuda"; French, "À qui se lève matin, Dieu aide et prête sa main." An early use in English, ALGERNON SINNEY, Discourse Concerning Government. (1698)

¹⁸ The whole trouble is that we won't let God help us.

GEORGE MACDONALD, The Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 27.

V—God: His Invention

¹⁹ He was a wise man who invented God. (Σοφὸς ἦν τις, ὃς τὸ θεῖον εἰσέφηταρε.)

PLATO, Sisyphus. This dialogue is included in editions of Plato, but is generally thought to be spurious. It has been attributed to Æschines and Euripides.

The being of God is so comfortable, so convenient, so necessary to the felicity of Mankind, that, (as Tully admirably says) Dii immortales ad usum hominum fabricati pene videntur, if God were not a necessary being of himself, he might almost seem to be made on purpose for the use and benefit of men.

ARCHBISHOP JOHN TILLOTSON, Works, Vol. 1, p. 696. Sermon 93.

¹ If God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent him. (Si Dieu n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer.)

VOLTAIRE, Épître à l'Auteur du Livre des Trois Imposteurs, 10 Nov., 1770

Consulte Zoroastre, et Mimos et Solon,
Et le grand Socrate, et le grand Cicéron,
Ils ont adoré tous un maître, un juge, un père.
Ce système sublime à l'homme est nécessaire,
C'est le sacré lien de la société,
Le premier fondement de la sainte équité,
Le frein au scelerat, l'espérance du juste,
Si les dieux dépossédés de leur empreinte auguste
Pouvaient cesser jamais de se manifester,
Si Dieu n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer

VOLTAIRE, Épître à l'Auteur du Livre des Trois Imposteurs. Voltaire was very proud of this last line. "Though I am seldom satisfied with my lines," he wrote to Frederick the Great, "I must confess that I feel for this one the tenderness of a father." He perhaps did not know that the idea had been anticipated by Plato or Euripides, in Sisyphus, and by Archbishop Tillotson quoting Cicero. Tillotson died in 1694, the year of Voltaire's birth.

² We had needs invent heaven if had not been revealed to us.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives.

VI—God and the Watchmaker

³ In all the parts of Nature's spacious sphere
Of art ten thousand miracles appear;
And will you not the Author's skill adore
Because you think He might discover more?
You own a watch, the invention of the mind,
Though for a single motion 'tis designed,
As well as that which is with greater thought,
With various springs, for various motions wrought.

SIR RICHARD BLACKMORE, The Creation. Bk. iii, (1712)

⁴ Suppose I had found a watch upon the ground. . . . The mechanism being observed. . . . the inference we think is inevitable that the watch must have a maker; that there must have existed, at some time, and at some place or other, an artificer or artificers, who formed it for the purpose which we find it actually to answer; who comprehended its construction, and designed its use.

WILLIAM PALEY, Natural Theology Ch. 1. Probably derived from Nieuwentyt's The Religious Philosopher, translated into English from the Dutch in 1713. Paley's book was published in 1802. Huxham (Literature of Europe, ii, 385) traces the idea back to Cicero, De Natura Deorum, and it was used by Herbert of Cherbury (De Religione Gentilium) and by Sir Matthew Hale (Primitive Origination of Mankind).

⁵ Paley's simile of the watch . . . must be replaced by the simile of the flower. The universe is not a machine but an organism with an indwelling principle of life. It was not made, but it has grown.

JOHN FISKE. (NEWTON, My Idea of God)

⁶ The reasoning by which Socrates in Xenophon's hearing confuted the little atheist Aristodemus, is exactly the reasoning of Paley's Natural Theology. Socrates makes precisely the same use of the statues of Polyclethus and the pictures of Zeuxis which Paley makes of the watch.

MACAULAY, Essays: Von Ranke.

⁷ The world embarrasses me, and I cannot think

That this watch exists and has no Watch-maker.

(Le monde m'embarrasse, et je ne puis pas songer Que cette horloge existe et n'a pas d'Horloger.)

VOLTAIRE, Epigram.

VII—God: His Mercy

⁸ When all thy mercies, O my God,
My rising soul surveys,

Transported with the view I'm lost,

In wonder, love, and praise

ADDISON, Hymn: With All Thy Mercies.

⁹ The mercy of God [may be found] between the bridge and the stream. (Misericordia Domine inter pontem et fontem.)

St. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Of a man falling into a river.

My friend, judge not me,

Thou seest I judge not thee.

Between the stirrup and the ground

Mercy I asked, mercy I found.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain, p. 392. An epitaph for a man falling from his horse and breaking his neck. Quoted as "made by a good friend of the author."

Between the stirrup and the ground,

I mercy asked, I mercy found.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, misquoting Camden. (Boswell, Life, 28 April, 1783.)

Though a sharp sword be laid to thy throat, still pray to God for mercy.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, p. 10a.

¹⁰ God never made mouth but he made meat.

THOMAS BERON, Catechism, 602. (c. 1560) Cited as a proverb "no less true than common."

Be sure that God
Ne'er dooms to waste the strength he deigns impart.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. 1.

God who gives the wound gives the salve.

(Dios que da la llaga da la medicina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19.

To the bird's young ones he gives food. (Aux petits des oiseaux il donne la pâture.)

CORNEILLE, Athalie. Gozlan added a second line: "Et sa bonté s'arrête qu'à la littérature." And His bounty stops only with men-of-letters.

1
Oft have I heard, and now believe it true.
Whom man delights in, God delights in too.
PONS CAPPULET. (EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.)

2
God tempers the cold to the shorn lamb.
(Dieu mesure le froid à la brebis tondue.)

HENRI ESTIENNE, Prémices, p. 47. (1594)
Quoted from an older collection.

To a close shorn sheep God gives wind by measure
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 861.
(1640)

She had travelled all over Lombardy without money, and through the flinty roads of Savoy without shoes: how she had borne it, she could not tell; but "God tempers the wind," said Maria,
"to the shorn lamb." "Shorn, indeed! and to the quick," said I

STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: Maria.

God sends men cold according to their cloth; viz.
afflictions according to their faith

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 1, ch. 4. (1546)

God moderates all at His pleasure. (Dieu mo-dère tout à son plaisir.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii.

3
The greatest attribute of heaven is mercy;
And 'tis the crown of justice, and the glory.
Where it may kill with right, to save with pity.

JOHN FLETCHER, Lover's Progress. Act iii, sc. 3

Mercy's indeed the attribute of heaven.

THOMAS OTWAY, Windsor Castle.

4
Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.

New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 6.

Whom the Lord loveth he correcteth.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 12.

Heaven is not always angry when he strikes,
But most chastises those whom most he likes.

JOHN POMFREY, Verses to a Friend Under Affliction, l. 89.

5
God strikes not with both hands, for to the sea He made havens, and to rivers fords.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 311.

God strikes with his finger, and not with all his arm.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

6
God gives his wrath by weight, and without weight his mercy.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7
God hath two wings, which He doth ever move,

The one is Mercy, and the next is Love:

Under the first the Sinners ever trust;

And with the last he still directs the Just.

ROBERT HERRICK, Mercy and Love.

8
And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner

New Testament: Luke, xviii, 13.

Have mercy upon us: miserable sinners.

Book of Common Prayer: Litany.

For heathen heart that puts her trust

In reeking tube and iron shard,

All valiant dust that builds on dust,

And guarding, calls not Thee to guard,

For frantic boast and foolish word—

Thy mercy on Thy people, Lord!

KIMING, Recessional.

A sentinel angel sitting high in glory

Heard this shrill warbling out from Purgatory:

"Have mercy, mighty angel, hear my story!"

JOHN HAY, A Woman's Love.

9
Though God have iron hands which when they strike pay home, yet hath he leaden feet which are as slow to overtake a sinner.

JOHN LIVY, Euphues, p. 172. (1579)

God comes with leaden feet, but strikes with iron hands.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 11. (1670)

10
Praise be to Allah, the Lord of creation,

The merciful, the compassionate

Ruler of the Day of Judgment

Help us, lead us in the path.

MAHOMET, Sura, i.

Whoever falls from God's right hand
Is caught into his left.

EDWIN MARKHAM, The Divine Strategy.

12
The corn that makes the holy bread

By which the soul of man is fed,

The holy bread, the food unpriced,

Thy everlasting mercy, Christ.

MASSEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 88.

13
Our father which art in heaven.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 9. (Pater noster, qui es in cœlis.—Vulgate.)

For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said,

For we are also his offspring

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 28.

For we also are his offspring.

ARATUS, Phænomena.

¹ The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 17.

Who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 4.

Marvelous mercies and infinite love.

SWINBURNE, Les Noyades.

² Pardon, not wrath, is God's best attribute.

*BAYARD TAYLOR, The Temptation of Hassan
Ben Khaled. St. 11.*

³ Forgive me if, midst all Thy works
No hint I see of damning;

And think there's faith among the Turks,

And hope for e'en the Brahmin.

TRACERAY, Jolly Jack.

⁴ A God all mercy is a God unjust.

videbit.—Vulgate.)*

¹² Forgetful youth! but know, the Power above
With ease can save each object of his love;
Wide as his will, extends his boundless grace.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 285. (Pope, tr.)

¹³ In this stupendous manner, at which Reason stands aghast, and Faith herself is half confounded, was the grace of God to man at length manifested.

RICHARD HURD, Sermons. Vol. ii, p. 287.

¹⁴ God is love; and he that dwelleth in love
dwelleth in God, and God in him.

New Testament: I John, iv, 16.

God! Thou art love! I build my faith on that.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v, l. 52.

One unquestioned text we read,
All doubt beyond, all fear above;
Nor crackling pile nor cursing creed
Can burn or blot it: God is Love.

O. W. HOLMES, What We All Think.

Yes, if you're a tramp in tatters,
While the blue sky bends above
You've got nearly all that matters—
You've got God and God is Love.

B. R. HAYDON, Table Talk.

The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do,

I said, "You get somebody else—or wait till I get through."

I don't know how the Lord came out, but He seemed to get along:

But I felt kinda sneakin' like, 'cause I knowed I'd done Him wrong.

One day I needed the Lord—needed Him right away,

And He never answered me at all, but I could hear Him say

Down in my accusin' heart, "Nigger, I've got too much to do;

You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Night. St. 8.

² Trumpeter sound for the splendour of God!
ALFRED NOYES, Trumpet Call.

³ Father of all! in ev'ry age,
In ev'ry clime, ador'd
By saint, by savage, and by sage,
Jehovah, Jove, or Lord!
POPE, Universal Prayer.

If I am right, thy grace impart,
Still in the right to stay;
If I am wrong, O teach my heart
To find that better way!
POPE, Universal Prayer.

⁴ "A still small voice" comes through the wild,
Like a father consoling his fretful child,
Which banishes bitterness, wrath, and fear,
Saying—Man is distant, but God is near!
THOMAS FRINGLE, Asur in the Desert.

As thus we sat in darkness,
Each one busy in his prayers,—
"We are lost!" the captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stairs.

But his little daughter whispered,
As she took his icy hand,
"Isn't God upon the ocean,
Just the same as on the land?"
JAMES T. FIELDS, Ballad of the Tempest.

See also HEAVEN: ITS DISTANCE.

I would rather walk with God in the dark than go alone in the light.

MARY GARDNER BRAINARD, Not Knowing.

⁵ The Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice.
Old Testament: Psalms, xcvi, 1.

Without Thy presence, wealth are bags of cares;
Wisdom, but folly; joy, disquiet, sadness;
Friendship is treason, and delights are snarls;
Pleasure's but pain, and mirth but pleasing madness.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. v, emb. 6.

⁷ Give ear, my children, to my words,
Whom God hath dearly hought,
Lay up his laws within your heart,
And print them in your thought.
JOHN ROGERS, Advice to His Children, a few days before his martyrdom. (From The New England Primer.)

⁸ He who has known God reverences him.
(Deum colit qui novit.)

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucillum, Epis. xcv, 48.
God is not to be worshipped with sacrifices and blood, for what pleasure can he have in the slaughter of the innocent? but with a pure mind, a good and honest purpose. Temples are not to be built for him with stones piled on high, but he is to be consecrated in one's own breast.

SENeca, Fragments, No. 204.

⁹ Come ill or well, the cross, the crown,
The rainbow or the thunder,
I fling my soul and body down
For God to plough them under.
R. L. STEVENSON, Youth and Love. No. 2.

¹⁰ Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet—Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

TENNYSON, The Higher Pantheism, l. 11.

¹¹ I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;
I fled Him, down the arches of the years;
I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind; and in the midst of tears

I hid from Him, and under running laughter.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven.

Still with unhurrying chase,
And unperturbed pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
Came on the following Feet,
And a Voice above their beat—
"Naught shelters thee, who wilt not shelter Me."
FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven.

¹² None but God can satisfy the longings of an immortal soul; that as the heart was made for Him, so He only can fill it.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, Notes on the Parables: The Prodigal Son.

¹³ A dear Companion here abides;
Close to my thrilling heart He hides;
The holy silence is His Voice:
I lie and listen, and rejoice.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Midsummer.

¹⁴ To God the Father, God the Son,
And God the Spirit, Three in One,
Be honour, praise, and glory given
By all on earth, and all in heaven.
ISAAC WATTS, Doxology.

¹⁵ Our God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home.
ISAAC WATTS, The Psalms of David, p. 229.
(1719) The first line was altered to "O God, our help in ages past" by John Wesley in his Collection of 1738.

¹⁶ "God . . . is the only King." . . . Then after a time he said: "Our sons who have shown us God."

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through.
Bk. iii, ch. 2, sec. 11.

¹⁷ Our fathers' God! From out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand,

We meet to-day, united, free,
And loyal to our land and Thee,
To thank Thee for the era done,
And trust Thee for the opening one.
WHITTIER, Centennial Hymn.

1 Thou, my all!
My theme! my inspiration! and my crown!
My strength in age! my rise in low estate!
My soul's ambition, pleasure, wealth!—my world!

My light in darkness! and my life in death!
My boast thro' time! bliss thro' eternity!
Eternity, too short to speak thy praise!
Or fathom thy profound of love to man!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 586.

A deity believ'd, is joy begun;
A deity ador'd, is joy advanc'd;
A deity belov'd, is joy matur'd.
Each branch of piety delight inspires.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 713.

2 God's might to direct me,
God's power to protect me,
God's wisdom for learning,
God's eye for discerning,
God's ear for my hearing,
God's word for my clearing.
The earliest Christian hymn written in Gaelic,
and attributed to ST. PATRICK. (Sigerson, tr.)

XI—God and the Universe

3 Set God apart from mortal men, and deem not that he, like them, is fashioned out of flesh.
Thou knowest him not; now he appeareth as fire, now as water, now as gloom; and he is dimly seen in the likeness of wild beasts, of wind, of cloud, of lightning, thunder, and of rain. All power hath he; lo, this is the glory of the Most High God.
ÆSCHYLUS (?), Fragments. Frag. 239.

4 The celestial order and the beauty of the universe compel me to admit that there is some excellent and eternal Being, who deserves the respect and homage of men.
CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 72, sec. 148.

5 Face to face with the universe, man will be the sole evidence of his audacious dreams of divinity, since the God he vainly sought is himself.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU, In the Evening of My Thought, p. 503.

6 Treading beneath their feet all visible things,
As steps that upwards to their Father's throne Lead gradual.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Religious Musings, l. 51.

The great world's altar-stairs
That slope thro' darkness up to God.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. 55.

Teach me, by this stupendous scaffolding,
Creation's golden steps, to climb to Thee.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 592.

7 God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm.
COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness.

Nor God alone in the still calm we find,
He mounts the storm, and walks upon the wind.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 109.

8 There is a God! the sky his presence shares,
His hand upheaves the billows in their
mirth,
Destroys the mighty, yet the humble spares
And with contentment crowns the thought of worth.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN, There Is a God.

9 God of the granite and the rose,
Soul of the sparrow and the bee,
The mighty tide of being flows
Thro' countless channels, Lord, from Thee.
ELIZABETH DOTEN, Reconciliation.

10 By tracing Heav'n his footsteps may be found:

Behold! how awfully he walks the round!
God is abroad, and wondrous in his ways
The rise of empires, and their fall surveys.
DRAWDEN, Britannia Rediviva, l. 75.

O God, I am thinking Thy thoughts after Thee.
JOHN KEPLER, Remark, when studying astronomy.

11 I believe in God the Father Almighty because wherever I have looked, through all that I see around me, I see the trace of an intelligent mind, and because in natural laws, and especially in the laws which govern the social relations of men, I see, not merely the proofs of intelligence, but the proofs of beneficence.

HENRY GEORGE, Speech, New York, 1887.

12 The great soul that sits on the throne of the universe is not, never was, and never will be, in a hurry.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Patience.

13 The Glory of him who Hung his masonry pendant on naught, when the world He created.

LONGELLOW, The Children of the Lord's Supper, l. 177.

14 Has God any dwelling-place save earth and sea, the air of heaven and virtuous hearts?
Why seek the Deity further? Whatever we see is God, and wherever we go. (Estque dei sedes, nisi terra et pontus et aer et Cælum et virtus? Superos quid querimus ultra?

Jupiter est, quodcumque vides, quodcumque moveris.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 578. The last line sums up the doctrine of Pantheism.

Know first, the heaven, the earth, the main,
The moon's pale orb, the starry train,
Are nourished by a soul.

A bright intelligence, whose flame
Glows in each member of the frame,

And stirs the mighty whole (Principio cælum ac terras camposque liquentis
Lucentemque globum Lunæ Titanique astra
Spiritus intus alit, totamque infusa per artus
Mens agitat molem et magno se corpore miscet.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 724 (Conington, tr.)

What, but God?

Inspiring God! who, boundless Spirit all,
And unremitting Energy, pervades,
Adjusts, sustains, and agitates the whole.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 852.

God, I can push the grass apart
And lay my finger on Thy heart!
EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Renaissance.

These are thy glorious works, Parent of good.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 153.

Who coverest thyself with light as with a garment: who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain: Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters. who maketh the clouds his chariot: who walketh upon the wings of the wind. Who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire.

Old Testament: Psalms, civ, 2-4.

He bowed the heavens also, and came down: and darkness was under his feet.

Old Testament: Psalms, xviii, 9.

The Lord descended from above

And bow'd the heavens high;

And underneath his feet he cast

The darkness of the sky.

THOMAS STEKHOOLD, A Metrical Version of Psalm xviii.

Nothing is void of God; He Himself fills His work (Nihil ab illo vacat; opus suum ipse implet.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, l. 8.

Between the birthday and the grave,
Teaching the tender heart be brave,
He work our better from our worse,
The Artist of the Universe.

PAUL SILVELL, The Studios Photographica.

XII—God the Unknowable

God is more truly imagined than expressed, and he exists more truly than is imagined. (Verius cogitatur Deus quam dicitur, et verius est quam cogitatur.)

St. AUGUSTINE, De Trinitate. Pt. vii, sec. 6.

It were better to have no opinion of God at all, than such an opinion as is unworthy of him: for the one is unbelief, the other is contumely.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

It is better to have no belief in the gods than a dishonouring belief. (Præstat nullam habere de dis opinionem, quam contumeliosam.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Superstitio.

God never meant that man should scale the heavens

By strides of human wisdom. In his works, Though wondrous, he commands us in his word

To seek him rather where his mercy shines.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 221.

'Tis revelation satisfies all doubts,
Explains all mysteries except her own,
And so illuminates the path of life,
That fools discover it, and stray no more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 527.

'Tis hard to find God, but to comprehend Him, as He is, is labour without end

ROBERT HERRICK, God Not to be Comprehended.

God is above the sphere of our esteem,
And is the best known, not drinking him.

ROBERT HERRICK, What God Is.

To seek of God more than we well can find,
Argues a strong distemper of the mind.

ROBERT HERRICK, Sobriety in Search.

I askt the seas and all the deeps below
My God to know,

I askt the reptiles, and whatever is

In the abyss;

Even from the shrimps to the leviathan

Enquiry ran;

But in those deserts that no line can sound,

The God I sought for was not to be found.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Searching After God.

Dangerous it were for the feeble brain of man to wade far into the doings of the Most High.

... Our soundest knowledge is to know that we know him not as indeed he is, neither can know him, and our safest eloquence concerning him is our silence, when we confess without confession that his glory is inexplicable, his greatness above our capacity and reach.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Polity. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 3.

Canst thou by searching find out God?
Old Testament: Job, xi, 7.

Who thou art I know not,

But this much I know;

Thou hast set the Pleiades

In a silver row.

HARRY KEMP, God, the Architect.

¹ The very impossibility in which I find myself to prove that God is not, discloses to me His existence. (L'impossibilité où je suis de prouver que Dieu n'est pas, me découvre son existence.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères Sec. 16.

² Who can know heaven save by the gifts of heaven,
Or search out God save as a part of God?
(Quis cælum possit nisi cæli munera nosse?
Et reperire deum nisi qui pars ipse deorum est?)

MANILIUS, Astronomica Pt. ii, l. 115.

³ Only God is permanently interesting. Other things we may fathom, but he out-tops our thought and can neither be demonstrated nor argued down.

J. F. NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 5.

⁴ There is sufficient clearness to lighten the elect, and sufficient obscurity to humble them. There is sufficient obscurity to blind the reprobate, and sufficient clearness to condemn them.

PASCAL, Pensées Sec. viii, No. 578. Quoting St. Augustine, and Montaigne.

⁵ We understand nothing of the works of God, if we do not assume that He has willed to blind some and enlighten others.

PASCAL, Pensées Sec. ix, No. 566.

⁶ I am whatever was or is or will be, and my veil no mortal ever took up.

PLUTARCH, Of Isis and Osiris.

⁷ Say first, of God above or Man below
What can we reason but from what we know?

POPE, Essay on Man Epist. i, l. 17.

Thou Great First Cause, least understood,
Who all my sense confin'd
To know but this, that thou art good,
And that myself am blind.

POPE, Universal Prayer.

⁸ Every conjecture we can form with regard to the works of God has as little probability as the conjectures of a child with regard to the works of a man.

THOMAS REID, Intellectual Powers, Vol. i.

⁹ It is more religious and more reverent to believe in the works of the Deity than to comprehend them. (Sanctiusque ac reverentius visum de actis deorum credere quam scire.)

TACITUS, Germania, Sec. 34.

¹⁰ Reason refuseth its homage to a God who can be fully understood.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of a Trinity.

¹¹ God has made thee to love Him, and not to understand Him. (Dieu t'a fait pour l'aimer, et non pour le comprendre.)

VOLTAIRE, La Henriade.

¹² And the infinite pathos of human trust
In a God whom no one knows

WILLIAM WATSON, Churchyard in the Wild.

¹³ If God is not in us, He never existed. (Si Dieu n'est pas dans nous, il n'exista jamais.)

VOLTAIRE, La Loi Naturelle: Exordium.

The God I know of, I shall ne'er
Know, though he dwells exceeding nigh.

Raise thou the stone and find me there,
Cleave thou the wood and there am I.

Yea, in my flesh his spirit doth flow,
Too near, too far, for me to know.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Unknown God. The third and fourth lines are a translation of a Hebrew proverb.

We may scavenge the dross of the nation, we
May shudder past bloody sod,

But we thrill to the new revelation that we are parts of God.

R. H. SCHAUFFLER, New Gods for Old.

¹⁴ The Somewhat which we name but cannot know,
Ev'n as we name a star and only see

Its quenchless flashings forth, which ever show
And ever hide him, and which are not he.

WILLIAM WATSON, Wordsworth's Grave, St. 6.

¹⁵ And I say to mankind, Be not curious about God,
For I who am curious about each am not curious about God.

(No array of terms can say how much I am at peace about God and about death.)

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself Sec. 48.

Who fathoms the Eternal Thought?

Who talks of scheme and plan?

The Lord is God! He needeth not

The poor device of man

J. G. WHITTIER, The Eternal Goodness, St. 4.

A God alone can comprehend a God.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night ix, l. 835.

XIII—God: Some Questionings

¹⁶ I sometimes wish that God were back

In this dark world and wide;

For though some virtues he might lack,

He had his pleasant side.

GAMALIEL BRADFORD, Exit God.

¹⁷ There is no God, no man-made God; a bigger, stronger, crueller man;

Black phantom of our baby-fears, ere
Thought, the life of Life, began.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah, Pt. iv, 2.

¹⁸ Some men treat the God of their fathers as they treat their father's friend. They do not deny him; by no means: they only deny themselves to him, when he is good enough to call upon them.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth.

God often visits us, but most of the time we are not at home.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: God. No. 65.

God does not know everything and never has known everything.

MAURICE MAETERLINCK. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 117.)

The Lord who gave us Earth and Heaven
Takes that as thanks for all He's given.
The book he lent is given back
All blotted red and smutted black.

MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 27.

I see little evidence in this world of the so-called goodness of God. On the contrary, it seems to me that, on the strength of His daily acts, He must be set down a most stupid, cruel and villainous fellow.

H. L. MENCKEN. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 34.)

As far remov'd from God and light of Heav'n,
As from the centre thrice to th' utmost pole.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 73.

Give us a God—a living God,
One to wake the sleeping soul,
One to cleanse the tainted blood
Whose pulses in our bosoms roll.
C. G. ROSENBERG, The Winged Horn.

At last I heard a voice upon the slope
Cry to the summit, "Is there any hope?"
To which an answer peal'd from that high land,
But in a tongue no man could understand;
And on the glimmering limit far withdrawn,
God made Himself an awful rose of dawn.

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin, l. 219.

When the universe began
God, they say, created man.
Later, with a mocking nod,
Man annihilated God.

MIRIAM VEDDER, Warning.

When whelmed are altar, priest, and creed;
When all the faiths have passed;
Perhaps, from darkening incense freed,
God may emerge at last.

WILLIAM WATSON, Revelation.

Devoutly, thus, Jehovah they depose,
The pure! the just! and set up, in his stead
A deity that's perfectly well-bred.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 444.

GODS AND GODDESSES

I—Gods: Definitions

10

Where man is met
The gods will come; or shall I say man's spirit

Hath operative faculties to mix
And make his gods at will?

ROBERT BRIDGES, Achilles in Scyros, l. 552.
To be a god First I must be a god-maker.

We are what we create.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, Jottings: To Be a God.

Man is certainly stark mad; he cannot make a flea, and yet he will be making gods by dozens.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

The belief in the gods has not been established by authority, custom or law, but rests upon the unanimous and abiding consensus of mankind. (Cum enim non institute aliquo aut more aut lege sit opinio constituta maneatque ad unum omnium firma consensio.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 17, 44.

I do not know whether there are gods, but there ought to be.

DIOGENES. (TERTULLIAN, Ad Nationes. Bk. ii,
ch. 2.)

The gods of fable are the shining moments of great men.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

I have always said, and will say, that there is a race of gods,
But I fancy that what men do is to them but little odds.

ENNIUS, Telamon. (King, tr.) These lines were preserved by Cicero who used them in De Inventionis Rhetorica, ii, 50, 104.

The gods we stand by are the gods we need and can use.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 331.

The gods appear, and their serene abodes,
Which winds fret not, nor clouds bedew with showers.

(Apparet divum numen sedesque quietæ
Quas neque concutit venti nec nubila nimbis Aspergunt.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 18.

It is pleasant to die, if there be gods; and sad to live, if there be none.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 11.
(EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.)

It is expedient there should be gods, and,
since it is expedient, let us believe that gods exist. (Expediit esse deos, et, ut expediit, esse putemus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 637.

¹ A god is won by the humblest offering of incense, no less than by the outpoured blood of a hundred bulls. (Sed tamen, ut fuso taurorum sanguine centum, Sic capitur minimo turis honore deus.)

OVID, Tristio. Bk. ii, l. 75.

The gods despise enforced offerings.
When the heart brings its dearest and its last
Then only will they hear—if then, if then!

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, Fire-Bringer. Act ii.

² The first way to worship the gods is to believe in the gods. (Primus est deorum cultus deos credere.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 50.

³ Gods fade; but God abides and in man's heart
Speaks with the clear unconquerable cry
Of energies and hopes that can not die.

J. A. SYMONDS, On the Sacro Monte.

II—Gods: Apothegms

⁴ 'Tis only of your own desire that you curse the gods. (Σὺ θνητὸν ἄ χροῖται, ταῦτ' ἐνιγνώσκῃς Διός.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 928.

Small praise man gets dispraising the high gods.
SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

⁵ He is to be feared who fears the gods. (Δαίμονες θεῶν αἰσέει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, The Seven Against Thebes, l. 596.

⁶ Make not my path offensive to the Gods
By spreading it with carpets.

(Μὴ εἰμασί σπράσας ἐνιδόμον ποδῶν τίθει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 891.

⁷ The gods are careful about great things and neglect small ones. (Magna di curant, parva negligunt.)

Ye immortal gods! where in the world are we?
(O dii immortales! ubinam gentium sumus?)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, sec. 4.

⁸ Human murmurs never touch the gods.
(Humanæ superos numquam tetigere querellæ.)

CLAUDIAN, Epigrams. No. xxii, l. 9.

⁹ Never, believe me,
Appear the Immortals,
Never alone.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Visit of the Gods. Imitating Schiller.

Heartily know,
When half-gods go,
The gods arrive.

EMERSON, Give All to Love.

¹⁰ The gods are athirst. (Les dieux ont soif.)

He caused all Olympus to tremble with his nod.
(Totum nutu tremefecit Olympum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ix, l. 106.

With ravish'd ears The monarch hears;
Assumes the god, Affects to nod,
And seems to shake the spheres.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 37.

¹⁵ She moves a goddess, and she looks a queen.
(Δία γυναικῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 228. (Pope, tr.)

Where'er he mov'd, the goddess shone before.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 127. (Pope, tr.)

Oh! a goddess surely! (O dea certe!)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 328.

By her gait one knew the goddess. (Incessu patuit dea.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 405.

¹⁶ For verily these things lie on the knees of the gods. ('Αλλ' ἡ τοι μὲν ταῦτα θεῶν ἐν γούνασι κεῖται.)

6 The gods play games with men as balls. (Di nos quasi pilas homines habent.)

PLAUTUS, Copituli. Prologue, l. 22.

In wondrous ways do the gods make sport with men. (Miris modis di ludos faciunt hominibus.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 593. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods; They kill us for their sport.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 38.

7 I have with me two gods, Persuasion and Compulsion. (Πείθο καὶ βία.)

THEMISTOCLES, to the Andrians, when demanding a tribute. To which the Andrians replied that they were protected by two great gods, Penury and Powerlessness. (Πενία καὶ Ἀνομία.) PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Sec. 21.

7 Would you placate the gods? Then be a good man. Whoever imitates them is worshipping them. (Vis deos propitiare? Bonus esto. Satis illos coluit, quisquis imitatus est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilius. Epis. xcv, 50.

8 For thou, if ever godlike foot there trod These fields of ours, wert surely like a god.

SWINBURNE, In the Bay. St. 18.

9 Alas! it is not well to be confident when the gods are adverse. (Heu! nihil invitis fas quemquam fidere divi!)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 402.

10 Be warned: learn justice, and not to despise the gods. (Discite justitiam moniti et non temnere divos.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 620.

First and foremost reverence the Gods. (Imprius venerare Deos.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 338.

III—Gods and Goddesses: Individuals

For Venus, see under separate heading

11 Clio, singing of famous deeds, restores the past to life. Euterpe's breath fills the sweet-voiced flutes. Thalia rejoices in the careless speech of comedy. Melpomene cries aloud with the echoing voice of gloomy tragedy. Terpsichore with her lyre stirs and governs the emotions. Erato bearing the plectrum harmonizes foot and song in the dance. Urania examines the motions of the stars. Calliope commits heroic songs to writing. Polymnia expresses all things with her hands and speaks by gesture. The power of Apollo's will enlivens the whole circle of these muses: he sits in their midst and in himself possesses all their gifts.

AUSONIUS (?), Nomina Musarum.

12 Atlas, we read in ancient song, Was so exceeding tall and strong, He bore the skies upon his back, Just as the pedler does his pack; But, as the pedler overpress'd Unloads upon a stall to rest, Or, when he can no longer stand, Desires a friend to lend a hand, So Atlas, lest the ponderous spheres Should sink, and fall about his ears, Got Hercules to bear the pile, That he might sit and rest awhile.

SWIFT, Atlas; or, the Minister of State.

¹ Who knows not Circe,
The daughter of the Sun, whose charmed cup
Whoever tasted, lost his upright shape,
And downward fell into a groveling swine?
MILTON, Comus, l. 50.

² Great is Diana of the Ephesians.
New Testament: Acts, xix, 28.

³ Sweet Europa's mantle blew unclasp'd,
From off her shoulder backward borne;
From one hand droop'd a crocus; one hand
grasp'd

The mild bull's golden horn.
TENNYSON, The Palace of Art, l. 117.

Or else flush'd Ganymede, his rosy thigh
Half buried in the eagle's down,
Sole as a flying star shot thro' the sky
Above the pillar'd town.
TENNYSON, The Palace of Art, l. 121.

⁴ Janus am I; oldest of potentates;
Forward I look, and backward, and below
I count, as god of avenues and gates.
The years that through my portals come and go.

I block the roads, and drift the fields with snow,
I chase the wild-fowl from the frozen fen;
My frosts congeal the rivers in their flow,
My fires light up the hearths and hearts of
men

⁸ Pluto, the grisly god, who never spares,
Who feels no mercy, and who hears no prayers.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 209. (POPE, tr.)

⁹ Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UN-KNOWN GOD

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 22, 23. (Ignota Deo.—Vulgate.)

The presiding genius of the place. (Genius loci.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 136. Genius signifies a divinity. The Romans often raised monumental stones inscribed "Genio loci."

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Every door is barred with gold, and opens but to golden keys.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, St. 50.

Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!

Bright and yellow, hard and cold,

Molten, graven, hammer'd, and roll'd;

Heavy to get, and light to hold;

Hoarded, barter'd, bought, and sold,

Stolen, borrow'd, squander'd, doled:

Spurn'd by the young, but hugg'd by the old

To the very verge of the churchyard mould;

Price of many a crime untold:

Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!

Good or bad a thousand-fold!

How widely its agencies vary—

To save—to ruin—to curse—to bless—

As even its minted coins express,

Now stamp'd with the image of Good Queen Bess,

And now of a Bloody Mary.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Moral.

Gold can a path through hosts of warders

clear,

And walls of stone more swiftly can displace

No, let the monarch's bags and others hold
The flattering, mighty, nay, almighty gold.

JOHN WOLCOT, To Kien Long. Ode iv.

Truly now is the golden age; the highest honor comes by means of gold; by gold love is procured. (Aurea nunc vere sunt sæcula; plurimus auro Venit honos; auro conciliatur amor.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 277. For other quotations relating to the Golden Age see under AGE: THE GOLDEN AGE.

Piety is vanquished and all men worship gold.
Gold has banished faith, gold has made judgment to be bought and sold, gold rules the law, and, law once gone, rules chastity as well. (Aures omnes victa jam pietate colunt. Auro pulsa fides, auro venalia jura, Aurum lex sequitur, mox sine lige pudor.)

herd*, 48. (1594)

Saint-seducing gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, l. 220.

Commerce has set the mark of Selfishness,
The signet of its all-enslaving power
Upon a shining ore, and called it gold;
Before whose image bow the vulgar great,
The vainly rich, the miserable proud,
The mob of peasants, nobles, priests, and kings,

And with blind feelings reverence the power
That grinds them to the dust of misery.
But in the temple of their hirling hearts
Gold is a living god, and rules in scorn
All earthly things but virtue.

All's alike at the latter day,
A bag of gold and a wisp of hay.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 215.

What is fame? an empty bubble;
Gold? a transient, shining trouble.

JAMES GRAINGER, Ode to Solitude.

Gold is the money of monarchs; kings covet it;
the exchanges of the nations are effected by it.
. . . It is the instrument of gamblers and speculators, and the idol of the miser and the thief.
. . . No people in a great emergency ever found a faithful ally in gold. It is the most cowardly and treacherous of all metals. It makes no treaty that it does not break. It has no friend whom it does not sooner or later betray.

SENATOR JOHN J. INGALLS, Speech on the Coinage of Silver Dollars, U. S. Senate, 15 Feb., 1878. (Cong. Record, 45th Cong., 2d. sess.,
p. 1052.)

Gold is but muck.

SENeca, Thyestes, l. 453.

There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls,
Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, 80.

² All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship dirty gods.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 54.

GOLDEN RULE, THE

³ We should behave to friends as we would wish friends to behave to us. (Ὁς ἂν ἐφαινετο ἀλλοῖς ὡς ἑαυτοῖς ποιεῖν.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle.
Sec. 21.)

⁴ Do as you would be done by is the surest method that I know of pleasing.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

To do as you would be done by, is the plain,
sure, and undisputed rule of morality and justice.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

⁵ Is there one word which may serve as a rule of practice for all one's life? The master said, Is not reciprocity such a word? What you do not want done to yourself, do not do to others.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 23. A negative statement of the Golden Rule.

What is hateful to thyself do not unto thy neighbor.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, p. 31a. The Talmudic formulation of the Golden Rule, also negative.

⁶ The Golden Rule works like gravitation.
C. F. DOLLE, Cleveland Address.

⁷ Every man takes care that his neighbor does not cheat him. But a day comes when he begins to care that he do not cheat his neighbor. Then all goes well.

ROBINSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

⁸ Therefore if anyone would take these two words to heart and use them for his own guidance, he will be almost without sin. These two words are bear (ἀρέσκω) and forbear (ἀνέχω).

Bk. xvii, ch. 19, sec. 6.)

⁹ The Golden Law, "do as ye would be done by."
ROBERT GORDON, Physica. (1674)

Thence arises that Golden Rule of dealing with others as we would have others deal with us.

ISAAC WATTS, Logick. (1725)

GOLDEN RULE, THE

Such is that golden principle of morality which our blessed Lord has given us.

ISAAC WATTS, Improving the Mind. (1741)

In our dealings with each other we should be guided by the Golden Rule.

W. D. HOWELLS, The Rise of Silas Lapham.
Vol. ii, p. 26. (1885)

¹⁰ Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 12.

¹¹ Men are used as they use others.

PILPAY, The King Who Became Just. Fable 9.

Look to be treated by others as you have treated others. (Ab alio expectes alteri quod feceris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 1.

You must expect to be treated by others as you yourself have treated them. (Ab alio expectes, alteri quod feceris.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec.
43. Quoted.

¹² The rule of proportion which, for excellency, is called the Golden Rule.

ROBERT RECORDE, The Grounde of Arts, p. 240.

(1540) The earliest known use of the words
"Golden Rule." It refers to mathematics, not to the verse from Matthew.

The rule of three, or golden rule, as it is called in sacred algebray.

DANIEL FEATLEY, Clavis Mystica, p. 279. (c.
1635)

¹³ Treat your inferiors as you would be treated by your betters. (Sic cum inferiore vivas, quemadmodum tecum superiorem velis vi-vere.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, 11.

In your dealings with others, harm not that you be not harmed. (Alterum intueri, ne læ-daris, alterum ne lēdas.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. ciii, 3.

¹⁴ Be as just and gracious unto me,

As I am confident and kind to thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 60.

¹⁵ The golden rule is that there are no golden rules.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

Do not do unto others as you would they should do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

¹⁶ If it be a duty to respect other men's claims,
so also is it a duty to maintain our own.

SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iii, ch. 21, sec. 8.

¹⁷ Do unto the other feller the way he'd like to do unto you, an' do it fust.

EDWARD NOYES WESTCOTT, David Harum.

¹⁸ His statecraft was the Golden Rule,

His right of vote a sacred trust;
Clear, over threat and ridicule,
All heard his challenge: "Is it just?"
J. G. WHITTIER, Summer.

¹
Deal with another as you'd have Another deal with you;
What you're unwilling to receive,
Be sure you never do.
UNKNOWN, The New England Primer.

GOLDSMITH, OLIVER

²
Here lies Nolly Goldsmith, for shortness called Noli,
Who wrote like an angel, and talk'd like poor Polli.

DAVID GARRICK, Impromptu Epitaph. Goldsmith resembled Addison in admitting that he wrote much better than he talked. "I always get the better when I argue alone," he said. Of de Tréville, a fluent talker, he remarked, "He vanquishes me in the drawing-room, but surrenders to me at discretion on the stairs." For Addison's remark as recorded by Boswell see 313:2.

No man was more foolish when he had not a pen in his hand, or more wise when he had.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Goldsmith. (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. II, ch. 10.)

While he talks he is great, but goes out like a taper,
If you shut him up closely with pen, ink, and paper.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 649. Of Bronson Alcott.

Tom Birch is as brisk as a bee in conversation; but no sooner does he take a pen in his hand, than it becomes a torpedo to him, and benumbs all his faculties.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1743.)
The exact antithesis of Goldsmith.

³
Poet, Naturalist, Historian, who left scarcely any style of writing untouched, and touched nothing which he did not adorn. (Poetæ, Physici, Historici, Qui nullum fere scribendi genus non tetigit, Nullum quod tetigit non ornavit.)

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Epitaph of Goldsmith. (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. vii, ch. 3.) Dr. Johnson's Latin, it will be noted, is by no means above reproach. The antithesis had already been used by Lord Chesterfield in writing of Bolingbroke, and by Fénelon with reference to Cicero. See also under ELOQUENCE.

Goldsmith, however, was a man who, whatever he wrote, did it better than any other man could.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, II, 3.)

⁴
Goldsmith was a plant that flowered late.

⁵
Was ever poet so trusted before?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Barrow, 4 July,

1774. Referring to Goldsmith's debts at his death.

It is not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make man better be;

Or standing long an oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald, and sere:

A lily of a day

Is fairer far in May,

Although it fall and die that night;

It was the plant and flower of light.

In small proportions we just beauties see;

And in short measures life may perfect be.

BEN JONSON, A Pindaric Ode to the Immortal Memory and Friendship of that Noble Pair, Sir Lucius Cary and Sir H. Morison. St. 7.

¹¹
A good man doubles the length of his life, for to be able to enjoy in memory one's past life is to live twice. (Ampliat ætatis spatium, sibi vir bonus. Hoc est Vivere his vita potius priore frui.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 23, l. 7.

Thus would I double my life's fading space;
For he, that runs it well, runs twice his race.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

For he lives twice who can at once employ

The present well, and e'en the past enjoy.

POPE, Imitation of Martial.

The good live longest; to the good alone

The record of the past remains their own.

⁹ "Lead softly and circumspectly" in this fundamental track and narrow path of goodness.

THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Sec. 1.

¹⁰ Our best is bad, nor bears Thy test;
Still, it should be our very best.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas Eve. Canto iv.

¹¹ "There is a further good conceivable beyond the utmost earth can realise."

ROBERT BROWNING, Prince Hohenstiel-Schwangau.

¹² A good heart is better than all the heads in the world.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Disowned. Ch. 33.

¹³ It's guld to be merry and wise,
It's guld to be honest and true,

BURNS, Here's a Health to Them That's Awe.

That pure pride, which, lessening to her breast

Life's ill, gave all its joys a treble zest,
Before the mind completely understood
That mighty truth—how happy are the good!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 322.

Goodness does not more certainly make men happy than happiness makes them good.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lord Brooke and Sir Philip Sidney.

For the good are always the merry,
Save by an evil chance.

W. B. YEATS, The Fiddler of Dooney.

⁷ All things work together for good to them that love God.

New Testament: Romans, viii, 28.

⁸ I never did repent for doing good, Nor shall not now.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 10.

⁹ Be good (if you can't be good, be careful).

HARRINGTON TATE. Refrain of popular song. (1907)

¹⁰ We do not love people so much for the good they have done us, as for the good we have done them.

TOLSTOY, War and Peace, Pt. i, ad fin. Tolstoy quoted this sentence, in Russian, as being from Laurence Sterne, but its source has not been identified.

¹¹ Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 21. (Omnia autem probate: quod bonum est tenete. —Vulgate.)

III—Goodness: Praise

¹²

So young, so fair,

Good without effort, great without a foe.

BRUCE, Child Harold. Canto III, st. 172.

¹³ He was very good to me, he was.
DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 11.

¹⁴ If whole in life, and free from sin,
Man needs no Moorish bow, nor dart,
Nor quiver, carrying death within
By poison's art.

(Integer vitæ scelerisque purus
Non eget Mauris jaculis neque arcu

Nec venenatis graviora sagittis,

Fusce, pharetra.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 22, l. 1. (Gladstone, tr.) Quoted by Shakespeare, Thus Andronicus, iv, 2, 21.

¹⁵ God whose gifts in gracious flood
Unto all who seek are sent,

Only asks you to be good

And is content.

VICTOR HUGO, God Whose Gifts in Gracious Flood.

Good men are a public good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

¹⁷ Be good, sweet maid, and let who can be clever;

Do lovely things, not dream them, all day long;

And so make Life, and Death, and that For Ever,

One grand sweet song.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, A Farewell. This is the version given in the final edition of Kingsley's poems, in 1889.

Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them, all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast for ever

One grand sweet song.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, A Farewell. Version in 1882 edition of Kingsley's poems. Ms.

Kingsley, in the Life (vol. i, p. 487, uses the third line as here given except that she capitalizes Life, Death, and For Ever.

Good, the more

Communicated, more abundant grows.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 71.

That good diffused may more abundant grow.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 441.

1 Abash'd the devil stood,
And felt how awful goodness is, and saw
Virtue in her shape how lovely.
MILTON, Paradise Lost Bk. iv, l. 846.

2 None
But such as are good men can give good
things,
And that which is not good, is not delicious
To a well-govern'd and wise appetite.
MILTON, Comus, l. 702.

3 Let Joy or Ease, let Affluence or Content,
And the gay Conscience of a life well spent,
Calm ev'ry thought, inspire ev'ry grace,
Glow in thy heart, and smile upon thy face.
POPE, To Mrs. M. B., on her Birthday.

4 In every good man a god doth dwell (In unoquoque virorum honorum habitat deus)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xli, 2.
A good mind possesses a kingdom. (Mens regnum bona possidet)
SENECA, Thyestes, l. 380.

IV—Goodness: Some Doubts

5 Good me no goods.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act i, sc. 9.
Good critics who have stamped out poet's hope,
Good statesmen who pulled ruin on the state,
Good patriots who for a theory risked a cause,
Good kings who disembowelled for a tax,
Good popes who brought all good to jeopardy,
Good Christians who sat still in easy chairs
And damned the general world for standing up—
Now may the good God pardon all good men!
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 499.

6 Dubius is such a scrupulous good man.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 119.
He was so good he would pour rose-water on a toad.

Good people are scarce.
UNKNOWN, Poor Robin Almanac. Sept., 1668.

Good folks are scarce.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation Dial. i.

As good people's very scarce, what I says is,
make the most on 'em.
DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Gun-Shops.

11 None deserves praise for being good who has not spirit enough to be bad. goodness, for the most part, is nothing but indolence or weakness of will. (Nul ne mérite d'être loué de bonté, s'il n'a pas la force d'être méchant:
toute autre bonté n'est le plus souvent qu'une paresse ou une impuissance de la volonté.)

homo bonus tiro est.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 51.

13 There is no man so good, who, were he to submit all his thoughts and actions to the laws, would not deserve hanging ten times in his life

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.

14 It is easy to be good when that which prevents it is far off. (Esse bonam facile est, ubi, quod vetat esse, remotum est.)
OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 14, l. 25.

15 If there were many more like her, the stock of halos would give out.

A. W. PINERO, Preserving Mr. Panmure. Act i.

16 The good must merit God's peculiar care;
But who but God can tell us who they are?
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 135.

17 There is none that doeth good, no, not one.
Old Testament: Psalms, xlv, 3.

No mere man since the Fall, is able in this life perfectly to keep the Commandments.
Book of Common Prayer: Shorter Catechism.

18 You're good for Madge or good for Cis
Or good for Kate, maybe:

But what's to me the good of this
While you're not good for me?

CHRISTINA ROSETTI, Jessie Cameron. St. 3.

Good deeds remain; all things else perish
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1710.

⁷ Great spirits never with their bodies die.
ROBERT HERRICK, Great Spirits Survive.

Were a star quenched on high,
For ages would its light,
Still travelling downward from the sky,
Shine on our mortal sight.

So when a great man dies,
For years beyond our ken,
The light he leaves behind him lies
Upon the paths of men.
LONGFELLOW, Charles Sumner.

When the good man yields his breath
(For the good man never dies).
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Wanderer of Swit- zerland. Pt. v.

¹⁰ Evil and good are God's right hand and left.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem

¹¹ Make good things from ill things, best from worst,

As men plant tulips upon dunghills when they wish them finest.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 284.
There shall never be one lost good! What was shall live as before;

The evil is null, is nought, is silence implying sound;

What was good shall be good, with, for evil, so much good more;

On the earth the broken arcs; in the heaven a perfect round

ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler. St. 9.

There is no Good, there is no Bad, these be the whims of mortal will:

What works me woe that call I "good," what harm and hurts I hold as "ill."

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. v, st. 1.

¹² O, why is the good of man with evil mixt?
Never were days yet called two

But one night went betwixt.

One that confounds good and evil is an enemy to good.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren
Hastings, 16 Feb., 1788.

¹⁴ What we all love is good touched up with evil—

Religion's self must have a spice of devil.

A. H. CLOUGH, Dipsychus. Pt. i, sc. 3.

¹⁵ When you see a good man, think of emulating him; when you see a bad man, examine your own heart.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (Giles, tr.)

¹⁶ By evil report and good report.

New Testament: II Corinthians, vi, 8.

¹⁷ The essence of good and evil is a certain kind

And embryo Good, to reach full stature,
Absorbs the Evil in its nature.

J. R. LOWELL, Festina Lente: Moral.

¹ Good and evil, we know, in the field of this world grow up together almost inseparably.
MILTON, Areopagitica.

If then his Providence
Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
Our labour must be to pervert that end,
And out of good still to find means of evil.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 162.

All good to me is lost; Evil, be thou my good.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 109.

Knowledge of good bought dear by knowing ill.

⁸ Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 9.

Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 21.

⁹ He was always for ill, and never for good.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto III,
st. 12.

¹⁰ From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,

The place is dignified by the doer's deed;
Where great additions swell 's, and virtue
none,

It is a dropp'd honour. Good alone
Is good without a name. Vileness is so:

The property by what it is should go,

Not by the title.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
II, sc. 3, l. 132.

In working well, if travail you sustain,
Into the wind shall lightly pass the pain;
But of the deed the glory shall remain,
And cause your name with worthy wights to reign.

In working wrong, if pleasure you attain,
The pleasure soon shall fade, and void as vain;
But of the deed throughout the life the shame
Endures, defacing you with foul defame.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, Museus the Philosopher's Sayings.

¹¹ The web of our life is of a mingled yarn,
good and ill together.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 83.

¹² There is some soul of goodness in things
evil,

Would men observingly distil it out; . . .

Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 4.

We too often forget that not only is there "a soul of goodness in things evil," but very generally also, a soul of truth in things erroneous.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Pt. i, ch. 1,
sec. 1.

¹³ The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act III, sc. 2, l. 80.

¹⁴ Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
Filths savour but themselves.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 37.

¹⁵ I am in this earthly world; where to do harm

Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 75.

¹⁶ Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious
flowers;

The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;

What virtue breeds, iniquity devours:

We have no good that we can say is ours.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 869.

O, no! the apprehension of the good

Gives but the greater feeling to the worse.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 300.

¹⁷ For nought so vile that on the earth doth
live

But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, 3, 17.

Two such opposed kings encamp them still

In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will;

And where the warmer is predominant,

Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet Act ii, 3, 27.

Evil minds Change good to their own nature.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act I, 1. 380.

There is no man suddenly either excellently good or extremely evil.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia Bk. i.

So far as any one shuns evils, so far he does good.

SWEDENBORG, Doctrine of Life. Sec. 21.

For good ye are and bad, and like to coins,
Some true, some light

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 25.

O, yet we trust that somehow good
Will be the final goal of ill,
To pangs of nature, sins of will,
Defects of doubt, and taints of blood.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. liv, st. 1 "Somehow Good" was used by William de Morgan as the title of a novel.

One may not doubt that, somehow Good
Shall come of Water and of Mud;
And sure, the reverent eye must see
A purpose in Liquidity.
RUPERT BROOKE, Heaven.

From seeming evil still educing good,
And better thence again, and better still,
In infinite progression.
JAMES THOMSON, Hymn on the Seasons, l. 114.

If not good, why then evil,
If not good god, good devil.
Goodness!—you hypocrite, come out of that,
Live your life, do your work, then take your hat.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.

The greater part of what my neighbors call good
I believe in my soul to be bad, and if I repent of anything, it is very likely to be my good behavior.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

Roaming in thought over the Universe, I saw the little that is Good steadily hastening towards immortality.

And the vast all that is call'd Evil I saw hastening to merge itself and become lost and dead.

WALT WHITMAN, Roaming in Thought.

Evil perpetually tends to disappear.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Evanesence of Evil.

The evil cannot brook delay,
The good can well afford to wait
Give ermined knaves their hour of crime;
Ye have the future grand and great,
The safe appeal of Truth to Time!

Let Attius have the same rights as Tettius (Attio idem, quod Tettio, jus esto)

MARCUS VARRO, The Viti Frag. 543. A clause in Varro's will, providing that a son born to him eleven months after his death shall have the same rights as one born in ten months. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae Bk. iii, ch. 16, sec. 13.) Frequently quoted,
"What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

As deep drinketh the goose as the gander.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

When the goose drinks as deep as the gander,
pots are soon empty, and the cupboard is bare.
C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 136.

It is thus that you silence the goose [huss], but a hundred years hence there will arise a swan whose singing you shall not be able to silence.

Attributed to JOHN HUSS, as he was being burned at the stake, 6 July, 1415. Luther is supposed to have fulfilled the prophecy.

Dark flying rune against the western glow—
It tells the sweep and loneliness of things,
Symbol of Autumns vanished long ago.
Symbol of coming Springs!

FREDERICK PETERSON, Wild Geese.

¹ A goose is a silly bird, too much for one, not enough for two.

POOLE, Archaic Words, 25. Poole says the presumed foundation for the proverb is that it was the reply of a Walsall man when asked if he and his wife were going to have a goose for their Christmas dinner.

² There swims no goose so grey.

³ Gae shoe the goose.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. To "shoe the goose" was to do something futile or silly.

⁴ Goose, gander, and gosling,
Are three sounds, but one thing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

⁵ Here you may roast your goose.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act ii, sc. 3, l. 18.

Thou cream-faced loon,
Where got'st thou that goose look?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act v, sc. 3, l. 11.

⁶ When the rain raineth and the goose winketh,
Little wots the gosling what the goose thinketh

SKELTON, Garland of Laurel, l. 1430. (c. 1520)

⁷ In faith, else I had gone too long to school,
But if I could know a goose from a swan.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnificence, l. 302. (1529)

That by his art, can make a goose a swan.

JOHN ANDREWS, Anatomy of Baseness, p. 30. (1615)

All our geese are swans.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 14.

⁸ The wild goose is more cosmopolite than we; he breaks his fast in Canada, takes a luncheon in the Susquehanna, and plumes himself for the night in a Louisiana bayou.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 21 March, 1840.

⁹ A goose is a goose still, dress it as you will,
H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

¹⁰ He gabbles like a goose among melodious swans. (Argutus inter strepere atque ulores.)

VERGIL, Eclagues, No. ix, l. 36.

I dare not hope to please a Cinna's ear,
Or sing what Varus might vouchsafe to hear;
Harsh are the sweetest lays that I can bring,
So screams a goose where swans melodious sing.

VERGIL, Eclagues, No. 9, l. 34. (Beattie, tr.)

Shall I, like Curtius, desperate in my zeal,
O'er head and ears plunge for the Commonwealth?
Or rob Rome's ancient geese of all their glories,
And cackling save the monarchies of Tories?

POPE, The Dunciad, Bk. i, l. 209.

¹¹ He is not able to say bo to a goose.

UNKNOWN, Mar-Prelate's Epistle, 60. (1588)

He never durst say so much as boh to a mouse.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Martin Mark-all. (1610)

¹² To kill the goose that laid the golden eggs.

The phrase originates from the second fable of Aesop, first translated into English in 1484 by William Caxton.

The goose hangs high.

An American colloquialism of unknown origin, meaning "prospects are bright, things are going well." The Century Dictionary suggests it may have come from "The goose honks high," because wild geese fly higher than usual in fine weather, but this is unsubstantiated.

GOVERNMENT

See also Democracy, State

I—Government: Definitions

¹³ The essence of a free government consists in an effectual control of rivalries.

JOHN ADAMS, Discourses on Davila. (1789)

A government of laws and not of men

JOHN ADAMS, Constitution of Massachusetts: Declaration of Rights, Act 30 (1780) (See American Bar Association Journal, Dec., 1929, p. 747.)

¹⁴ If any ask me what a free government is, I answer, that, for any practical purpose, it is what the people think so.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to the Sheriffs of Bristol

In all forms of government the people is the true legislator.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws, Ch. 3, pt. 1.

¹⁵ Government is a contrivance of human wisdom to provide for human wants. Men have a right that these wants should be provided by this wisdom.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

The moment you abate anything from the full rights of men each to govern himself, and suffer any artificial positive limitation upon those rights, from that moment the whole organization of government becomes a consideration of convenience.

BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Obedience is what makes government, and not the names by which it is called.

BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

¹⁶ Government is emphatically a machine; to the discontented a "taxing machine," to the contented a "machine for securing property."

CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.

¹⁷ Of governments, that of the mob is most sanguinary, that of soldiers the most expensive, and that of civilians the most vexatious.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, Pt. i.

¹ The divine right of kings may have been a plea for feeble tyrants, but the divine right of government is the keystone of human progress, and without it government sinks into police and a nation into a mob.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair: Preface.

² Realms are households which the great must guide.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis, l. 552.

For just experience tells, in every soil,
That those who think must govern those that toll;

And all that freedom's highest aims can reach,
Is but to lay proportion'd loads on each.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 371.

³ A sober prince's government is best.

DRYDEN, Epistle to Sir Robert Howard, l. 54.

What government is the best? That which teaches us to govern ourselves. (Welche Regierung die beste sei? Diejenige die uns lehrt uns selbst zu regieren.)

GÖTTE, Sprüche in Prosa. Pt. III.

That is the best government which desires to make the people happy, and knows how to make them happy.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mitford's History of Greece.

For forms of government let fools contest;

Whate'er is best administer'd is best.

Pope, Essay on Man. Epis. III, l. 303.

The best of human governments is the patriarchal rule.

TUFER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Subjection.

⁴ Government has been a fossil: it should be a plant.

EMERSON, Miscellaneous: To the Mercantile Library Association.

⁵ All government is an evil, but of the two forms of that evil, democracy or monarchy, the sounder is monarchy; the more able to do its will, democracy.

B. R. HAYDON, Table-Talk.

⁶ Nothing appears more surprising to those who consider human affairs with a philosophical eye, than the easiness with which the many are governed by the few.

HUME, Essays: First Principles of Government.

⁷ The whole of government consists in the art of being honest.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. VI, p. 186.

After all, government is just a device to protect man so that he may earn his bread in the sweat of his labor.

HUGH S. JOHNSON, Where Do We Go from Here? (The American, July, 1935, p. 90.)

⁸ Freedom of men under government is to have a standing rule to live by, common to every one of that society, and made by the legislative power vested in it; a liberty to follow my own will in all things, when the rule prescribes not, and not to be subject to the inconstant, uncertain, unknown, arbitrary will of another man.

JOHN LOCKE, On Government. Bk. II, ch. 4.

⁹ It is a great error, in my opinion, to suppose that government founded on force has more weight or stability than that which is bound together by the tie of good-will. (Et errat longe mea quidem sententia, Qui imperium credat gravius esse aut stabilius Vi quod fit quam illud quod amicitia adiungitur.)

PLAUTUS, Adelphi, l. 65. (Act I, sc. 1.)

Unjust rule never endures perpetually. (Iniqua numquam regna perpetuo morant.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 196.

A hated government does not endure long. (In-visa numquam imperia retinentur diu.)

SENECA, Phaenissa, l. 660.

No one has long maintained a violent government; temperate rule endures. (Violenta nemo imperia continuit diu; Moderata durant.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 258.

No government is safe unless buttressed by goodwill. (Nullum imperium tutum nisi benevolentia munitum.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS. (DIONYSIUS CATO, Lives: Cornelius Nepos.)

No Government can be long secure without a formidable Opposition.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. II, ch. 1.

¹⁰ As in men's bodies, so in government, that disease is most dangerous which proceeds from the head. (Utque in corporibus sic in imperio gravissimus est morbus, qui a capite diffunditur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. IV, epla. 22.

Every wand or staff of empire is forsooth curved at the top. (Adeo ut omnes imperii virga sive bacillum vere superius inflexum sit.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Sapientia Veterum: Pan, Sive Natura. Sometimes condensed to, "All sceptres are crooked at the top." Referring to the shepherd's crook of Pan.

The deterioration of a government begins almost always by the decay of its principles. (La corruption de chaque gouvernement commence presque toujours par celle des principes.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Loix. Bk. VIII,
ch. 1.

¹¹ The body politic, like the human body, begins to die from its birth, and bears in itself the causes of its destruction. (Le corps politique, aussi bien que le corps de l'homme, commence à mourir dès sa naissance, et porte en lui-même les causes de sa destruction.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social. Bk. III, ch. 11.

¹² The very idea of the power and the right of the People to establish Government, presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established Government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 1796. I believe every citizen should support the government when final action is taken, whether he approves of the action or not.

W. J. BRYAN, Interview. (New York Times, 2 June, 1898.)

Though the people support the Government, the Government should not support the people.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Veto of Texas Seed Bill, 16 Feb., 1887.

¹ In general, the art of government consists in taking as much money as possible from one class of citizens to give it to the other.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Money.

^{1a} No man ever saw a government. I live in the midst of the Government of the United States, but I never saw the Government of the United States.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Pittsburgh, Pa., 29 Jan., 1916.

II—Government: Apotheisms

² Nero could touch and tune the harp well; but in government, sometimes he used to wind the pins too high, sometimes to let them down too low.

APOLLONIUS, when Vespasian asked him the cause of Nero's overthrow. (BACON, Essays: Of Empire.)

Nothing destroyeth authority so much, as the unequal and untimely interchange of power pressed too far, and relaxed too much.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

³ The four pillars of government . . . religion, justice, counsel, treasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions.

⁴ In government change is suspected, though to the better.

FRANCIS BACON, Filum Labyrinthi.

⁵ "Separa et impera," that same cunning maxim.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to James I, 1615, quoting Machiavelli.

Divide et impera, that exploded adage.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. Pt. iv, ch. 1.

Divide and govern, a capital motto! Unite and lead, a better one! (Entzwei' und gebiete! Tücht'ig Wort; Verein' und leide! Bess'rer Hort.)

GOETZE, Sprüche in Reimen, 516.

Divide and govern. (Divide et impera.)

LOUIS XI OF FRANCE, his motto when dealing with his nobles.

And yet they have learnt the chief Art of a Sov'reign,

As Machiavel taught 'em, divide and ye govern. SWIFT, On the Irish Bishops, l. 47. (1732)

⁶ To govern mankind one must not over-rate them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Feb., 1754.

You can only govern men by serving them. The rule is without exception. (On ne gouverne les hommes qu'en les servant. Le règle est sans exception.)

VICTOR COUSIN.

⁷ The good governor should have a broken leg and keep at home.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34.

⁸ It were better to be a poor fisherman, than to meddle with the government of men!

GEORGES JACQUES DANTON. (CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. vi, ch. 2.)

⁹ I have been carried into the ministry by a cannon-ball.

GEORGES JACQUES DANTON, after the insurrection of August, 1792. (TAINE, French Revolution.)

¹⁰ An institution is the lengthened shadow of one man.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

No institution will be better than the institutor.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

¹¹ He has erected the negation of God into a system of government.

W. E. GLADSTONE, referring to the King of Naples. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Workship.)

¹² I will govern according to the commonweal, but not according to the common will.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, Address, to the House of Commons, 1621.

¹³ I would not give half a guinea to live under one form of government rather than another. It is of no moment to the happiness of an individual.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 170.)

¹⁴ A wise man neither suffers himself to be governed, nor attempts to govern others.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères.

¹⁵ Every country has the government it deserves. (Toute nation a le gouvernement qu'elle mérite.)

JOSEPH DE MAISTRE, Letter, Aug., 1811.

¹⁶ He that would govern others, first should be The master of himself.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act I, sc. 3. See also under SELF-CONTROL.

¹⁷ Republics end through luxury; monarchies through poverty. (Les républiques finissent par le luxe; les monarchies, par la pauvreté.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Loix. Bk. vii,
ch. 4.

¹ The vanity and presumption of governing beyond the grave is the most ridiculous and insolent of all tyrannies. Man has no property in the generations which are to follow.
THOMAS PAINE, Reply to Burke, 1791.

² They that govern most make least noise.
JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Power. STILL WATERS RUN DEEP, see under WATER.

³ May I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 147.

⁴ Ill can be rule the great that cannot reach the small.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto ii, st. 43.

⁵ By common consent, he would have been deemed capable of governing had he never governed. (Omnium consensus capax imperii, nisi imperasset.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. I, sec. 49. Said of Galba.
A masterpiece of epigrammatic point as written in the Latin.

But who can penetrate man's secret thought,
The quality and temper of his soul,
Till by high office put to frequent proof,
And execution of the laws?
SOPHOCLES, Antigone.

Command shows the man. ('Ἀρχὴ ἀνδρα δείκναι.)
BIAS, (ARISTOTLE, Ethics, v, i, 16.)

⁶ The Athenians govern the Greeks; I govern the Athenians; you, my wife, govern me; your son governs you.

THEMISTOCLES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 18, sec. 5.)

⁷ Influence is not government.
GEORGE WASHINGTON, Political Maxims.

⁸ We have been taught to regard a representative of the people as a sentinel on the watch-tower of liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, U. S. Senate, 7 May, 1834.

III—Government: Its Purpose

⁹ The principal business of government is to further and promote human strivings.

WILBUR L. CROSS, in N. Y. Times, 29 Mar., 1931.

¹⁰ The care of human life and happiness, and not their destruction, is the first and only legitimate object of good government.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia: Writings, Vol. III, p. 263.

The only orthodox object of the institution of government is to secure the greatest degree of happiness possible to the general mass of those associated under it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 135.

The legitimate powers of government extend to such acts only as are injurious to others.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 221.

¹¹ A wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned—this is the sum of good government.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. iii, p. 320.

¹² When a white man governs himself, that is self-government; but when he governs himself and also governs another man, that is despotism. . . . No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill., 16 Oct., 1854. Lincoln-Douglas Debates.

¹³ Our object in the construction of the state is the greatest happiness of the whole, and not that of any one class.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iv, sec. I.

¹⁴ That wise Government, the general friend,
Might every where its eye and arm extend.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. II, canto iv, st. 47.

¹⁵ The aggregate happiness of society, which is best promoted by the practice of a virtuous policy, is, or ought to be, the end of all government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Political Maxims.

IV—Government: Its Faults

¹⁶ A Parliament is nothing less than a big meeting of more or less idle people.

WALTER BAGEHOT, English Constitution, p. 180.

To be acquainted with the merit of a ministry, we need only observe the condition of the people.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 1.

The Commons, faithful to their system, remained in a wise and masterly inactivity.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, Vindictæ Gallicæ. Sec. 1.

As though conduct could be made right or wrong by the votes of some men sitting in a room in Westminster!

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 7.

¹⁷ Law represents the effort of men to organize society; government, the efforts of selfishness to overthrow liberty.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

1 I have in general no very exalted opinion of the virtue of paper government.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

2 The quacks of government (who sate At th' unregarded helm of State).

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto ii, l. 333.

Nothing's more dull and negligent Than an old, lazy government, That knows no interest of state, But such as serves a present strait.

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 159.

3 An oppressive government is more to be feared than a tiger.

CONRUCIUS, Analectis.

4 A government of statesmen or of clerks? Of Humbug or of Humdrum?

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. ii, ch. 4.

5 The depositary of power is always unpopular.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iv, ch. 13.

Men are suspicious; prone to discontent: Subjects still loathe the present government.

HERRICK, Present Government Grievous.

He that goeth about to persuade a multitude that they are not so well governed as they ought to be, shall never want attentive and favourable hearers.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Polity.

6 No government has ever been, or ever can be, wherein time-servers and blockheads will not be uppermost.

DRYDEN, Examen Poeticum: Dedication.

The foul, corruption-gendered swarm of state. ROBERT SOUTHAY, Joan of Arc. Bk. iv, l. 94.

Every actual State is corrupt.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

7 The teaching of politics is that the Government, which was set for protection and comfort of all good citizens, becomes the principal obstruction and nuisance with which we have to contend. . . . The cheat and bully and malefactor we meet everywhere is the Government.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1860.

8 I am convinced that those societies (as the Indians) which live without government, enjoy in their general mass an infinitely greater degree of happiness than those who live under the European governments. Among the former, public opinion is in the place of law, and restrains morals as powerfully as laws ever did anywhere. Among the latter, under pretense of governing, they have divided their nations into two classes, wolves and sheep.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter, Paris, 16 Jan., 1787.

It is error alone which needs support of government. Truth can stand by itself.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Tyler, 1804.

It is really more questionable than may at first be thought, whether Bonaparte's dumb legislature, which said nothing and did much, may not be preferable to one which talks much and does nothing.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 86.

Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap, we should soon want bread.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Papers, vol. i, p. 66.

9 There is no state in Europe where the least wise have not governed the most wise.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Rousseau and Malesherbes.

10 Nothing is so galling to a people, not broken in from the birth, as a paternal or, in other words, a meddling government, a government which tells them what to read and say and eat and drink and wear.

MACAULAY, Essays: Southey's Colloquies.

11 Government, even in its best state, is but a necessary evil; in its worst state, an intolerable one.

THOMAS PAINE, Common Sense. Ch. 1.

12 Government arrogates to itself that it alone forms men. . . . Everybody knows that government never began anything. It is the whole world that thinks and governs.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Lecture: Idols, Boston, 4 Oct., 1859.

13 The punishment which the wise suffer who refuse to take part in the government, is, to live under the government of worse men.

PLATO, (EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.)

14 One of the greatest delusions in the world is the hope that the evils of this world can be cured by legislation. I am happy in the belief that the solution of the great difficulties of life and government are in better hands even than that of this body.

THOMAS B. REED, (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

15 The art of government is the organization of idolatry. The bureaucracy consists of functionaries; the aristocracy, of idols; the democracy, of idolaters. The populace cannot understand the bureaucracy: it can only worship the national idols.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

16 My reading of history convinces me that most bad government has grown out of too much government.

JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Thomas Jefferson, p. 49.

The world is governed too much.

UNKNOWN, Motto, of the Boston Globe.

I confess the motto of the "Globe" newspaper is so attractive to me that I can seldom find much appetite to read what is below it in its columns.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

Let's be jovial, fill our glasses;
Madness 'tis for us to think

How the world is ruled by asses,

And the wise are swayed by chink.

UNKNOWN, Let's Be Jovial. (Charms of Melody, Dublin, c. 1810.)

V—Government: Its Lack of Wisdom

Learn, my son, with how little wisdom the world is governed. (Nescia, mi fili, quantilla sapientia regitur mundus.)

POPE JULIUS III, to a Portuguese monk who pitted him because he had the weight of the world on his shoulders. (BÜCHMANN, Geistliche Worte.) Also attributed to Count Axel von Oxenstierna, Chancellor of Sweden, when urging his son to accept an appointment to the Peace Congress of Westphalia in 1648. Told also in connection with Conrad von Benningen, the Dutch statesman.

It calls to my mind what some pope, Alexander VI or Leo, said to a son of his afraid to undertake governing,—i. e., confounding the Christian world: "Nescia, mi fili, quam parva sapientia his noster mundus regitur."

LORD CHEATAM, Letter to Lord Shelburne, 25 Jan., 1778.

He was a wise pope that, when one that used to be merry with him before he was advanced to the popedom refrained afterwards to come at him (presuming he was busy in governing the Christian world), sent for him and bade him come again, and (says he) we will be merry as we were before, for thou little thinkest what a little foolery governs the world.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Pope.

With how little wisdom the world is governed. (Quam pauca sapientia mundus regitur.)

DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Letter to Swift, 1732. Quoted.

Yet if thou didst but know how little wit governs this mighty universe.

AFERA BENI, The Round Heads. Act I, sc. 2.

It is indeed astonishing with how little wisdom mankind can be governed, when that little wisdom is its own.

DEAN W. R. INCE, (MARCHANT, Wis and Wisdom of Dean Ince. No. 171.)

GRACE

I—Grace: Spiritual and Divine

Grace groweth after governance.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 395. (1566)

Sure 'tis an orthodox opinion,

That grace is founded in dominion.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. I, canto 3, l. 1173.

There, but for the grace of God, goes John Bradford.

JOHN BRADFORD, Works. Vol. II, p. 13, in biographical notice. (FARRAR, Eternal Hope: Fourth Sermon.) Bradford uttered the sentence on seeing a criminal pass by. It has been credited also to John Bunyan and John Wesley.

'Cause grace and virtue are within

Prohibited degrees of kin;

And therefore no true Saint allows

They shall be suffer'd to espouse.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto 1, l. 1293.

My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xii, 9.

Thus all below is strength, and all above is grace.

DAYDEN, Epistle to Congreve, l. 19.

An outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace.

Book of Common Prayer: Catechism.

Ye are fallen from grace.

New Testament: Galatians, v, 4.

So grace is a gift of God and kind wit a chance.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. PASSUS xv, l. 33.

Prevenient grace descending had remov'd

The stony from their hearts.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 3.

From vulgar bounds with brave disorder part,

And snatch a grace beyond the reach of Art.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. I, l. 154.

In his own grace he doth exalt himself.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 67.

Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,
Nothing goes right: we would, and we would not.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act IV, sc. 4, l. 36.

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee and on every hand,

Enwheel thee round!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act II, sc. 1, l. 81

God give him grace to groan!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 21.

Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 87.

He made it a part of his religion never to say grace to his meat.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. 11.

She ask'd him for stuffing, she ask'd him for gravy,

She ask'd him for gizzard;—but not for Grace.

R. H. BARRAM, A Lay of St. Nicholas.

II—Grace: Physical

Her gracious, graceful, graceless Grace.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 49.

Beauty without grace is the hook without the bait.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

Grace is more beautiful than beauty.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

Grace will last, beauty will blast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6292.

Sately and tall he moves in the hall

The chief of a thousand for grace.

KATE FRANKLIN, Life at Olympus.

Grace is to the body what judgment is to the mind. (La bonne grâce est au corps ce que le bon sens est à l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 67.

And grace that won who saw to wish her stay.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 43.

Absence of grace and inharmonious movement and discord are nearly allied to ill words and ill nature, as grace and harmony are the sisters and images of goodness and virtue.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 401.

See, what a grace was seated on this brow;
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination and a form indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 55.

One woman is fair, yet I am well; another is wise, yet I am well; another virtuous, yet I am well; but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 28.

Whatever she does, wherever she goes, grace orders her actions and follows her movements. (Illam, quidquid agit, quoquo vestigia movit, componit furtim subsequiturque Decor.)

TIBULLUS, De Sulpicia. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 7.

Narcissus is the glory of his race:

For who does nothing with a better grace?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 85.

He does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 88.

III—Grace: The Graces

Take time enough: all other graces

Will soon fill up their proper places.

JOHN BYRON, Advice to Preach Slow.

Learn to read slow: all other graces

Will follow in their proper places.

WILLIAM WALKER, The Art of Reading.

There are Batavian graces in all he says.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, retorting to Beresford Hope, who had referred to Disraeli as an "Asian mystery."

Hope was descended from an Amsterdam family, and Disraeli's reference was to a sentence from Erasmus' Neufragium: "O crassum ingenium! Suspicio fuisse Batavum," "O dense intelligence! I suspect that it was Batavian," i. e. from the Netherlands, otherwise Batavia.

Alas! when all the gods assembled around his cradle to present their gifts, the graces were not there, and he to whom the favor of these fair powers is wanting may indeed possess much and be able to confer much, yet on his bosom we can never rest.

GOETHE, Tasso. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 197.

And joined with the Nymphs the lovely Graces. (Junctæque Nymphis Gratia decentes.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 6.

Such stains there are—as when a Grace
Sprinkles another's laughing face

With nectar, and runs on.

W. S. LANDOR, Catullus.

Every man of any education would rather be called a rascal than accused of deficiency in the graces.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 54.)

Around the child bend all the three

Sweet Graces—Faith, Hope, Charity.

Around the man bend other faces—

Pride, Envy, Malice, are his Graces.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Epigram.

The three black graces, Law, Physic, and Divinity.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Punch's Holiday.

(Ὁ καλὸς Ξενοκράτης, θύε τοῖς Χάρεσιν.)

PLATO, his advice to Xenocrates, whom he considered too grave and dignified. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cato Major, Ch. 2, sec. 3. DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Xenocrates, Bk. iv, ch. 2, sec. 6.)

DEAR BOY: I must from time to time remind you of what I have often recommended to you, and of what you cannot attend to too much: Sacrifice to the Graces.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

The Graces, the Graces; remember the Graces!

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 Jan., 1749.

Adorn yourself with all those graces and accomplishments, which, without solidity, are frivolous; but without which solidity is, to a great degree, useless.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Jan., 1750.

² Four are the Graces, there are two Aphrodites and ten Muses. Dercylis is one of all, a Grace, an Aphrodite, and a Muse. (Τέσσερες αἱ Χάριτες, ἑκατὶ δὲ καὶ δέκα Μοῦσαι· Δερκυλὶς δὲ χάρις καὶ Μοῦσα, Χάρις, Παιὴν.)

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. v, no. 95. Sometimes attributed to Callimachus.

Two goddesses now must Cyprus adore;
The Muses are ten, and the Graces are four;
Stella's wit is so charming, so sweet her fair face,
She shines a new Venus, a Muse, and a Grace.

SWIFT's rendering of the above epigram from the Greek Anthology.

³ Some say the Muses are nine; but how carelessly! Look at the tenth, Sappho from Lesbos. (Ἐννέα τὰς Μοῦσας φασὶν εἶναι ὡς ἀληθὲς· ἑκάτη δὲ καὶ Σαπφὸς Ἀρβύδα ἔδεικται.)

PLATO, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, No. 506.)

GRAMMAR

⁴ Idly curious race of grammarians, ye who dig up by the roots the poetry of others, . . . away with you, bugs that bite secretly the eloquent.

ANTIPHANES OF MACEDONIA. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 322.)

⁵ So hath man sought to come forth of the second general curse, which was the confusion of tongues, by the art of grammar.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

⁶ Heedless of grammar, they all cried, "That's him!"

R. H. BARRHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims.

⁷ More fault of those who had the hammering Of prosody into me, and syntax, And did it, not with hobnails but tinstacks!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess. Sec. 15.

⁸ For all a rhetorician's rules

Teach nothing but to name his tools.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pl. i, canto i, l. 89.

⁹ A heretic in grammar. (Hereticus in Grammatica.)

ERASMUS, Synodus Grammaticorum.

¹⁰ The grammarians are at variance, and the matter is still undecided. (Grammatici certant, et adhuc sub iudice lis est.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 78.

In all the mazes of metaphorical confusion.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 7, 3 Mar., 1769.

¹¹ Grammar is the grave of letters.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 114.

¹² Who climbs the Grammar-Tree, distinctly knows

Where Noun, and Verb, and Participle grows. JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 583. (John Dryden, tr.)

¹³ Grammar, which knows how to lord it over kings, and with high hands makes them obey its laws. (La grammaire, qui sait régenter jusqu'aux rois, Et les fait, la main haute, obéir à ses lois.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 38.

¹⁴ The greater part of this world's troubles are due to questions of grammar. (La plus part des occasions des troubles du monde sont grammairiennes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

¹⁵ An aspersion upon my parts of speech!

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3.

¹⁶ I am king of the Romans, and above grammar. (Ego sum rex Romanus, et supra grammaticam.)

EMPEROR SIGISMUND, at the Council of Constance, 1414, to a prelate who called his attention to a grammatical error in his opening speech. (MENZEL, History of the Romans, p. 325.)

Cæsar is above grammar.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, to Voltaire, when the latter urged him to write better French than Louis XIV.

¹⁷ When I read some of the rules for speaking and writing the English language correctly, . . . I think—

Any fool can make a rule
And every fool will mind it.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 Feb., 1860.

¹⁸ Why care for grammar as long as we are good?

ARTEMUS WARD, Natural History. Pl. v.

GRANT, ULYSSES S.

1
Great Captain, glorious in our wars—
No meed of praise we hold from him;
About his brow we wreath the stars
The coming ages shall not dim.
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, "Great Captain,
Glorious in Our Wars."

The cloud-sent man! Was it not he
That from the hand of adverse fate
Snatched the white flower of victory?
He spoke no word, but saved the State.
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, "Great Captain,
Glorious in Our Wars."

2
Let us have peace: our clouded eyes
Fill, Father, with another light,
That we may see with clearer sight
Thy servant's soul in Paradise.
AMBROSE BIERCE, The Death of Grant.

His was the heavy hand, and his
The service of the despot blade;
His the soft answer that allayed
War's giant animosities.
AMBROSE BIERCE, The Death of Grant.

3
The Conquerer of a hundred fields
To a mighty Conqueror yields;
No mortal foeman's blow
Laid the great Soldier low;
Victor in his latest breath—
Vanquished but by Death.
FRANCIS FISHER BROWN, Vanquished.

4
And if asked what state he hails from,
This our sole reply shall be,
"From near Appomattox Court-house,
With its famous apple-tree."
CHARLES GRAHAM HALPINE, A Bumper to Grant.
(Quoted by Roscoe Conkling in nominating Grant for the Presidency, June, 1880.)

5
Strong, simple, silent, such was he
Who helped us in our need. . . .
Nothing ideal, a plain people's man. . . .
Doer of hopeless tasks which praters shirk,
One of those still plain men that do the world's rough work.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Bust of General Grant.

6
The iron shackles which Lincoln declared should be loosed from the limbs and souls of the black slaves, Grant, with his matchless army, melted and destroyed in the burning glories of the war.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Address, on Grant's birthday, 1893.

7
How history repeats itself
You'll say when you remember Grant,
Who, in his boyhood days, once sought
Throughout the lexicon for "can't."
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOTFORD, Grant.

GRAPES

8
The grapes are sour. (Ἰ᾿ἄγες ἀπακίσουσι μᾶλα.)

Æsop, Fables: The Fox and the Grapes.

"They are too green," said he, "and only good for fools." ("Ils sont trop verts," dit-il, "et bons pour des goudais.")

LA FONTAINE, Le Renard et les Raisins. The fable is that the fox, seeing the lovely ripe grapes high on a trellis, and being unable to reach them, passed by with the above remark, and La Fontaine adds, "Wasn't that better than complaining?" (Fit-il pas mieux que de se plaindre?)

9
I see full well the fox will eat no grapes because he cannot reach them.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Arts Adulandi. Sig. E3.
(1580)

10
There, economy was always "elegant," and money-spending always "vulgar" and osten-tationous—a sort of sour grapeism, which made us very peaceful and satisfied.

MRS. GASKELL, Cranford. Ch. 1.

11
Winter grape sour, whedder you kin reach
'im or not.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs.

12
The fox, when he cannot reach the grapes, says they are not ripe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

And like the fox, to cry the grapes are sour.

UNKNOWN, Wit for Money. Act iv. (1691)

13
Prudish clods of barren clay,
Who mope for heaven because earth's grapes are sour.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act
ii, sc. 3.

14
The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xviii, 2.

The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxxi, 29.

15
And he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 2.

16
Is not the gleanings of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abi-ezer?

Old Testament: Judges, viii, 2.

17
Poor birds, deceived with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 601.

18
Go to grass.

BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Little French
Lewyer*. Act iv, sc. 7.

¹ Here-I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
My humble song of praise
Most joyfully I raise
To Him at whose command
I beautify the land,
Creeping, silently creeping everywhere.

SARAH ROBERTS BOYLE, The Voice of the Grass.

² Grass and hay, we are all mortal.
RICHARD BRATHWAT, Whimsies, 73. (1631)
See also under MORTALITY.

³ The grey horse, while his grass groweth, may starve for hunger, thus saith the proverb.
JOHN CAPREAVE, Life of St. Katherine, ii, 253.
(c. 1440)

While the grass groweth the horse starveth.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

Yet the old proverb I would have them know,
The horse may starve whilst the grass doth grow.
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, *A Kicksey-
Winsey*. Pt. iv, last line.

Whilst grass doth grow, oft starves the silly steed.
GEORGE WHEATSTONE, Promos and Cassandry.

While the grass grows—
The proverb is something musty.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 358.

Live, horse! and thou shalt have grass.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

⁴ Grass grows at last above all graves.
JULIA C. R. DORR, Grass-Grown.

Pile the bodies high at Austerlitz and Waterloo.
Shovel them under and let me work—
I am the grass; I cover all.
CARL SANDBURG, Grass.

⁵ We say of the oak, "How grand of girth!"
Of the willow we say, "How slender!"
And yet to the soft grass clothing the earth
How slight is the praise we render.
EDGAR FAWCETT, The Grass.

⁶ Grass springeth not where the grand signior's horse setteth his foot.
THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 30. Referred to as "the old proverb." (1639)

Of whom you may say, as of the Great Sultan's horse, where he treads the grass grows no more.
JOHN CLEVELAND, Works, p. 77. (1658)

⁷ I am tired of four walls and a ceiling;
I have need of the grass.
RICHARD HOVY, Along the Trail: Spring.

⁸ A blade of grass is always a blade of grass, whether in one country or another.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Mrs. PROSE, Anecdotes of Johnson, p. 100.)

⁹ The green grass floweth like a stream
Into the ocean's blue.
J. R. LOWELL, The Stream, l. 87.

¹⁰ The murmur that springs
From the growing of grass.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, Al Aaraaf. Pt. ii, l. 124.
The grass you almost hear it growing;
You hear it now, if e'er you can.
WORDSWORTH, The Idiot Boy, l. 285.

¹¹ Grass grows not upon the highway.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 149.

¹² How lush and lusty the grass looks! how green!

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 52.
O'er the smooth enamell'd green
Where no print of step hath been.
MILTON, Arcades, l. 84.

The scented wild weeds and enamelled moss.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 15.

¹³ In the world's audience hall, the simple blade of grass sits on the same carpet with the sunbeam, and the stars of midnight.
RABINORAMATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 74.

¹⁴ There hath grown no grass on my heel since I went hence.
NICHOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act
iii, sc. 3.

I have not been idle—I have not let grass grow
under my feet.
UNKNOWN, The Spanish Bawd. Act iv, sc. 3.

¹⁵ A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands;
How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is any more than he.
I guess it must be the flag of my disposition,
out of hopeful green stuff woven.
Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord,
A scented gift and remembrancer designedly
dropt. . . .

And now it seems to me the beautiful uncut hair of graves.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 6.

GRASSHOPPER

¹⁶ Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importu-nate chink, whilst thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that, of course, they are many in number; or that, after all, they are other than the little, abridged, meagre, hopping, though loud and troublesome, insects of the hour.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

¹⁷ Happy insect! what can be
In happiness compared to thee?

Fed with nourishment divine,
The dewy morning's gentle wine!
Nature waits upon thee still,
And thy verdant cup does fill;
'Tis fill'd wherever thou dost tread,
Nature's self's thy Ganymede.

COWLEY, Anacreontiques: The Grasshopper.

The grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 5.

Green little vaulter, in the sunny grass,
Catching your heart up at the feel of June,
Sole noise that's heard amidst the lazy noon.

LEIGH HUNT, To the Grasshopper and the Cricket.

Divine insect,
That sips of dew And sings!

WILLIAM GRIFFITH, Grasshopper.

When all the birds are faint with the hot sun,
And hide in cooling trees, a voice will run
From hedge to hedge about the new-mown mead;

That is the grasshopper's—he takes the lead
In summer luxury—he has never done
With his delights; for when tired out with fun,

He rests at ease beneath some pleasant weed.
KEATS, On the Grasshopper and Cricket.

The Grasshopper, the Grasshopper,
I will explain to you:—
He is the 'Brownies' Racehorse,
The Fairies' Kangaroo.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Grasshopper.

GRATITUDE

I—Gratitude: Definitions

Gratitude is a burden upon our imperfect nature.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Nov., 1765.

Gratitude is a burden, and every burden is made to be shaken off. (La reconnaissance est un fardeau, et tout fardeau est fait pour être secoué.)

DIDEROT, Encyclopédie.

While I would fain have some tincture of all the virtues, there is no quality I would rather have, and be thought to have, than gratitude. For it is not only the greatest virtue, but even the mother of all the rest. (Hæc est enim una virtus non solum maxima, sed etiam mater virtutum omnium reliquarum.)

CICERO, Pro Plancio, Ch. 33, sec. 80.

Gratitude is one of those things that cannot be bought. It must be born with men, or else all the obligations in the world will not create it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 205.

Gratitude is a fruit of great cultivation; you do not find it among gross people.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Tour to the Hebrides, 20 Sept., 1773.

Justice is often pale and melancholy; but Gratitude, her daughter, is constantly in the flow of spirits and the bloom of loveliness.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Hume and Home.

The gratitude of most men is nothing but a secret hope of receiving greater favors. (La reconnaissance de la plupart des hommes n'est qu'une secrète envie de recevoir de plus grands bienfaits.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 298.

The gratitude of place-expectants is a lively sense of future favors.

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, (HAZLITT, Wit and Humour.)

Gratitude is the memory of the heart. (La reconnaissance est la mémoire du cœur.)

JEAN BAPTISTE MASSIEU, Letter to the Abbé Sicard.

And name it gratitude, the word is poor.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Sage Enamoured.

Gratitude is a nice touch of beauty added last of all to the countenance, giving a classic beauty, an angelic loveliness, to the character.

THEODORE PARKER, Sermon: Of Moral Dangers Incident to Prosperity.

If you do anything well, gratitude is lighter than a feather; if you give offense in anything, people's wrath is as heavy as lead. (Si quid bene facias, levior pluma est gratia: Si quid peccatumst, plumbeas iras gerunt.)

PLAUTUS, Panulus, I. 612. (Act iii, sc. 6.)

Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act II, sc. 3, l. 65.

Swift gratitude is sweetest; if it delays, all gratitude is empty and unworthy of the name. (Ἡλαστά χάριτες γλυκερώτεραι: ἢ δὲ ἀπαύρηται, καὶ οὐκ ἀξίαι χάριτος, ἀνδὲ λέγουσιν χάριτες.)

UNKNOWN, (Greek Anthology, Bk. x, epig. 30.)

They say late thanks are ever best.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Robert, Lord Cecil, July 1603.

II—Gratitude: Apothegms

What soon grows old? Gratitude. (Τὸ γρηγορὲς γαίῳ—χάρις.)

ARISTOTLE, (DIOG. LAERTIUS, Aristotle, Sec. 18.)

Gratitude is a charge upon the inheritance which the second generation is apt to repudiate.

HONORÉ DE BALZAC, Gobseck, p. 4. (1840)

¹ Next to ingratitude, the most painful thing to bear is gratitude.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

² Some people always sigh in thanking God.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 445.

I am glad that he thanks God for anything.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

³ In grateful looks,
Seraphs write lessons more divine than books.
BULWER-LYTTON, New Timon. Pt. i, sec. ii, l. 58.

⁴ I thank you for nothing, because I understand nothing.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie, ii, 3. (1594)
SHADWELL, Sullen Lovers, v, 3. (1668)

⁵ Words are but empty thanks.
COLLEY CIBBER, Woman's Wit. Act v.
Accept my thoughts for thanks; I have no words.
HANNAM MORE, Moses.

Though my mouth be dumb, my heart shall thank you.
NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act ii, sc. 1.

⁶ Praise the bridge that carried you over.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir-at-Law. Act i, sc. 1.

It is strange men cannot praise the bridge they go over, or be thankful for favours they have had.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 368.

When our perils are past, shall our gratitude sleep?

No,—here's to the pilot that weathered the storm!

GEORGE CANNING, The Pilot. Sung in honor of William Pitt at a public dinner, 28 May, 1802.

⁷ When I'm not thanked at all I'm thanked enough.

FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 2.

⁸ Sweet music's melting fall, but sweeter yet
The still small voice of Gratitude.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 63.

⁹ Thanksgiving for a former doth invite
God to bestow a second benefit.

ROBERT HERRICK, Thanksgiving.

¹⁰ Lord, for the erring thought
Not into evil wrought:

Lord, for the wicked will Betrayed and baffled still:
For the heart from itself kept,
Our thanksgiving accept.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, Thanksgiving.

¹¹ To receive honestly is the best thanks for a good thing.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Mary Marston. Ch. 5.

¹² A grateful mind
By owing owes not, but still pays, at once
Indebted and discharg'd.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 35.

¹³ Thanks are justly due for boons unbought.
(Gratia pro rebus merito debetur inemptis.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 43.

¹⁴ One good turn deserves another. (Manus manum lavat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45.

Scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours. (Serva me, servabo te.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44.

¹⁵ Th' unwilling gratitude of base mankind!
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 14.

¹⁶ Possessions gained by the sword are not lasting; gratitude for benefits is eternal. (Non est diuturna possessio in quam gladio ducimus; beneficiorum gratia sempiterna est.)
QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, viii, 8, 11.

¹⁷ Let the man, who would be grateful, think of repaying a kindness, even while receiving it. (Qui gratus futurus est, statim, dum accipit, de reddendo cogitet.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, ch. 25, sec. 3.

¹⁸ Nothing is more honorable than a grateful heart. (Nihil esse grato animo honestius.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxi, 30.

¹⁹ Thou thought'st to help me; and such thanks I give

As one near death to those that wish him live.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 135.

For this relief, much thanks.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 8.

Such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 25.

²⁰ Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 280.

²¹ Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.
SHAKESPEARE, 11 Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 85.

²² Let but the commons hear this testament—
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy

Unto their issue.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 135.

1 Within this wall of flesh
There is a soul counts thee her creditor.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 20.

2 Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 153.

3 Do you like gratitude? I don't. If pity is akin to love, gratitude is akin to the other thing.

BERNARD SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act iii.

4 And though I ebb in worth, I'll flow in thanks.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET. *A Very
Merry-Wherry-Ferry Voyage*, l. 520.

5 In everything give thanks. ('E' vavri vaxapi<TTGTē)

New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 18.

6 I've heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds
With coldness still returning;
Alas! the gratitude of men
Hath oftener left me mourning.

WORDSWORTH, Simon Lee, l. 93.

7 But whether we have less or more,
Always thank we God therefor.

UNKNOWN, Fabliau of Sir Cleyes. (c. 1450)

Be thankful fr what ye have not, Hinmissy—
'tis the only safe rule.

FINLKY PETER DUNNE, Thanksgiving.

GRAVE

I—Grave: Definitions

8 The grave is Heaven's golden gate,
And rich and poor around it wait;
0 Shepherdess of England's fold,

Behold this gate of pearl and gold!

WILLIAM BLAKE, Dedication of the Designs to Blair's "Grave": To Queen Charlotte.

9 Our noblest piles and stateliest rooms,
Are mere out-houses to our tombs;
Cities, tho' ere so great and brave,
But mere warehouses to the grave.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 85.

The most magnificent and costly dome
Is but an upper chamber to the tomb.

YOUNG, The Last Day. Bk. ii, l. 87.

The gay assembly's gayest room
Is but the upper story of some tomb.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 481.

Build houses of five hundred by a hundred feet, forgetting that of six by two.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. ii, ch. 8.

10

A clayey tenement.

THOMAS CAREW, Epitaphs: On the Lady Mary Villiers.

A pick-axe and a spade,
And eke a shrouding-sheet,
A house of clay for to be made
For such a guest most meet.

THOMAS VAUX, The Aged Lover Renounceth Love.

11

Man goeth to his long home.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 5.

And thy travail shalt thou soon end,
For to thy long home soon shalt thou wend.

ROBERT MANNYNG (ROBERT DE BRUNNE),
Handlyng Synne, l. 9195. (1303)

12

The grave is the general meeting-place.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4563.

13

If the heats of hate and lust

In the house of flesh are strong,

Let me mind the house of dust

Where my sojourn shall be long.

A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad, p. 19.

14

The house appointed for all living.

Old Testament: Job, xxx, 23.

15

The grave itself is but a covered bridge,

Leading from light to light, through a brief darkness!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v.

16

He spake well who said that graves are the footprints of angels.

11 Earth to earth and dust to dust!

Here the evil and the just,
Here the youthful and the old,
Here the fearful and the bold,
Here the matron and the maid
In one silent bed are laid;
Here the sword and sceptre rust—
Earth to earth and dust to dust.

GEORGE CROLY, A Dirge.

12 Earth laughs in flowers, to see her boastful

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 317.

20 And my large kingdom for a little grave,

A little little grave, an obscure grave.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 153.

I'll take a turn among the tombs,
And see whereto all glory comes.
ISAAC WATTS, The Hero's School.

IV—Grave: Its Comfort

Mine be the breezy bill that skirts the down;
Where a green grassy turf is all I crave,
With here and there a violet bestrown,
Fast by a brook, or fountain's murmuring
wave;

And many an evening sun shine sweetly on my grave!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, st. 17.

I gazed upon the glorious sky
And the green mountains round,
And thought that when I came to lie
At rest within the ground,
'Twere pleasant, that in flowery June,
When brooks send up a cheerful tune,
And groves a joyous sound,
The sexton's hand, my grave to make,
The rich, green mountain turf should break.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, June, l. 1.

I would rather sleep in the southern corner of a little country churchyard than in the tomb of the Capulets.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, looking at the royal tombs at Potsdam. The country house he built close by was called "Sans Souci."

Oh, the grave!—the grave!—It buries every error—covers every defect—extinguishes every resentment! From its peaceful bosom spring none but fond regrets and tender recollections. Who can look down upon the grave even of an enemy and not feel a compunctious throb, that he should ever have warred with the poor handful of earth that lies mouldering before him?

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch-book: Rural Funerals.

A very worthless rogue may dig the grave,
But Hands unseen will dress the turf with daisies.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Human Skull.

For rain it hath a friendly sound

To one who's six feet underground;
And scarce the friendly voice or face:
A grave is such a quiet place.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Renascence.

There is a calm for those who weep,
A rest for weary pilgrims found,
They softly lie and sweetly sleep
Low in the ground.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Grave.

A grave seems only six feet deep
And three feet wide,
Viewed with the calculating eye
Of one outside.

But when fast bound in the chill loam
For that strange sleep,
Who knows how wide its realm may be?
Its depths, how deep?

JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, A Grave.

Let children play
And sit like flowers upon thy grave
And crown with bowers,—that hardly have
A briefer blooming-tide than they.

FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE, A Danish Burrow.

Yet shall thy grave with rising flowers be dress'd,

And the green turf lie lightly on thy breast;
There shall the morn her earliest tears bestow,

There the first roses of the year shall blow.
POPE, *Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate
Lady*, l. 65.

But I must go before him; and, 'tis said,
The grave's good rest when women go first to bed.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Woman Never Vexed.
Act v.

So be my grave my peace.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 127.

This little life is all we must endure,
The grave's most holy peace is ever sure.
JAMES THOMSON, City of Dreadful Night, xiv.

All things have rest, and ripen towards the

V—Grave: Its Terror

Far from famous sepulchres, toward a lonely cemetery, my heart, like a muffled drum, goes beating a funeral march. (Loin des sépultures célèbres, Vers un cimetière isolé,

Mon cœur, comme un tambour voilé, Va battant des marches funèbres.)

Our lives are but our marches to the grave.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant.

Act III, sc. 5, l. 76.

Our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still, like muffled drums, are beating
Funeral marches to the grave.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

But when shall spring visit the mouldering urn!

O when shall it dawn on the night of the grave!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit, St. 4.

Here are sands, ignoble things,
Dropt from the ruined sides of kings.

FRANCIS BEAUMONT, On the Tombs of Westminster Abbey.

For in the silent grave, no conversation,
No joyful tread of friends, no voice of lovers!

No careful father's counsels, nothing's heard,
For nothing is, but all oblivion,
Dust and an endless darkness.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Tragedy of Thierry and Theodoret, Act iv, sc. 1.

The grave's a fine and private place,
But none, I think, do there embrace.

ANDREW MARVELL, To His Coy Mistress.

Done with the work of breathing; done
With all the world; the mad race run

GREATNESS

I—Greatness: Definitions

¹ Great men are the true men, the men in whom nature has succeeded.

AMEL, Journal, 13 Aug., 1865.

² Greatness is a spiritual condition worthy to excite love, interest, and admiration; and the outward proof of possessing greatness is, that we excite love, interest, and admiration.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy: Sweetness and Light.

³ Greatness, after all, in spite of its name, appears to be not so much a certain size as a certain quality in human lives. It may be present in lives whose range is very small.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Sermons: Purpose and Use of Comfort.

⁴ All things that we see standing accomplished in the world are properly the outer material result, the practical realization and embodiment of Thoughts that dwell in the Great Men sent into the world.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lecture I, sec. 1.

⁵ For he seems to me to be the greatest man, who rises to a high position by his own merit, and not one who climbs up by the injury and disaster of another.

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Sec. 30.

⁶ Some must be great. Great offices will have Great talents.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 788.

⁷ Man is only truly great when he acts from the passions.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iv, ch. 13.

⁸ The measure of a master is his success in bringing all men round to his opinion twenty years later.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture.

He is great who confers the most benefits.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-reliance.

I count him a great man who inhabits a higher sphere of thought, into which other men rise with labor and difficulty.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

He is great who is what he is from nature, and who never reminds us of others.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

⁹ Nothing great comes into being all at once; not even the grape or the fig. "You say to me now, 'I want a fig,' I shall answer, 'That requires time.' Let the tree blossom first, then put forth its fruit, and finally let the fruit ripen.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. I, ch. 15, sec. 7.

The heights by great men reached and kept

Were not attained by sudden flight,

But they, while their companions slept,

Were toiling upward in the night.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Ladder of St. Augustine. Inscribed beneath Longfellow's bust in the Hall of Fame.

¹⁰ Great men are the gifts of kind Heaven to our poor world; instruments by which the Highest One works out his designs; light-radiators to give guidance and blessing to the travelers of time.

MOSES HARVEY, Columbus.

¹¹ Great men are rarely isolated mountain-peaks; they are the summits of ranges.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Atlantic Essays: Plea for Culture.

¹² To be a great man, one must know how to make the most of fortune. (Pour être un grand homme, il faut savoir profiter de toute sa fortune.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 343.

It is not enough to have great qualities; one must make good use of them. (Ce n'est pas assez d'avoir de grandes qualités; il en faut avoir l'économie.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 159.

¹³ Great spirits are not those who have fewer passions and greater virtue than ordinary men, but only those who have the greatest aims. (Les grandes âmes ne sont pas celles qui ont moins de passions et plus de vertu que les âmes communes, mais celles seulement qui ont de plus grands desseins.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 602.

Great hopes make great men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1759.

¹⁴ The great man is the man who can get himself made and who will get himself made out of anything he finds at hand.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Bk. II, ch. 15.

¹⁵ A great man is made up of qualities that meet or make great occasions.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Garfield.

¹ The great man is he who does not lose his child's heart.

MÆCRUS, Works. Bk. iv, pt. 2, ch. 12.

² That man is great, and he alone,
Who serves ~~at~~ greatness not his own,
For neither praise nor self:
Content to know and he unknown:
Whole in himself.

OWEN MEREDITH, A Great Man.

³ He alone is worthy of the appellation who either does great things, or teaches how they may be done, or describes them with a suitable majesty when they have been done; but those only are great things which tend to render life more happy, which increase the innocent enjoyments and comforts of existence, or which pave the way to a state of future bliss more permanent and more pure.

MILTON, The Second Defence of the People of England.

⁴ My formula for greatness in man is amor fati: that a man should wish to have nothing altered, either in the future, the past, nor for all eternity.

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Ecce Homo.

⁵ That man is great who can use the brains of others to carry on his work.

DOWN PIATT, Memories of Men Who Saved the Union: W. H. Seward.

⁶ Look next on Greatness: say where Greatness lies:

"Where but among the heroes and the wise?"

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 217.

Who wickedly is wise, or madly brave,
Is but the more a fool, the more a knave.
Who noble ends by noble means obtains,
Or failing, smiles in exile or in chains,
Like good Aurelius let him reign, or bleed
Like Socrates:—that man is great indeed!

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 231.

⁷ It is true greatness to have the frailty of a man with the security of a god. (Vere magnum, habere fragilitatem hominis, securitatem dei.)

SENECA, (BACON, Essays: Of Adversity.)

⁸ He is a great man who uses earthenware dishes as if they were silver; but he is equally great who uses silver as if it were earthenware. (Magnus ille est, qui fictilibus sic utitur quemadmodum argento. Nec ille minor est, qui sic argento utitur quemadmodum fictilibus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. v, sec. 6. Greatness is not absolute; comparison increases it or lessens it. A ship which looms large in the river seems tiny when on the ocean. (Nam magnitudo non habet modum certum; comparatio illam aut tollit aut deprimit. Navis, quæ in flumine magna est, in mari parvula est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. xliii, 2.

None of those who have been raised to a loftier height by riches and honors is really great. Why then does he seem great to you? It is because you are measuring the pedestal along with the man.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. lxxvi, 31.

Why, then, is a wise man great? Because he has a great soul. (Quare ergo sapiens magnus est? Quia magnum animum habet.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. lxxvii, sec. 18.

That man has shown himself great who has never grieved in evil days and never bewailed his destiny. (Magnus apparuit qui nunquam malis ingemuit, nunquam de fato suo questus est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. cxx, 13.

⁹ Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,
When honour's at the stake.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 53.

¹⁰ He only is a great man who can neglect the applause of the multitude, and enjoy himself independent of its favour.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 172.

¹¹ He is truly great that is little in himself, and that maketh no account of any height of honors.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3.

Yea, all things good await
Him who cares not to be great,
But as he saves or serves the state.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington. St. 3.

¹² What is a great life? It is the dream of youth realized in old age. (Qu'est-ce qu'une grande vie? C'est un rêve de jeunesse réalisé dans l'âge mûr.)

ALFRED DE VIGNY, (LOUIS RATISBONNE, Journal des Débats, 4 Oct., 1863.)

II—Greatness: Apothegms

¹³ We have not the love of greatness, but the love of the love of greatness.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics.

No sadder proof can be given by a man of his own littleness than disbelief in great men.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 1.

¹⁴ Great men are seldom over-scrupulous in the arrangement of their attire.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2.

The defects of great men are the consolation of dunces.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Character of Men of Genius: Preface.

1 The great man who thinks greatly of himself, is not diminishing that greatness in heaping fuel on his fire.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 15.

2 Great men have great faults.

THOMAS DRAXE, Biblio. Scholas. Instruct., 127.

Only great men have a right to great faults. (Il n'appartient qu'aux grands hommes d'avoir des grands défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 190.

Great men too often have greater faults than little men can find room for.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Diogenes and Plato.

It is not by his faults, but by his excellences, that we must measure a great man.

G. H. LEWES, On Actors and Acting. Ch. 1.

3 To become a great man, it is necessary to be a great rascal.

CARDINAL GUILLAUME DUBOIS, preceptor to the Duc de Chartres, later the Regent Orleans. While he was archbishop of Cambrai, he was kicked five times by the regent, once each for the rogue, the pimp, the priest, the minister, and the archbishop. He stood waiting for another kick. "What are you waiting for?" the regent demanded. "I beg your pardon," answered Dubois, "I await the sixth as cardinal." The regent gave him both kick and red hat.

4 Every great man is a unique. The Scipionism of Scipio is precisely that part he could not borrow. Shakespeare will never be made by the study of Shakespeare. Do that which is assigned you, and you cannot hope too much or dare too much.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

5 The great man makes the great thing. Wherever Macdonald sits, there is the head of the table.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses and Lectures: The American Scholar. A misquotation from Sir Walter Scott. See 1504:13.

6 France has been considered thus far as the asylum of unfortunate monarchs; I wish that my capital should become the temple of great men.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to Voltaire, 7 Oct., 1743.

7 In short, whoever you may be,
To this conclusion you'll agree,
When everyone is somebody,
Then no one's anybody!

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act II.

8 No really great man ever thought himself so.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Ser. II, ch. 4.

On wind and wave the boy would toss,
Was great, nor knew how great he was.
S. T. COLERIDGE, William Tell.

9 He who comes up to his own idea of greatness, must always have had a very low standard of it in his mind.

TRACKERAY, The Chronicle of the Drum.

Dost thou look back on what hath been,
As some divinely gifted man,
Whose life in low estate began
And on a simple village green; . . .

And moving up from high to higher,
Becomes on Fortune's crowning slope
The pillar of a people's hope,
The centre of a world's desire?

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. liv.

2
Great let me call him, for he conquered me.
YOUNG, The Revenge. Act i, sc. 1.

IV—Greatness and Goodness

3
They're only truly great who are truly good.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, Revenge for Honour. Act v, sc. 2.

The essence of greatness is the perception that virtue is enough.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

There was never yet a truly great man that was not at the same time truly virtuous.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Busy-body. No. 3.

He is at no end of his actions blest
Whose ends will make him greatest, and not best.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Tragedy of Charles, Duke of Byron. Act v, sc. 1.

Greatness and goodness are not means, but ends!
Hath he not always treasures, always friends,
The good great man? three treasures, Love, and Light,

And Calm Thoughts, regular as infant's breath;
And three firm friends, more sure than day and night,
Himself, his Maker, and the Angel Death!
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Good Great Man.

Great and good are seldom the same man.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1752.
Too good for great things and too great for good.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England.

Beyond the limits of a vulgar fate,
Beneath the Good how far—but far above the Great.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poetry, l. 122.

7
There have, undoubtedly, been bad great men; but inasmuch as they were bad, they were not great.

LEIGH HUNT, Table Talk: Bad Great Men.

8
For he that once is good, is ever great.
BEN JONSON, The Forest: To Lady Aubigny.

9
Goodness is not tied to greatness, but greatness to goodness.

THOMAS MORFITT, Healths Improvement, 161. (1653) Quoted as a Greek proverb.

10
Ah God, for a man with heart, head, hand,
Like some of the simple great ones gone
For ever and ever by,
One still strong man in a blatant land,
Whatever they call him—what care I?—
Aristocrat, democrat, autocrat—one
Who can rule, and dare not lie!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 10, st. 5.

Dear Lord, but once before I pass away
Out of this Hell into the starry night
Where still my hopes are set in Death's despite,
Let one great man be good, let one pure ray
Shine through the gloom of this my earthly day
From one tall candle set upon a height.

ALFRED BRUCE DOUGLAS, Lighten Our Darkness.

11
The happy only are the truly great.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 300.

V—Greatness: Its Falsity

12
Great men are not always wise.
Old Testament: Job, xxii, 9.

13
The more one approaches great men the more one finds that they are men. (Plus on approche les grands hommes, plus on trouve qu'ils sont hommes.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères.

14
Dignity without pride was formerly the characteristic of greatness; the revolution in morals is completed, and it is now pride without dignity.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lopez Bano and Romero Alpuente.

15
Great is advertisement! 'tis almost fate;
But, little mushroom men, of puff-ball fame,
Ah, do you dream to be mistaken great
And to be really great are just the same?

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Alfred Tennyson.

16
To those who walk beside them, great men seem
Mere common earth; but distance makes them stars.

GERALD MASSEY, Hood, l. 11.

The Great Man is a man who lives a long way off.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xii, 36.

17
Great men,
Till they have gain'd their ends, are giants in Their promises, but, those obtain'd, weak pigmies

In their performance. And it is a maxim
Allow'd among them, so they may deceive,
They may swear any thing.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3.

18
Consider first, that great

Or bright infers not excellence.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 90.

But still the great have kindness in reserve:
He help'd to bury whom he help'd to starve.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 247.

The great are only great because we are on our knees. Let us rise! (Les grands ne sont grands que parceque nous sommes à genoux;
relevons nous.)

P. J. PROUDHON, Révolutions de Paris: Motto.

The great are only great because we carry them on our shoulders; when we throw them off they spawl on the ground.

DUBOSCQ-MONTANDRÉ, Point de l'Ovale.

Great men have to be lifted upon the shoulders of the whole world, in order to conceive their great ideas, or perform their great deeds.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 7 May, 1850.

He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 139.

There is no such thing as a great man or a great woman. People believe in them, just as they used to believe in unicorns and dragons.
The greatest man or woman is 99 per cent
just like yourself.

BERNARD SHAW, Radio Address, 11 July, 1932.

Yet what are they, the learned and the great?
Awhile of longer wonderment the theme!
Who shall presume to prophesy their date,
Where nought is certain, save the uncertainty of fate?

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Cui Bono?

Ah vanity of vanities!

How wayward the decrees of fate are,
How very weak the very wise,
How very small the very great are!

TRACERAY, Vanitas Vanitatum. St. 9.

⁸ Glory in excess is fraught with peril; 'tis the lofty peak which is smitten by heaven's thunderbolt. (Τὸ δ' ὑπερόβρον κλέειν εὖ βαρὺ βέλλεται γὰρ ὁσσοῖς Διὸς κέραρα.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 468.

The god smites with his thunderbolt creatures of greatness more than common, nor suffers them to display their pride; but such as are little move him not to anger; and it is ever on the tallest buildings and trees that his bolts fall; for it is heaven's way to bring low all things of surpassing bigness.

ARTABANUS. (HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, sec. 10.)

'Tis the tall pine that is oftenest shaken by the wind; 'tis the lofty towers that fall with heaviest crash; 'tis the highest mountains that the lightning strikes.

Who are so high above,
Are near to lightning, that are near to Jove.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Philotas. Act iv, sc. 1.

⁹ Men in great place are thrice servants: servants of the sovereign or state, servants of fame, and servants of business. So as they have no freedom, neither in their persons, nor in their actions, nor in their times.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

The rising unto place is laborious, and by pains men come to greater pains; and it is sometimes base; and by indignities, men come to dignities. The standing is slippery, and the regress is either a downfall, or at least an eclipse.

They will pay at the Greek Kalends. (Ad Kalendas Græcas soluturos.)

CÆSAR AUGUSTUS, of certain men who never paid their debts. (SURTONTUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Augustus. Ch. 87, sec. I.) As the Greeks had no Kalends, the phrase was used of anything that could never take place.

It must be dated ad Græcas Kalendas.

NORTON, Examen, 477. (1740)

At the Greekish calends, or a day after doomsday.

JOHN PALSgrave, Accolistius. Sig. VI. (1540)

The judgment or decree shall be given out and pronounced at the next Greek Calends, that is, never.

Agricola, i. c., Rolf Huysmann.

Achilles' wrath, to Greece the direful spring
Of woes unnumber'd, heav'nly Goddess, sing!

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 1. (Pope, tr.)

My faithful scene from true records shall tell,
How Trojan valour did the Greek excel;
Your great forefathers shall their fame regain,
And Homer's angry ghost repine in vain.

DRYDEN, Troilus and Cressida: Prologue.

He is a mad Greek, no less than a merry.

BEN JONSON. (CORVAT, Crudities, i, 17.)

When Greeks joyn'd Greeks, then was the tug of war.

NATHANIEL LEE, The Rival Queens, Act iv, sc. 2.
(1677) Constantly misquoted. "When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war."

By trying the Greeks got into Troy. ('Ες Τροίαν περιέμενοι ἄλθοι Ἀχαιοί.)

II—Greece: Her Glory

Cold is the heart, fair Greece, that looks on thee,

Nor feels as lovers o'er the dust they loved;

Dull is the eye that will not weep to see

Thy walls defaced, thy mouldering shrines removed

By British hands.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 15.

Fair Greece, sad relic of departed worth!
Immortal, though no more; though fallen, great!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 73.

And yet how lovely in thine age of woe,
Land of lost gods and godlike men, art thou!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 85.

Where'er we tread 'tis haunted, holy ground.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 88.

The isles of Greece, the isles of Greece!
Where burning Sappho loved and sung,
Where grew the arts of war and peace,
Where Delos rose, and Phœbus sprung!

Eternal summer gilds them yet,
But all, except their sun, is set.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

The mountains look on Marathon—
And Marathon looks on the sea;
And musing there an hour alone,
I dream'd that Greece might still be free.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

Earth! render back from out thy breast
A remnant of our Spartan dead!
Of the three hundred grant but three,
To make a new Thermopylæ!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

You have the Pyrrhic dance as yet,
Where is the Pyrrhic phalanx gone?
Of two such lessons, why forget

The nobler and the manlier one?
You have the letters Cadmus gave—
Think ye he meant them for a slave?

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

Such is the aspect of this shore;
'Tis Greece, but living Greece no more!
So coldly sweet, so deadly fair,
We start, for soul is wanting there.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 90.

Climb of the unforgotten brave!
Whose land from plain to mountain-cave
Was Freedom's home or Glory's grave!
Shrine of the mighty! can it be

That this is all remains of thee?

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 103.

Again to the battle, Achæians!
Our hearts bid the tyrants defiance;
Our land, the first garden of Liberty's tree,
It has been, and shall yet be, the land of the free.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song of the Greeks.

Earth proudly wears the Parthenon,
As the best gem upon her zone.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Problem.

Bozzaris! with the storied brave
Greece nurtured in her glory's time,
Rest thee—there is no prouder grave,

Even in her own proud clime.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris.

Greece, taken captive, captured her savage conqueror, and carried her arts into clownish Latium. (Græcia capta ferum victorem cepit et artes Intulit agresti Latio.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 156.

The duration of the freedom and the glory of Greece was short. But a few such years are worth myriads of ages of monkish slumber, and one such victory as Salamis or Bannockburn is of more value than the innumerable triumphs of the vulgar herds of conquerors.

J. G. LOCKHART. (Blackwood's Magazine. Vol. i, No. 2.)

On desperate seas long wont to roam,
Thy hyacinth hair, thy classic face,
Thy Naiad airs, have brought me home
To the glory that was Greece
And the grandeur that was Rome.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To Helen.

III—Greece: Athens

Ancient of days! august Athena! where,
Where are thy men of might? thy grand in soul?

Gone—glimmering through the dream of things that were:

First in the race that led to Glory's goal,
They won, and pass'd away—is this the whole?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 2.

I would rather live on a few grains of salt at Athens than dine like a prince at Craterus's table. (Ἄλλα βούλομαι ἐν Ἀθῆναις ἅλα λείχειν ἢ παρὰ Κρατέρῳ τῆς πολυτελοῦς τραπέζης ἀπολαύειν.)

Wherever literature consoles sorrow or assuages pain, wherever it brings gladness to eyes which fail with wakefulness and tears, and ache for the dark house and the long sleep, there is exhibited, in its noblest form, the immortal influence of Athens.

MACAULAY, Essays: Milford's History of Greece.

This is the gift of Athens to man. . . . her intellectual empire is imperishable. And when those who have rivalled her greatness shall have shared her fate; . . . when the sceptre shall have passed away from England; when, perhaps, travellers from distant regions shall in vain labour to decipher on some mouldering pedestal the name of our proudest chief; shall hear savage hymns chanted to some misshapen idol over the ruined dome of our proudest temple; and shall see a single naked fisherman wash his nets in the river of the ten thousand masts; her influence and her glory will still survive, fresh in eternal youth, exempt from mutability and decay, immortal as the intellectual principle from which they derived their origin, and over which they exercise their control.

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. 25, sec. 55.

Grief is to man as certain as the grave: Tempests and storms in life's whole progress rise, And hope shines dimly through o'er-clouded skies;

Some drops of comfort on the favour'd fall,

But showers of sorrow are the lot of all.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library, l. 641.

11 Nothing becomes offensive so quickly as grief. When fresh, it finds some one to console it, but when it becomes chronic, it is ridiculed, and rightly.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 389.

¹⁴
Guilt is always jealous.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 19.

¹⁵
Guilt is the source of sorrow, 'tis the fiend,
Th' avenging fiend, that follows us behind
With whips and stings.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Fair Penitent. Act iii, sc. 1.

¹⁶
Haste, holy Friar,
Haste, ere the sinner shall expire!
Of all his guilt let him be shriven,
And smooth his path from earth to heaven!

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 22.

¹⁷
And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 148.

I—Habit: Definitions

² Men acquire a particular quality by constantly acting in a particular way.
ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics, Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 10.

³ If you want to do something, make a habit of it; if you want not to do something, refrain from doing it.

EPICUREUS, Discourses, Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 4.

⁴ Habit is the approximation of the animal system to the organic. It is a confession of failure in the highest function of being, which involves a perpetual self-determination, in full view of all existing circumstances.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 7.

⁵ Habit is the enormous fly-wheel of society, its most precious conservative agent.

WILLIAM JAMES, Psychology, Vol. i, p. 121.

⁶ Habits change into character. (Abeunt studia in mores.)

OVID, Heroides, Epis. xv, l. 83.

We sow our thoughts, and we reap our actions; we sow our actions, and we reap our habits; we sow our habits, and we reap our characters; we sow our characters, and we reap our destiny.

C. A. HALL.

Sow an act and you reap a habit. Sow a habit and you reap a character. Sow a character and you reap a destiny.

CHARLES READE.

⁷ Habits are the daughters of action, but then they nurse their mother, and produce daughters after her image, but far more beautiful and prosperous.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons, Vol. i, p. 181.

A thought,—good or evil,—an act, in time a habit,—so runs life's law.

RALPH WALDO TRINE, Life's Law.

⁸ In ways and thoughts of weakness and of wrong,

Threads turn to cords, and cords to cables strong.

ISAAC WILLIAMS, The Baptistry, Image 18.

⁹ Habit rules the unreflecting herd.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets, Pt. II, No. 28.

II—Habit: Apothegms

¹⁰ The old coachman likes to hear the whip.
GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro, Ch. 30.

¹¹ Used to it, no doubt, as eels are to be flay'd.
BYRON, Don Juan, Canto v, st. 7.

¹² We are all, more or less, des animaux d'habitude.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Sept., 1757.

Man is an animal of habits. (Der Mensch ist ein Gewohnheitsthiere.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

¹³ Habit with him was all the test of truth; "It must be right: I've done it from my youth."

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough, Letter iii, l. 138.

¹⁴ A nail is driven out by another nail, habit is overcome by habit. (Clavus clavo pellitur, consuetudo consuetudine vincitur.)

ERASMUS, Diluculum.

Habit is overcome by habit. (Consuetudo consuetudine vincitur.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi, Bk. i, ch. 21, sec. 5.

¹⁵ Cultivate only the habits that you are willing should master you.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, Vol. xiv, p. 62.

¹⁶ Fixed as a habit or some darling sin.

JOHN OLIPHANT, A Letter from the Country to a Friend in Town.

¹⁷ Use established habit. (Morem fecerat usus.)

OVID, Metamorphoses, Bk. ii, l. 345.

¹⁸ Practice is everything. (Μετρητόν τὸ νῦν.)

PERIANDER. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 215.)

Practice is the best of all instructors.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae, No. 439. The origin, perhaps, of the proverb: "Practice makes perfect."

¹⁹ The habit is not a trifle. (Ἡ ἄλλα τὸ γ' ὅμοιόν μικρόν.)

PLATO, when a man whom he had rebuked for gambling protested that he played only for a trifle. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato, 38.)

Plato did once chide a child for playing with nuts, who answered him, "Thou chidest me for a small matter." "Habit" (replied Plato) "is no small matter."

MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. I, ch. 12.

¹ Evil habits, once settled, are more easily broken than mended. (Frangas enim citius quam corrigas quæ in parvum inducerunt.)
QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 12.

² For the ordinary business of life, an ounce of habit is worth a pound of intellect.
THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

³ But when the fox hath once got in his nose, He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 25.
To evil habit's earliest wile
Lend neither ear, nor glance, nor smile—
Choke the dark fountain ere it flows,
Nor e'en admit the camel's nose.

LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, The Camel's Nose.
Lord! how they chided with themselves,
That they had let him in;
To see him grow so monstrous now,
That came so small and thin.
THOMAS HOOD, The Wee Man.

III—Habit: Its Power

⁴ That which has become habitual becomes, as it were, a part of our nature; in fact, habit is something like nature, for the difference between "often" and "always" is not great, and nature belongs to the idea of "always," habit to that of "often."

ARISTOTLE, Rhetorica. Bk. i, ch. 11, sec. 3.
Habit becomes a sort of second nature, which supplies a motive for many actions. (Consuetudine quasi alteram quandam naturam effici, qua impulsus multa faciant.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 25, sec. 74.
Habit is second nature.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

For in physique this I find,
Usage is the second kind.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 664. (c. 1390)

⁵ This restless world
Is full of chances, which by habit's power
To learn to bear is easier than to shun.
JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. ii, l. 474.

⁶ Great is the power of habit. (Consuetudinis magna vis est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 40.

⁷ Men's natures are alike; it is their habits that carry them far apart.

CONFUCIUS, Analexis. Bk. xvii, ch. 2.

⁸ Nothing really pleasant or unpleasant subsists by nature, but all things become so by habit.

EMECRETUS, Fragments. No. 143.

⁹ There is nothing greater than habit. (Nil adsuétude majus.)

OVID, Art Amatoris. Bk. ii, l. 345.

¹⁰ Ill habits gather by unseen degrees,
As brooks make rivers, rivers run to seas.
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 155. (Dryden, tr.)

Small habits well pursued betimes
May reach the dignity of crimes.

HANNAH MORE, Florida. Pt. i.

¹¹ Through habit you will be led into it again.
(Consuetudine animus rursus te huc inducet.)
PLAUTUS, Mercator. l. 1001. (Act v, sc. 4.)

¹² Habit is stronger than nature. (Consuetudo natura potentior est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFINUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. v, sec. 5, l. 21.

For use almost can change the stamp of nature.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 169.

Habit is ten times nature.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Sayings.

¹³ For me, who have spent my whole life in the practice of virtue, right conduct has become a habit. (Mihi, qui omnem ætatem in optimis artibus egi, bene facere jam ex consuetudine in naturam vortit.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 85, sec. 9.

¹⁴ How many unjust and wicked things are done from habit. (Quam multa injusta ac prava fiunt moribus!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timoroumenos. l. 839. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

¹⁵ To fall into a habit is to begin to cease to be.
MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life, p. 206.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 193.

¹⁶
Her head was bare,
But for her native ornament of hair;
Which in a simple knot was tied above,
Sweet negligence, unheeded bait of love!
OVID, Metamorphoses: Melicager and Atalanta,
l. 68. (Dryden, tr.)

¹⁷
The meeting points the sacred hair dis sever
From the fair head, for ever, and for ever.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 133.

¹⁸
Even nature herself abhors to see a woman shorn or polled; a woman with cut hair is a filthy spectacle, and much like a monster;
. . . it being natural and comely to women to nourish their hair, which even God and nature have given them for a covering, a token of subjection, and a natural badge to distinguish them from men.

WILLIAM Prynne, Histrio-Mastix.

III—Hair: Blonde and Brunette

¹⁹
Dear, dead women, with such hair, too—
what's become of all the gold
Used to hang and brush their bosoms?

ROBERT BROWNING, A Toccata of Galuppi's.
St. 15.

²⁰
When you see fair hair be pitiful.
GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv, sc.
ii, l. 107.

²¹
Beware of her fair hair, for she excels
All women in the magic of her locks;
And when she winds them round a young man's neck,
She will not ever set him free again.
GOETHE, Faust: The Hartz Mountain, l. 335.

And she combs her golden hair.
HENRY, The Lorelei. St. 3.

² The little wind that hardly shook
The silver of the sleeping brook
Blew the gold hair about her eyes,—
A mystery of mysteries.
So he must often pause, and stoop,
And all the wanton ringlets loop
Behind her dainty ear—emprise
Of slow event and many sighs.
W. D. HOWELLS, Through the Meadows.

³ Borgia, thou once wert almost too august
And high for adoration; now thou'rt dust.
All that remains of thee these plaits unfold,
Calm hair meandering in pellucid gold.
W. S. LANDOR, On Lucretia Borgia's Hair.

⁴ Sabrina fair,
Listen where thou art sitting,
Under the glassy, cool, translucent wave,
In twisted braids of lilies knitting
The loose train of thy amber-dropping hair.
JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 859.

⁵ His . . . hyacinthine locks

AVULEIUS, The Golden Ass. Bk. v.

⁵ As incredulous as those who think none bald until they see his brains.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 267. (1580)

⁶ You manufacture, with the aid of unguents, a false head of hair, and your bald and dirty scalp is covered with painted locks. There is no need to call a hairdresser for your head. A sponge, Phoebus, would do the business better.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 57.

You collect your straggling hairs on either side, Marinus, endeavoring to conceal the vast expanse of your shining bald pate by the locks which still grow on your temples. . . . Why not confess yourself an old man? . . . There is nothing more contemptible than a bald man who pretends to have hair.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 83.

⁷ Ugly is a field without grass, a plant without leaves, or a head without hair. (Turpis sine gramine campus, Et sine fronde frutex, et sine crine caput.)

OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 249.

⁸ There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 73.

His sweating palm

The precedent of pith and livelihood.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 25.

And blessed are the horny hands of toil.

LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain, l. 204.

She makes her hand hard with labour.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: The Milkmaid.

Hands were made for honest labour,

Not to plunder or to steal.

ISAAC WATTS, The Thief.

¹⁸ Let each man render me his bloody hand:

First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 184.

Ferdinand: Here's my hand.

Miranda: And mine, with my heart in it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 39.

And there's a hand, my trusty fiere,

And gie's a hand o' thine.

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne.

¹⁹ The hearts of old gave hands:

But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 46.

²⁰ The gods hear men's hands before their lips.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Althea. See also WORD AND DEED.

³ Yet many hands together make light work.

WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 106. (1401)

Many hands make light work.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife. 1460. (HALLITT, Early Popular Poetry, i, 188.) These are the earliest known uses in English of a proverb common to all languages.

II—Hand: Description

⁴ There is a hand that has no heart in it, there is a claw or paw, a flipper or fin, a bit of wet cloth to take hold of, a piece of unbaked dough on the cook's trencher, a cold clammy thing we recoil from, or greedy clutch with the heat of sin, which we drop as a burning coal. What a scale from the talon to the horn of plenty, is this human palm-leaf! Sometimes it is like a knife-shaped, thin-bladed tool we dare not grasp, or like a poisonous thing we shake off, or unclean member, which, white as it may look, we feel polluted by!

C. A. BARTOL, The Rising Faith: Training.

⁵ Your soft hand is a woman of itself, And mine the man's bared breast she curls inside.

ROBERT BROWNING, Andrea del Sarto.

⁶ Even to the delicacy of their hand There was resemblance, such as true blood wears.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto iv, st. 45.

For through the South the custom still commands

The gentleman to kiss the lady's hands.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto v, st. 105.

⁷ Her hand seemed milk in milk, it was so white.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Of Phyllis.

'Twas a hand White, delicate, dimpled, warm, languid, and bland.

The hand of a woman is often, in youth, Somewhat rough, somewhat red, somewhat graceless, in truth;

Does its beauty refine, as its pulses grow calm, Or as Sorrow has cross'd the life-line in the palm?

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile, Pt. i, canto iii, sec. 14.

⁸ Hands, that the rod of empire might have sway'd,

Or wak'd to ecstasy the living lyre.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 47.

⁹ Pale hands I loved beside the Shalimar, Where are you now? Who lies beneath your spell?

LAURENCE HOPE, Kashmiri Song.

Pale hands, pink-tipped, like lotus buds that float

On those cool waters where we used to dwell, I would have rather felt you round my throat, Crushing out life, than waving me farewell.

LAURENCE HOPE, Kashmiri Song.

¹⁰ Hands of invisible spirits touch the strings Of that mysterious instrument, the soul, And play the prelude of our fate.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student, Act i, sc. 3.

¹¹ His trembling hand had lost the ease, Which marks security to please.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction.

¹² What if this cursed hand Were thicker than itself with brother's blood, Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens To wash it white as snow?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 43.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green one red.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act ii, sc. 2, l. 60.

All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act v, sc. 1, l. 58.

Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart.

SHELLEY, The Cenci, Act v, sc. 2.

¹³ Without the bed her other fair hand was, On the green coverlet; whose perfect white Show'd like an April daisy on the grass, With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 393.

¹⁴ See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand! O, that I were a glove upon that hand, That I might touch that cheek!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act ii, 2, 23.

The white wonder of dear Juliet's hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act iii, 3, 35.

O had the monster seen those lily hands

Tremble like aspen leaves, upon a lute.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, Act ii, 5, 45.

"Adieu," she cried, and waved her lily hand.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

¹⁵ O, that her hand, In whose comparison all whites are ink, Writing their own reproach, to whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
1, l. 55.

She has certainly the finest hand of any woman in the world.

RICHARD STRELL, The Spectator. No. 113. Sir
Roger is speaking of the widow.

HANGING

He who was knotting a halter for his neck, found gold and buried the halter in the treasure's place. But he who had hidden the gold, not finding it, fitted about his neck the halter which he had found.

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xiv.

Three merry boys, and three merry boys,
And three merry boys are we,
As ever did sing in a hempen string
Under the gallows-tree.

BAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Bloody
Brother*. Act iii, sc. 2.

Hanging is too good for him, said Mr.
Cruelty.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.
(1678) The Author's Apology.

Were it not that they are loath to lay out money on a rope, they would be hanged forthwith, and sometimes die to save charges.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 12.

No Indian prince has to his palace
More followers than a thief to the gallows.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 273.

For next to that interesting job,
The hanging of Jack, or Bill, or Bob,
There's nothing so draws a London mob
As the noosing of very rich people.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Dream.

The rope must not be mentioned in the house of a man who has been hanged.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25.

Mention not a halter in the house of him that was hanged.

GEORGE HERRBERT, Jacula Prudentum. LORD
CHESTERFIELD (Letters, 13 June, 1751) quotes the French original, "De ne jamais parler de cordes dans la maison d'un pendu."

A halter made of silk's a halter still.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love in a Riddle. Act ii, sc. 1.

See the hangman when it comes home to him!
DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 76.

Far better hang wrong fier than no fier.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 53.

They hanged a man today. . . . He died as game as if he was wan of th' Christyan martyrs instead iv a thief that'd hit his man wan crack too much. Saint or murderer, 'tis little different whin death comes up face front.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Mr. Dooley in the Hearts of his Countrymen: The Idle Apprentice.

The humorous thief who drank a pot of beer at the gallows blew off the foam because he had heard it was unhealthy.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

Yes, we must, indeed, all hang together, or,
most assuredly, we shall all hang separately.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Retort, to John Hancock, who, in his address to the Continental Congress, just previous to the signing of the Declaration of Independence, had said, "It is too late to pull different ways; the members of the Continental Congress must hang together."

They were suffered to have rope enough till they had haltered themselves.

FULLER, Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 7. (1639)

Give him rope enough and he'll hang himself.
CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 3.

You shall never want rope enough.

RABELAIS, Works: Bk. v, Prologue.

He that's born to be hanged shall never be drowned.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2279.

He hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 1, l. 32.

And naked to the hangman's noose

The morning clocks will ring

A neck God made for other use

Than strangling in a string.

A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad. No. 9.

For they're hangin' Danny Deever, you can hear the Dead March play,

The regiment's in 'ollow square—they're hangin'
him to-day;

They've taken of his buttons off an' cut his stripes away,

An' they're hangin' Danoy Deever in the mornin'.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Danny Deever.

And folks are beginning to think it looks odd,
To choke a poor scamp for the glory of God.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 492.

I will not leave you until I have seen you hanged. (Je ne te quitterai point que je ne t'aie vu pendu.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act iii, sc.
9, l. 18.

I went out to Charing Cross to see Major-General Harrison hanged, drawn, and quartered; which was done there, he looking as cheerful as any man could do in that condition.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 13 Oct., 1660.

1 Go and hang yourself. (Exige, ac suspende te.)
PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 903. (Act iv, sc. 8.)

Get yourself a fine thick rope and hang yourself. (Restim tu tibi cape crassam ac suspende te.)
PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 815. (Act v, sc. 2.)

Go, hang yourselves all!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 135.

Hang yourself, brave Crillon: we have fought at Arques and you were not there; but I love you all the same. (Pends-toi, brave Crillon, nous avons combattu à Arques, et tu n'y étais pas.)

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, Letter, to his friend Crillon, the Ney of the sixteenth century. (VOLTAIRE, Henriade, viii, 109.) But Voltaire, that "inventor of history," changed the king's letter to suit himself, for it was written before Amiens, 20 Sept., 1597, not after Arques in 1589. Crillon had not joined Henry's party at that time. The sentence is engraved on a plaque at the Hotel de Crillon, Paris.

2 Now fitted the halter, now travers'd the cart, And often took leave, but was loth to depart.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Thief and the Cordelier.

Nay, stay, quoth Stringer, when his neck was in the halter.

I—Happiness: Definitions

¹ Happiness does away with ugliness, and even makes the beauty of beauty.

AMIEL, Journal, 3 April, 1865.

² No one praises happiness as one praises justice, but we call it "a blessing," deeming it something higher and more divine than things we praise.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 4.

Felcity is the perfect virtue in a perfect life.

ARISTOTLE. (TRANZENT, Centuries of Meditations.)

³ Happiness is but a name.

ROBERT BURNS, Lines Written in Friers-Carse Hermitage.

⁴ A happy life consists in tranquillity of mind. (In animi securitate vitam beatam.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, sec. 20.

A happy life must be to a great extent a quiet life, for it is only in an atmosphere of quiet that true joy can live.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 67. See also under QUIET.

⁵ To fill the hour—that is happiness; to fill the hour, and leave no crevice for a repentance or an approval.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

Just to fill the hour—that is happiness.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

⁶ I can find no meaning which I can attach to what is termed good, if I take away from it the pleasures obtained by taste, the pleasures which come from listening to music, the charm derived by the eyes from the sight of figures in movement, or other pleasures produced by any of the senses in the whole man.

EPICURUS, Athens, vii, 280. Quoted by Cicero, Tusculanarum Disputationum, iii, 13.

⁷ Whoever does not regard what he has as most ample wealth, is unhappy, though he be master of the world.

EPICURUS, Fragmentis. No. 474.

A man may rule the world and still be unhappy, if he does not feel that he is supremely happy.

SENECA, paraphrasing Epicurus. (Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epis. lx, sec. 21.)

Unblest is he who thinks himself unblest. (Non est beatus, esse se qui non putat.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epis. lx, sec. 21. Quoted from an unknown author.

He is not happy who does not think himself so. PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 984.

No man can enjoy happiness without thinking that he enjoys it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 150.

⁸ Now happiness consists in activity: such is the constitution of our nature: it is a running stream, and not a stagnant pool.

J. M. GOOD, Book of Nature. Ser. iii, lect. 7.

⁹ Happiness is a habit—cultivate it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

The hardest habit of all to break is the terrible habit of happiness.

THEODOSIA GARRISON, The Lake.

¹⁰ Happiness is above all things the calm, glad certainty of innocence.

HENRIK ISEN, Rosmersholm. Act iii.

It is only the spirit of rebellion which craves for happiness in this life. What right have we human beings to happiness?

HENRIK ISEN, Ghosts. Act i.

Man is not born for happiness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iv, p. 206.

We're born to be happy, all of us.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Perfect Lover. Act ii.

¹¹ Happiness is the only good, reason the only torch, justice the only worship, humanity the only religion, and love the only priest.

R. G. INGERSOLL, A Tribute to Eben Ingessoll.

¹² Happiness is not a reward—it is a consequence. Suffering is not a punishment—it is a result.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Christian Religion.

Happiness is the legal tender of the soul.

INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

¹³ Happiness consists in the multiplicity of agreeable consciousness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1765.)

Happiness is not found in self-contemplation; it is perceived only when it is reflected from another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 41.

Happiness is nothing if it is not known, and very little if it is not envied.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 80.

¹⁴ We deem those happy who, from the experience of life, have learned to bear its ills, without being overcome by them.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 20.

¹⁵ To be strong is to be happy!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii, l. 731.

¹⁶ Happiness, to some elation; Is to others, mere stagnation.

AMY LOWELL, Happiness.

GRETIA PALMER, Permanent Marriage.

Happiness and Beauty are by-products.
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

² Happiness is a way-station between too little and too much.

CHANNING POLLOCK, Mr. Moneybags.

³ O happiness! our being's end and aim!
Good, Pleasure, Ease, Content! whate'er thy name,
That something still which prompts th' eternal sigh,

For which we bear to live, or dare to die.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 1.

Happiness is the goal of every normal human being. As it is given to few men to die happy, the best that man can hope and strive and pray for is momentary happiness during life, repeated as frequently as the cards allow.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 6.

⁴ Happiness: a good bank account, a good cook, and a good digestion.

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU.

⁵ Happiness lies in the consciousness we have of it, and by no means in the way the future keeps its promises.

GEORGE SAND, Handsome Lawrence. Ch. 3.

⁶ Happiness is the only sanction of life; where happiness fails, existence remains a mad and lamentable experiment.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 251.

⁷ Happiness is a wine of the rarest vintage, and seems insipid to the vulgar taste.

LOGAN PEARSELL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

⁸ Happiness is added Life, and the giver of Life.

HERBERT SPENCER, Representative Government.

⁹ He is not happy that knoweth not himself happy.

RICHARD TAYLOR, Proverbs. Fo. 51. (1539)

He is happy that knoweth not himself to be otherwise.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1918. (1732)

¹⁰ The happiness of a man consisteth not in having temporal things in abundance, but a moderate competency sufficeth.

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. I, ch. 22. See also under MODERATION.

¹¹ What wisdom, what warning can prevail against gladness? There is no law so strong which a little gladness may not transgress.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 Jan., 1853.

¹² The happiness of man consists in life, and life is in labor.

TOLSTOY, What Is to Be Done? Ch. 38.

¹³ Happiness is the shadow of things past, Which fools shall take for that which is to be.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Night of Foreboding.

There is that in me—I do not know what it is—but I know it is in me. . . .

I do not know it—it is without name—it is a word unsaid;

It is not in any dictionary, utterance, symbol. Something it swings on more than the earth I swing on.

To it the creation is the friend whose embracing awakes me. . . .

It is not chaos or death—it is form, union, plan—it is eternal life—it is Happiness.

Happiness seems made to be shared. (Le bonheur semble fait être partagé.)

CORNEILLE, Notes par Rochefoucauld. Also attributed to Racine.

All who joy would win
Must share it.—Happiness was born a twin.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 172.

The best way to secure future happiness is to be as happy as is rightfully possible to-day.
CHARLES W. ELIOT, The Happy Life.

Human felicity is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen, as by little advantages that occur every day.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

Who is the happiest of men? He who values
the merits of others,

And in their pleasure takes joy, even as though 'twere his own.

GOETHE, Distichs.

¹ Happiness in this world, when it comes, comes incidentally. Make it the object of pursuit, and it leads us a wild-goose chase, and is never attained.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 71 Oct., 1852.

² I stumbled upon happiness once
In a forgotten cove
Between impassable ranges.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 6, l. 73.

It's pretty hard to tell what does bring happiness. Poverty an' wealth have both failed.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 191.

⁴ The happy people are those who are producing something; the bored people are those who are consuming much and producing nothing.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 76.)

The happiest people seem to be those who have no particular cause for being happy except that they are so.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 223.)

⁵ Do you wish never to be sad? Live rightly! (Vis nunquam tristis esse? Recte vive!)

ISIDORUS, Scriptura, xiii, 223.

⁶ How to gain, how to keep, how to recover happiness is in fact for most men at all times the secret motive of all they do, and of all they are willing to endure.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 78.

⁷ Happiness or misery usually go to those who have the most of the one or the other. (Le bonheur ou le malheur vont d'ordinaire à ceux qui ont le plus de l'un ou de l'autre.)

⁸ You have to believe in happiness,
Or happiness never comes.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, You Have to Believe.

⁹ A man's happiness is to do a man's true work. (Εὐτυχία ἀνθρώπου ναὶν τὰ ἴδια ἀνθρώπου.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, 26.

The happiness and unhappiness of the rational social animal depends not on what he feels, but on what he does.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 16.

I sat there hard at work, happy as the day's long.
GEORGE BOURROW, Lavengro. Bk. III, ch. 12.

¹⁰ Fix'd to no spot is Happiness sincere;
Tis nowhere to be found, or ev'rywhere;
Tis never to be bought, but always free.

POPE, Essay on Man. Ep. IV, l. 15.

¹¹ And if thou wouldst be happy, learn to please.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. II, l. 266.

¹² Obviously the right to be happy demands that people should in so far as is humanly possible learn what they wish to know, and exercise the talents and faculties which bring them the most pleasure.

DORA RUSSELL, The Right to Be Happy, p. 126.

¹³ You need never believe that a man can become happy through the unhappiness of another. (Non est quod credas quemquem fieri aliena infelicitate felicem.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Ep. xiv, 67.

¹⁴ We have no more right to consume happiness without producing it than to consume wealth without producing it.

BERNARD SHAW, Candida. Act I.

¹⁵ Ye seek for happiness—alas, the day!
Ye find it not in luxury nor in gold,
Nor in the fame, nor in the envied sway
For which, O willing slaves to Custom old,
Severe taskmistress! ye your hearts have sold.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto xi, st. 17.

¹⁶ Happiness never lays its finger on its pulse.
If we attempt to steal a glimpse of its features it disappears.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamkorp: On Death and the Fear of Dying.

¹⁷ In every part and corner of our life, to lose oneself is to be gainer; to forget oneself is to be happy.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Old Mortality.

¹⁸ Be not glad but when thou hast done well.
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. II, ch. 6.

¹⁹ No man is bless'd by accident or guess;
True wisdom is the price of happiness.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. I, l. 191.

IV—Happiness: The Happy Man

²⁰ 'Twas a jolly old pedagogue, long ago,
Tall and slender, and sallow and dry;
His form was bent, and his gait was slow,
His long thin hair was white as snow,
But a wonderful twinkle shone in his eye.
And he sang every night as he went to bed,
"Let us be happy down here below;

The living should live, though the dead be dead,"

Said the jolly old pedagogue long ago.

GEORGE ARNOLD, The Jolly Old Pedagogue.

1 She was a soft landscape of mild earth,
Where all was harmony, and calm, and quiet,
Luxuriant, budding; cheerful without mirth,
Which, if not happiness, is much more nigh it
Than are your mighty passions.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 53.

2 There is in man a higher than love of happiness;
he can do without happiness, and instead thereof find blessedness.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus: The Everlasting Yea.

3 The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,
And left to Heaven the rest.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Happiest Heart.

The message from the hedge-leaves,
Heed it, whoso thou art;

Under lowly eaves

Lives the happy heart.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Hedge-bird's Message.

4 I do not understand what the man who is happy wants in order to be happier. (Qui beatus est non intelligo quid requirat, ut sit beator.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 8, sec. 23.

5 I've touched the height of human happiness,
And here I fix nil ultra.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Prophetess. Act iv, sc. 6.

6 Happy the man, who, innocent,
Grieves not at illa he can't prevent;
His cliff does with the current glide,
Not puffing pulled against the tide.
He, paddling by the scuffling crowd,
Sees unconcerned life's wager rowed,
And when he can't prevent foul play,
Enjoys the folly of the fray.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 365.

7 The happy man is he that knows the world and cares not for it.

JOSEPH HALL, (INCH, Wit and Wisdom: Preface.)

8 Not him who possesses much, would one rightly call the happy man, but him who knows how to use with wisdom the blessings of the gods, and to endure hard poverty, who fears dishonor worse than death, and is not afraid to die for cherished friends or fatherland.
(Non possidentem multa vocaveris
Recte beatum; rectius occupat

Nomen beati, qui deorum
Muneribus sapienter uti

Duramque callet pauperiem pati
Peiusque leto flagitium timet,
Non ille pro caris amicis
Aut patria timidus perire.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 45.

9 Now the heart is so full that a drop overfills
it,

We are happy now because God wills it.

LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude.

10 Some have much, and some have more,
Some are rich, and some are poor,
Some have little, some have less,
Some have not a cent to bless
Their empty pockets, yet possess
True riches in true happiness.

JOHN OKENEHAM, True Happiness.

11 Happy the man, who, void of cares and strife,
In silken or in leathern purse retains
A Splendid Shilling.

JOHN PHILIPS, The Splendid Shilling.

12 The blest today is as completely so
As who began a thousand years ago.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 75.

Heav'n to mankind impartial we confess,
If all are equal in their happiness:
But mutual wants this happiness increase;
All Nature's difference keeps all Nature's peace.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 53.

13 That man is happy whom nothing makes less strong than he is; he keeps to the heights, leaning upon none but himself; for one who sustains himself by any prop may fall.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xcii, sec. 2.

14 Mankind are always happy for having been happy; so that if you make them happy now, you make them happy twenty years hence
by the memory of it.

SYDNEY SMITH, Lectures: Benevolent Affections. See also under REMEMBRANCE.

15 A happy man or woman is a better thing to find than a five-pound note.

R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers.

16 If I have faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face; . . .
Lord, thy most pointed pleasure take,
And stab my spirit broad awake;
Or, Lord, if too obdurate I,
Choose thou, before that spirit die,
A piercing pain, a killing sin,
And to my dead heart run them in!

R. L. STEVENSON, The Celestial Surgeon.

¹
We think no greater bliss than such
To be as be we would,
When blessed none but such as be
The same as be they should.
WILLIAM WARNER, Albion's England. Bk. x,
ch. 59, st. 68.

V.—Happiness: The Greatest Happiness of the Greatest Number

²
That action is best which procures the greatest happiness for the greatest numbers; and that worst, which, in like manner, occasions misery.

FRANCIS HUTCHESON, Inquiry into the Original of Our Ideas of Beauty and Virtue:
Pt. ii, sec. 3, *An Inquiry Concerning Moral
Good and Evil*. (1720)

³
The greatest happiness of the greatest number. (La massima felicità divisa nel maggior numero.)

CESARE DI BONESANA BECCARIA, *Trattato dei
Deitti e Delle Pene*: Introduction. (1764)

⁴
Priestley was the first (unless it was Beccaria) who taught my lips to pronounce this sacred truth—that the greatest happiness of the greatest number is the foundation of morals and legislation.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Works. Vol. x, p. 142.
(1830) The real author of the phrase was Francis Hutcheson, as given above. Bentham was responsible for its general introduction into literature, never losing an opportunity to enforce it as the basic principle of legislation and morality.

It is the greatest good to the greatest number which is the measure of right and wrong.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Works. Vol. x, p. 142.

⁵
That truth once known, all else is worthless lumber;

The greatest pleasure of the greatest number.
BULWER-LYTTON, King Arthur. Bk. viii, l. 70.

⁶
No one can be perfectly happy till all are happy.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 16. Last sentence.

The production of the greatest happiness . . . is the true end of morality.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Ch. 31, sec. 2.

⁷
The greatest happiness of the greatest number is best secured by a prudent consideration for Number One.

BULWER-LYTTON, Kenselm Chillingly.

VI.—Happiness: Near not Far

⁸
Wherefore, O mortal men, why seek you for your felicity abroad, which is placed within yourselves? (Quid igitur o mortales extra petitis intra uos positam felicitatem?)

BORTHIVS, Philosophie Consolationis. Bk. ii,
sec. 4, l. 72.

⁹
To enjoy true happiness we must travel into a very far country, and even out of ourselves; for the pearl we seek for is not to be found in the Indian but in the Emphyrean ocean.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt.
ii, sec. 11.

¹⁰
If happiness hae not her seat
An' centre in the breast,

We may be wise, or rich, or great,
But never can be blest.

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to Davie. St. 5.

If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast this jewel lies,

And they are fools who roam.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside.

Thus happiness depends, as Nature shows,
Less on exterior things than most suppose.
COWPER, Table Talk, l. 246.

¹¹
Still to ourselves in every place consign'd,
Our own felicity we make or find.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 431.

¹² Happiness grows at our own firesides, and is not to be picked in strangers' gardens.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Happiness.

¹³
The foolish man seeks happiness in the distance;

The wise grows it under his feet.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, The Wise.

¹⁴
The will of a man is his happiness. (Des Menschen Wille, das ist sein Glück.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Lager, vii, 25.

¹⁵
Man is the artificer of his own happiness.
THORAU, Journal, 21 Jan., 1838.

¹⁶
True happiness is to no spot confined.
If you preserve a firm and constant mind,

'Tis here, 'tis everywhere.

J. H. WYNNE, History of Ireland.

VII.—Happiness: Its Dangers

¹⁷
What thing so good which not some harm
may bring?

Even to be happy is a dangerous thing.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Darius: Chorus.

¹⁸
Real happiness is cheap enough, yet how dearly we pay for its counterfeit.

HOSRA BALLOU, M.S. Sermons.

¹⁹
There comes
For ever something between us and what
We deem our happiness.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546); GREENE, Works, ii, 28. (1583); BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 1254. (1663); FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, May, 1753.

Haste makes waste, and waste makes want, and want makes strife between the good man and his wife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 151. (1678)

Haste and wisdom are things far odd.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2.

Ye make such tastings

As approve you to be none of the hastings.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

They are none of the hastings, who being slow and slack, go about business with no agility.

FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. iii, p. 243.

Man is created of hastiness.

The Koran. Ch. 21.

Haste is of the devil.

Alleged to be from the Koran, but not to be found there

Hasty and adventurous schemes are at first view flattering, in execution difficult, and in the issue disastrous.

LIVY, History. Bk. xxiv, ch. 32.

Nothing can be done at once hastily and prudently.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 557.

Back to thy punishment,
False fugitive, and to thy speed add wings.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 699.

Stand not upon the order of your going,

But go at once.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 118.

Too great haste leads us to error. (Le trop de promptitude à l'erreur nous expose.)

MOÏSÈS, Sganarelle. Sc. 12.

Stay a while, that we may make an end the sooner.

SIR AMYAS PAULET, when he saw too much haste in any matter. (FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms, No. 76.)

Ease and speed in doing a thing do not give the work lasting solidity or exactness of beauty.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Pericles.

Haste is slow. (Festinatio tarda est.)

Unless we hasten, we shall be left behind.

(Nisi properamus, relinquemur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epls. cviii, 24.

Celerity is never more admired

Than by the negligent.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 25.

This sweaty haste

Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 77.

Helter-skelter have I rode to thee,
And tidings do I bring.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 99.

Then, horn for horn, they stretch an' strive;

Deil tak the hindmost, on they drive.

BURNS, Address to a Haggis. St. 4.

Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels

And fly, like thought, from them to me again.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 174.

Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act iii, sc. 2, l. 101.

Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 58.

As swift as swallow flies.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 172.

We must do something, and i' the heat.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 312.

Not so hot.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 66.

Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure;

Like doth quit like, and measure still for measure.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, Act v,

sc. 1, l. 415.

Yea, marry, that's the efiest way.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 58.

The cause craves haste.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 185.

He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 36.

Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 3,

l. 94.

Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 6,
l. 15.

1 Yet, wilful man, he never would forecast
How many mischiefs should ensue his heedless haste.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. I, canto III, st. 34.

2 Allow time and moderate delay; haste manages all things badly. (Da spatium, tenuem moram; mala cuncta ministrat Impetus.)

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. x, l. 704.

3 Hasty climbers quickly catch a fall.
UNKNOWN, The Play of Stuckley, l. 710.

4 And quickly hied he down the stair;
Of fifteen steps he made but three.
UNKNOWN, Young Brichan and Susie Pye.

HAT

5 "So," he said, "by the same hat
I can know if my wife be bad
To me by any other man;
If my flowers ever fade or fall,
Then doth my wife me wrong with all,
As many a woman can.
ADAM OF COBSHAM, The Wright's Chaste Wife.

6 So Britain's monarch once uncovered sat,
While Bradshaw bullied in a broad-brimmed
hat.

JAMES BRAMSTON, Man of Taste. The reference is to John Bradshaw, who presided at the trial of Charles I.

It is the custom here for but one man to be allowed to stand covered.

CHARLES II, removing his hat when he saw that William Penn, during an audience, remained covered. Penn's reply is said to have been,
"Friend Charles, keep thy hat on!"

7 Here's your hat, what's your hurry?
BARTLEY C. CORTELLI. Title and refrain of popular song. (1904)

8 A hat not much the worse for wear.
COWPER, John Gilpin. St. 46.

Far happier is thy head that wears
That hat without a crown.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode: Clapham Academy.

9 "If I knew as little of life as that, I'd eat my hat and swallow the buckle whole," said the clerical gentleman.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 42.

10 Pull down thy hat on the windy side.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3978.

11 I live by pulling off the hat.
MATTHEW GREEN, On Barclay's Apology.

12 The hat is the ultimatum moriens of respectability.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 8.

Virtue may flourish in an old cravat,
But man and nature scorn the shocking hat.
O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 452.

13 It cannot be,—it is,—it is,—
A hat is going round.

O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders.

14 Come, my old hat, my steps attend!
However wags may sneer and scoff,
My castor still shall be my friend,
For I'll not be a caster off. . . .
Black, rusty grey, devoid of pelt,
A shocking shape or beaten flat,
Still there are joys that may be felt
All round my hat, all round my hat
THOMAS HOOD, All Round My Hat. St. 1.
All round my hat I wore a green ribbon.
UNKNOWN, refrain of song, c. 1830. "Who's your hatter?" "What, the same old hat?"
"What a shocking bad hat!" were English jokes of the same period.

15 The Quaker loves an ample brim
A hat that bows to no salaam;
And dear the beaver is to him
As if it never made a dam.
THOMAS HOOD, All Round My Hat. St. 3.
It's odd how hats expand their brims as riper years invade,
As if when life had reached its noon it wanted them for shade!
O. W. HOLMES, Nux Postcænatice. St. 3.

16 A sermon on a hat: "The hat, my boy, the hat, whatever it may be, is in itself nothing —makes nothing, goes for nothing; but, be sure of it, everything in life depends upon the cock of the hat." For how many men—we put it to your own experience, reader—have made their way through the thronging crowds that beset fortune, not by the innate worth and excellence of their hats, but simply, as Sampson Piebald has it, by 'the cock of their hats? The cock's all."
DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Romance of a Keyhole. Ch. 3.

17 As with my hat upon my head
I walk'd along the Strand,
I there did meet another man
With his hat in his hand.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Johnsoniana. A parody on Percy's Hermil of Warkworth.

18 bumped off the running board of existence to furnish plumage
for a lady's hat

13 And every shepherd tells his tale
Under the hawthorn in the dale.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 67

Gives not the hawthorn-bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep
Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 42.

14 In hawthorn-time the heart grows light.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. I.

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL

15 How paltry, how shrivelled and shrunken does the swallow-tail culture of the literary snob appear in contrast with the provinciality which invests the works of Hawthorne with the swift passion of New England summers.
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS. (WIGGINS, Life, p. 148.)

16 There in seclusion and remote from men,
The wizard hand bes cold,
Which at its topmost speed let fall the pen,
And left the tale half told.

Ah, who shall lift that wand of magic power,
And the lost clew regain?

The unfinished window in Aladdin's tower
Unfinished must remain!
LONGFELLOW, Hawthorne. Hawthorne died with his last romance unfinished.

17 There is Hawthorne, with genius so shrinking and rare
That you hardly at first see the strength that is there;

A frame so robust, with a nature so sweet,
So earnest, so graceful, and so fleet,
Is worth a descent from Olympus to meet
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 997.

His strength is so tender, his wildness so meek,

That a suitable parallel sets one to seek,--- . . .
When Nature was shaping him, clay was not granted

For making so full-sized a man as she wanted,
So, to fill out her model, a little she spared
From some finer-grained stuff for a woman prepared,

And she could not have hit a more excellent plan
For making him fully and perfectly man.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1005.

HEART

I—Heart: Definitions

⁶ In each human heart are a tiger, a pig, an ass, and a nightingale. Diversity of character is due to their unequal activity.

ANDREW BIRCH, The Devil's Dictionary.

⁷ The heart has such an influence over the understanding, that it is worth while to engage it in our interest. It is the whole of women, who are guided by nothing else; and it has so much to say, even with men, and the ablest men too, that it commonly triumphs in every struggle with the understanding.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

⁸ The heart of the wise, like a mirror, should reflect all objects, without being sullied by any.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

For the human heart is the mirror

HEART

Of the things that are near and far;
Like the wave that reflects in its bosom
The flower and the distant star.

ALICE CARY, The Time to Be.

⁹ The heart of a man is of itself but little, yet great things cannot fill it.

THOMAS DEKKER, Four Birds of Noah's Ark. (1609)

The heart is a small thing, but desireth great matters. It is not sufficient for a kite's dinner, yet the whole world is not sufficient for it.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems: Bk. i, Hugo de Anima. (1635)

¹⁰ The heart asks pleasure first,
And then, excuse from pain;
And then, those little anodynes
That deaden suffering.

And then, to go to sleep;

And then, if it should be

The will of its Inquisitor,

The liberty to die.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. I, No. 9.

¹¹ Who hath sailed about the world of his own heart, sounded each creek, surveyed each corner, but that there still remains therein much terra incognita to himself?

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 34.

¹² The alarum watch, your pulse.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 36.

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And make as healthful music.

¹³ The heart of man is made to reconcile contradictions.

DAVID HUME, Essays: Parties of Great Britain.

¹⁴ The heart hath its own memory, like the mind,
And in it are enshrined

The precious keepsakes, into which is wrought
The giver's loving thought.

LONGFELLOW, From My Arm-Chair. St. 12.

¹⁵ For all earth's width of waters is a span,
And their convulsed existence mere repose,
Matched with the unstable heart of man,
Shoreless in wants, mist-girt in all it knows,
Open to every wind of sect or clan,
And sudden-passionate in ebbs and flows.

J. R. LOWELL, Ode for the Fourth of July. 1876. Pt. iv, sec. 1.

The heart is like an instrument whose strings
Steal nobler music from Life's many frets:
The golden threads are spun thro' Suffering's fire,

Wherewith the marriage-robes for heaven are woven:

And all the rarest hues of human life

Take radiance, and are rainbow'd out in tears.
GERALD MASSEY, Wedded Love.

¹ The human heart is like a millstone in a mill:
when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds and bruises the wheat to flour; if you put no wheat, it still grinds on, but then 'tis itself it grinds and wears away.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table Talk: Of Temptation and Tribulation.

A mill-stone and the human heart are driven ever round;

If they have nothing else to grind, they must themselves be ground.

FRIEDRICH VON LOCAU, Sinnegedichte. (Longfellow, tr.)

Something the heart must have to cherish,
Must love, and joy, and sorrow learn;
Something with passion clasp, or perish,
And in itself to ashes burn.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion: Motto. Bk. ii. Longfellow states this to be a translation of a German poem, Forsaken, but does not give the author.

¹⁸

He hath the sore which no man healeth,

The which is known as lack of heart.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 334.

¹⁹

"With every pleasing, ev'ry prudent part,
Say, what can Chloe want?"—She wants a heart.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 159.

²⁰

Ward has no heart, they say; but I deny it;—

He has a heart, and gets his speeches by it.
SAMUEL ROGERS, On John William Ward.

²¹

Malebranche declares that not a soul is left;
We humbly think that there are still some hearts.

(Malebranche dirait qu'il n'y plus une âme;
Nous pensons humblement qu'il reste encor des cœurs.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Chanticleer: Prelude.

XIV—Heart and Head

²²

Can art, alas! or genius, guide the head
Where truth and freedom from the heart are fled?

Can lesser wheels repeat their native stroke,
When the prime function of the soul is broke?

MARK AKENSIDE, Epistle to Curio, l. 265.

²³

A faithless heart betrays the head unsound.
JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iv, l. 284.

²⁴

To the subtle, contriving head.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Empedocles on Etna. Act ii, l. 90.

²⁵

My heart beat in my brain.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 961.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Disowned. Ch. 33.

² What hand and brain went ever paired?
What heart alike conceived and dared?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Last Ride Together.

³ His madness was not of the head, but heart.
BYRON, Lara. Canto i, sec. 18.

For his was error of head, not heart.

THOMAS MOORE, The Irish Slave, l. 45.

⁴ Men, as well as women, are much oftener led by their hearts than by their understandings.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Jan., 1748.

Nine times in ten, the heart governs the understanding.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 May, 1749.

⁵ And a man may still lift up his head,
But nevermore his heart.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Ballad of the White Horse.

⁶ His heart runs away with his head.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Who Wants a Guinea. Act i, sc. 1.

⁷ Here the heart
May give a useful lesson to the head.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 85.

⁸ I love thee for a heart that's kind—

¹³ The head is always the dupe of the heart.
(L'esprit est toujours la dupe de cœur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 102.

Monsieur de Rochefoucauld, in his Maxims, says, that l'esprit est souvent la dupe du cœur. If he had said, instead of souvent, presque toujours [almost always], I fear he would have been nearer the truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

Chesterfield had the maxim wrong, for La Rochefoucauld wrote "toujours."

¹⁴ It is the heart, and not the brain,
That to the highest doth attain.

LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship, l. 124.

¹⁵ Where the mind is past hope, the heart is past shame.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 341. (1580)

¹⁶ Better to have the poet's heart than brain,
Feeling than song.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Within and Without. Pt. iii, sc. 9, l. 30.

¹⁷ The heart has its reasons, which reason does not know. (Le cœur a ses raisons, que la raison connaît pas.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. xvii, No. 5.

The heart has arguments with which the understanding is not acquainted.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. Quoted.

The heart has eyes that the brain knows nothing of.

¹⁸ A brain of feathers, and a heart of lead.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 44.

¹⁹ The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 47.

²⁰ If wrong our hearts, our heads are right in vain.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 281.

HEAVEN

See also Paradise. For Heaven in the sense of sky, see Sky

I—Heaven: Definition and Description

²¹ Where imperfection ceaseth, heaven begins.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water.

Is Heaven a place where pearly streams
Glide over silver sand?

Like childhood's rosy dazzling dreams

Of some far faery land?

Is Heaven a clime where diamond dew

Glitter on fadeless flowers?

And mirth and music ring aloud

From amaranthine bowers?

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Alcove and Garden. The next line is, "Ah no; not such, not such is Heaven!"

²² Spend in pure converse our eternal day;
Think each in each, immediately wise;
Learn all we lacked before; hear, know, and

say

What this tumultuous body now denies;

And feel, who have laid our groping hands
away;

And see, no longer blinded by our eyes.
ROBERT BROOKE, Sonnet.

1
Earth breaks up, time drops away,
In flows heaven, with its new day.
ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Sec. 10.

2
Heaven means to be one with God.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. (FARRAR, What Heaven Is.)

3
He showed me like a master
That one rose makes a gown;
That looking up to Heaven
Is merely looking down.

NATHALIA CRANE, My Husbands.

Hence, Heaven looks down on earth with all her eyes.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 1094.

4
I never spoke with God,
Nor visited in heaven;
Yet certain am I of the spot
As if the chart were given.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iv, No. 17.

5
Who has not found the heaven below
Will fail of it above.
God's residence is next to mine,
His furniture is love.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 100.

The heaven of poetry and romance still lies around us and within us.

LONGFELLOW, Drift-Wood: Twice-Told Tales.

I know not where lies Eden-land;
I only know 'tis like unto
God's kingdom, ever right at hand—
Ever right here in reach of you.

JOAQUIN MILLER, With Love to You and Yours. Pt. iv, sec. 12.

6
And so upon this wise I prayed,—
Great Spirit, give to me
A heaven not so large as yours,
But large enough for me.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 39.

How vast is heaven? Is it will fit
In any space you give to it . . .
So broad—it takes in all things true;
So narrow—it can hold but you.

Where tempests never beat nor billows roar.
COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture. (1798) Misquoting Garth.

8
I hear thee speak of the better land,
Thou callest its children a happy band;
Mother! oh, where is that radiant shore?

Shall we not seek it, and weep no more?

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Better Land.

Olympus, the abode of the gods, that stands fast forever. Neither is it shaken by winds nor ever wet with rain, nor does snow fall upon it, but the air is outspread clear and cloudless, and over it hovers a radiant white-dness.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 42.

10
Heaven is largely a matter of digestion, and digestion is mostly a matter of mind.

ELBERT HUBBARD, *A Thousand and One
Epigrams*, p. 34.

11
There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest.

Old Testament: Job, iii, 17.

And the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

TENNYSON, The May Queen. Last line.

12
In my father's house are many mansions.

New Testament: John, xiv, 2.

Nearer my Father's house,
Where the many mansions be,
Nearer the great white throne,
Nearer the crystal sea.

PHOEBE CARY, Nearer Home.

Therefore will I wait patiently,
Trusting, where all God's mansions be,
There hath been one prepared for me.

PHOEBE CARY, Many Mansions. St. 46.

No, not cold beneath the grasses,
Not close-walled within the tomb;
Rather in our Father's mansion,
Living in another room.

ROBERT FREEMAN, In My Father's House.

When I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies,
I'll bid farewell to every fear,
And wipe my weeping eyes.

ISAAC WATTS, *When I Can Read My Title
Clear*.

And when Booth halted by the curb for prayer

He saw his Master through the flag-filled air.
Christ came gently with a robe and crown
For Booth the soldier, while the throng knelt down.

He saw King Jesus. They were face to face,
And he knelt a-weeping in that holy place.
Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb?

VACHEL LINDSAY, *General William Booth
Enters into Heaven*.

15
We see but dimly through the mists and vapors;

Amid these earthly damps

What seem to us but sad, funeral tapers
May be heaven's distant lamps.

LONGFELLOW, Renunciation. St. 4.

¹ Heaven to me's a fair blue stretch of sky,
Earth's jest a dusty road.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Vagabond.

² What if Earth
Be but the shadow of Heav'n, and things

Each to other like, more than on earth is thought?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 574.

³ Heav'n open'd wide
Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound,
On golden hinges moving.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 205.

God said, "Be light"—and light was on the grave!

No more alone to sage and hero given,
Ope for all life the impartial gates of Heaven!

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iv, sec. 2.

When Christ ascended
Triumphantly, from star to star,
He left the gates of heaven ajar.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii, sc. 2.

⁴ There is a world above,
Where parting is unknown;
A whole eternity of love,
Form'd for the good alone;
And faith beholds the dying here
Translated to that happier sphere.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Friends.

⁵ A Persian's Heav'n is easily made,
'Tis but black eyes and lemonade.

THOMAS MOORE, Intercepted Letters. No. vi, l. 32.

In heavenly spirits to these Creatures base?
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 8, st. 1.

¹² Could we but know
The land that ends our dark, uncertain travel.

E. C. STEDMAN, The Undiscovered Country.

For if, beyond the shadow and the sleep,
A place there be for souls without a stain,
Where peace is perfect, and delight more deep
Than seas or skies that change and shine
again,

There none of all unsullied souls that live
May hold a surer station.

SWINBURNE, In Memory of John William Inghold. St. 24.

^{12a} Heaven is such that all who have lived well,
of whatever religion, have a place there.

SWEDENBORG, Divine Providence. Sec. 330.

¹³ O world invisible, we view thee:
O world intangible, we touch thee,
O world unknowable, we know thee,
Inapprehensible, we clutch thee!

¹⁴ So all we know of what they do above
Is that they happy are, and that they love.

EDMUND WALLER, Upon the Death of My Lady Rich, l. 75.

For all we know
Of what the blessed do above
Is, that they sing, and that they love.

EDMUND WALLER, While I Listen to Thy Voice, l. 10.

What know we of the blest above
But that they sing and that they love?

WORDSWORTH, Scene on the Lake of Brients,

l. 1. Wordsworth puts this couplet in quotation marks as an acknowledgment of his indebtedness to Waller.

¹⁵ There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign;
Infinite day excludes the night,
And pleasures banish pain.

ISAAC WATTS, There Is a Land.

¹⁶ As much of heaven is visible as we have eyes

WILLIAM WINTER, The Actor and His Duty: Address, 4 June, 1889.

¹⁷ Heaven lies about us in our infancy.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 5.

Infancy: The period of our lives when, according to Wordsworth, "Heaven lies about us." The world begins lying about us pretty soon afterward.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

Not only around our infancy
Doth heaven with all its splendora lie;
Daily, with souls that cringe and plot,

We Sinns climb and know it not.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt. i. Prelude.

The gates of heaven are so easily found when we are little, and they are always standing open to let children wander in.

J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy, p. 52.

It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy,
To know I'm farther off from heaven
Than when I was a boy.

Heav'n would no bargain for its blessings drive.

DRYDEN, Astrea Redux, l. 137.

Heaven is a cheap purchase, whatever it cost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

For a cap and bells our lives we pay,
Bubbles we buy with a whole soul's tasking:
'Tis heaven alone that is given away,
'Tis only God may be had for the asking.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude.

Heaven without good society cannot be heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Heaven was not heaven if Phaoon was not there.

R. M. MILNES, A Dream of Sappho.

Hello, Central! give me heaven,
For my mamma's there.

III—Heaven: Its Distance

All places are distant from heaven alike.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 4.

The way to heaven out of all places is of like length and distance.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Utopia.

Nothing must part them whom God hath joined, and the way to Heaven is as near in the Holy Land (if not nearer) as in England or Spain.

QUEEN ELEANOR, wife of Edward I., insisting on accompanying her husband to the Holy Land. (CAMDEN, Remains, 283.)

The road to heaven lies as near by water as by land.

FRIAR ELSTOWE, when threatened with drowning by the Earl of Essex in 1532. (JOHN STOW, Annales of England, p. 562, 1580.)

We are as near to Heaven by sea as by land.

SIR HUMPHREY GILBERT. There is a legend that these words, uttered by Gilbert, were heard on board his companion ship, the Hind, just before his own ship, the Squirrel, disappeared among the icebergs off the Azores in 1583.

He sat upon the deck,

The Book was in his hand;

"Do not fear! Heaven is as near,"

He said, "by water as by land!"

LONGFELLOW, Sir Humphrey Gilbert.

¹ Heaven is far, the world is nigh.
JOHN GOWAN, Confessio Amantis: Prologue,
l. 261.

² God, to remove His Ways from human sense, Plac'd Heav'n from earth so far, that earthly sight

If it presume, might err in things too high,
And no advantage gain.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 119.

Heav'n is for thee too high
To know what passes there; be lowly wise:
Think only what concerns thee and thy being;
Dream not of other worlds, what creatures

there
Live, in what state, condition, or degree,
Contented that thus far hath been reveal'd
Not of earth only, but of highest Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 172.

IV—Heaven: Abraham's Bosom

³ Now he lives in Abraham's bosom. . . . For what other place is there for such a soul?

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. ix, sec. 3.

⁴ With whom there is no place of toil, no burning heat, no piercing cold, nor any briars there . . . this place we call the Bosom of Abraham.

JOSEPHUS, Discourse to the Greeks concerning Hades.

⁵ Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom.

BERNARD OF CLUNY, *Hors Novissima: Urbs
Syon Aurea*. (John Mason Neale, tr.)

Jerusalem the Golden!

I toil on day by day;

Heart-sore each night with longing,

I stretch my hands and pray,

That mid thy leaves of healing

My soul may find her nest;

Where the wicked cease from troubling,

And the weary are at rest!

GERALD MASSEY, Jerusalem the Golden.

¹⁵ Men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiv, 4.

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which

God hath prepared for them that love him.

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, ii, 9.

Eye hath not seen it, my gentle boy!

Ear hath not heard its deep songs of joy;

Dreams cannot picture a world so fair—

Sorrow and death may not enter there;

Time doth not breathe on its fadeless bloom,

For beyond the clouds, and beyond the tomb,

It is there, it is there, my child!

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Grace of the Way.

¹⁹
But I account it worth
All pangs of fair hopes crost—
All loves and honors lost,—
To gain the heavens, at cost
Of losing earth.
THOMAS TILTON, Sir Marmaduke's Musings.

1 Of this blest man let this just praise be given,
Heaven was in him before he was in heaven.
IZAACK WALTON, Written in Dr. Richard Sibbes' "Returning Backslider."

Earth is less fragrant now and heaven more sweet.

SIR WILLIAM WATSON, A Maiden's Epitaph.

3 No man must go to heaven who hath not sent his heart thither before.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, 66.

4 One eye on death, and one full fix'd on heaven.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 838.

5 Jerusalem, my happy home,
Would God I were in thee!

Would God my woes were at an end,
Thy joys that I might see!

VII—Heaven and Hell

6 As high as Heaven, as deep as Hell.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act iv, sc. 1.

7 There is no Heaven, there is no Hell; these be the dreams of baby minds;
Tools of the wily Fetisheer, to 'fright the fools his cunning blinds.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 1.

8 Deep in yon cave Honorius long did dwell,
In hope to merit heaven by making earth a hell.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 20.

9 'Tis not where we lie, but whence we fell;
The loss of heaven's the greatest pain in hell.

CALDERON, Adventures of Five Hours. Act v. (Tuke, tr.)

To appreciate heaven well

'Tis good for a man to have some fifteen minutes of hell.

WILL CARLETON, Gone With a Handsomer Man.

10 Not less but more than Dante, we know for certain that there is a heaven and a hell—a heaven, when a good deed has been done, a hell, in the dark heart able no longer to live openly.

EDWARD DOWDEN, Studies in Literature, p. 117.

11 Here we may reign secure; and in my choice
To reign is worth ambition, though in Hell:
Better to reign in Hell, than serve in Heav'n.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 261. (1663)

Now forasmuch as I was an Angel of Light, it was the Will of Wisdom to confine me to Darkness, and make me Prince thereof; so that I, that could not obey in Heaven, might command in Hell; and believe me, I had rather rule within my dark domain than to rehabilit Cæsum Imperium, and there live in subjection under check, a slave of the Most High.

ANTHONY STAFFORD, Niobe. (1611)

12 Beholding heaven, and feeling hell.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.

13 Men have fiendishly conceived a heaven only to find it insipid, and a hell to find it ridiculous.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 278.

14 I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well.

SILAKESPLARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act II, sc. 1, l. 243.

14a Heaven is doing good from good-will; hell is doing evil from ill-will.

SWEDENBORG, Arcana Cælestia. Ser. 4776.

Hell and heaven are near man, yea, in him; and every man after death goes to that hell or that heaven in which he was, as to his spirit, during his abode in the world.

SWEDENBORG, Arcana Cælestia. Ser. 8918.

15 The fear of hell, or aiming to be blest,
Savours too much of private interest
This moved not Moses, nor the zealous Paul,
Who for their friends abandoned soul and all.

EDMUND WALLER, Of Divine Love. Canto ii.

16 How do I pity those that dwell

Where ignorance and darkness reign!

They know no heaven—they fear no hell—
That endless joy—that endless pain

ISAAC WATTS, Praise for Birth in a Christian Land.

17 Time flies, death urges, knells call, Heaven invites, Hell threatens.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 292.

HELEN OF TROY

18 He flung the sword away,
And kissed her feet, and knelt before her there.

The perfect Knight before the perfect Queen.

RUPERT BROOKE, Meneclaus and Helen.

So Meneclaus nagged; and Helen cried;

And Paris slept on by Scamander side.

RUPERT BROOKE, Meneclaus and Helen.

19 And, like another Helen, fired another Troy.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 150.

20 Helen's lips are drifting dust;

Ilion is consumed with rust.

F. L. KNOWLES, Love Triumphant.

¹ Was this the face that launch'd a thousand ships,
And burnt the topless towers of Ilium?
Sweet Helen, make me immortal with a kiss.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, l. 1328.

² Though Helen's lips are dust
The kisses of her lips
Must burn the towers, and must Still launch the thousand ships. . . .
O passion of wisdom, this (Helen held it for such):
You cannot unkill that kiss,
You cannot untouch that touch.
FRANCIS MEYNELL, Pemance.

³ The fight for Helen still goes on;
There topple down to dust
A hundred Troys each day; that rose
Survives the gust.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Heredity.

⁴ Helen's cheek, but not her heart.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act iii, sc. 2, 153.
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. liii.

⁵ The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida: Prol., l. 8.
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, Act ii, sc. 2, l. 81.

⁶ You will never know what Helen said to Paris,
You have lost Egypt though you saved your ships.
MURIEL STUART, The Old Saint.

⁷ A shudder in the loins engenders there
The broken wall, the burning roof and tower
And Agamemnon dead.
WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS, Leda. Helen was the daughter of Leda and Jupiter disguised as a swan.

⁸ Hell is the wrath of God—His hate of sin.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Hell, l. 194.
⁹ A vast, unbottom'd, boundless pit,
Fill'd fou o' lowin' brunstone,
Wha's ragin' flame an' scorchin' heat,
Wad melt the hardest whunstone.
BURNS, The Holy Fair. St. 22.

When frae my mither's womb I fell,
Thou might hae plung'd me deep in Hell,
To gnash my gums, and weep, and wail,
In burnin' lakes,
Whar damned devils rear and yell,
Chain'd to their stakes.
BURNS, Holy Willie's Prayer. St. 4.

¹⁰ There is io hell a place stone-built through-out,
Called Malebolge, of an iron hue,
Like to the wall that circles it about.
(Loco è inferno detto Malebolge,
Tutto di pietra e di color ferrigno,
Come la cerchia che d' intorno il volge.)

¹³ Into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched Where their worm dieth not.
New Testament: Mark, ix, 43, 44.

¹⁴ Hell hath no limits, nor is circumscrib'd
In one self-place; for where we are is hell;
And where hell is, there must we ever be;
And to conclude, when all the world dissolves,
And every creature shall be purified,
All places shall be hell that are not heaven.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Faustus, l. 553.

¹⁵ A dungeon horrible on all sides round
As one great furnace flam'd yet from those flames

No light, but rather darkness visible,
Serv'd only to discover sights of woe,
Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace

And rest can never dwell, hope never comes
That comes to all, but torture without end.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 61.

A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog
Betwixt Damietta and Mount Casius old,
Where armies whole have sunk: the parching air
Burns froze, and cold performs th' effect of fire.
Thither by harpy-footed Furies ha'd,
At certain revolutions, all the damn'd
Are brought, and feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
From beds of raging fire to starve in ice
Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine
Immovable, infix'd, and frozen round,
Periods of time, thence hurried back to fire.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 592.
O'er many a frozen, many a fiery Alp,

Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens, and shades of death.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 620.

On a sudden open fly
With impetuous recoil and jarring sound
Th' infernal doors, and on their hinges grate
Harsh thunder, that the lowest bottom shook
Of Erebus.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 879.

¹ Hell is both sides of the tomb, and a devil may be respectable and wear good clothes.

CHARLES H. PARKHURST, Sermons: The Pharisee's Prayer.

² I see a brimstone sea of boiling fire,
And fiends, with knotted whips of flaming wire
Torturing poor souls, that gnash their teeth
in vain,
And gnaw their flame-tormented tongues for pain.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iii, emb. 14.

³ It doesn't matter what they preach,
Of high or low degree;
The old Hell of the Bible

Is Hell enough for me.

FRANK L. STANTON, Hell.

⁴ Hell itself may be contained within the compass

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 19 Dec., 1838.

⁵ In the deepest pits of 'Ell,
Where the worst defaulters dwell (Charcoal devils used as fuel as you require
'em),

There's some lovely coloured rays,
Pyrotechnical displays,
But you can't expect the burning to admire
'em!

EDGAR WALLACE, Nature Fails: L'Envoi.

⁶ There is a dreadful hell,
And everlasting pains;
Where sinners must with devils dwell
In darkness, fire, and chains.

ISAAC WATTS, Heaven and Hell.

⁷ Pale Disease dwells there, and sad Old Age, and Fear, and Famine persuading to evil, and hateful Want. (Pallentesque habitant Morbi, tristisque Senectus, Et Metus, et malesuada Fames, ac turpis Egestas.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 275.

At Orcus' portal hold their lair
Wild Sorrow and avenging Care;
And pale Diseases cluster there,
And pleasureless Decay,
Dour Penury, and Fears that kill,
And Hunger, counsellor of ill.

VERGIL, Æneid, vi, 275. (Conington, tr.)

⁸ That's the greatest torture souls feel in hell:

In hell, that they must live, and cannot die.

WILSON, Duckers of Malis. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 84.

⁹ For what, my small philosopher! is hell?
'Tis nothing but full knowledge of the truth,
When truth, resisted long, is sworn our foe,
And calls eternity to do her right.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 2403.

¹⁰ Satan the envious said with a sigh:
Christians know more about their hell than I.
ALFREDO KREYMBORG, Envious Satan.

Hell, Hull and Halifax all begin with one letter;
Brag is a good dog, but hold-fast is a better.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbichisms, 137.

There is a proverb, and a prayer withal,
That we may not to three strange places fall
From Hull, from Halifax, from Hell, 'tis thus,
From all these three, good Lord, deliver us!

III—Hell: Its Pavement

⁹ Hell is full of good intentions or desires. (L'enfer est plein de bonnes volontés ou desirs.)

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Attributed to him by St. Francis de Sales, Letters, Letter 74. (Blaise edition.) Bk. ii, letter 22. (Leonard edition.) The letter was written in 1605 to Madame de Chantal, and St. Francis says to her, "Do not be troubled by St. Bernard's saying that Hell is full of good intentions and desires."

Hell is full of good desires.

EDWARD HELLOWES, Guevara's Epistles, 205. (1574)

Hell is full of good meanings and wishings.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 176.

¹⁰ Hell is paved with great granite blocks hewn from the hearts of those who said, "I can do no other."

REYWOOD BROWN, Syndicate Column, 20 Jan., 1934. See under LUTHER.

¹¹ Hell is paved with good intentions.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670) Dr. Johnson used the proverb in this form. (BOSWELL, 1775.) Coleridge (Notes Theological, Political and Miscellaneous, p. 259) attributes the saying to Richard Baxter (1615-1691).

The road to hell is paved with good intentions.

Quoted in this form by Archbishop Trench (Study of Words) as "perhaps the queen of all proverbs."

Hell is paved with good intentions, not with bad ones.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

It has been more wittily than charitably said that hell is paved with good intentions; they have their place in heaven also.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Colloquies on Society. Sec. v.

Hell is paved with good intentions and roofed with lost opportunities.

UNKNOWN, Proverb of Portuguese origin.

¹² Hell is paved with infants' skulls.

RICHARD BAXTER, Non-conformist divine, was almost stoned to death by the women of

Kidderminster for quoting this from the pulpit. (HAZLITT, Table Talk.)

Hell is paved with priests' skulls.

ST. CHERYSOSTOM.

Hell is paved with the skulls of great scholars, and paled in with the bones of great men.

V—Hell: The Fear of Hell

17 I thank God, and with joy I mention it, I was never afraid of Hell, nor never grew pale at the description of that place.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 59.

18 The fear o' Hell's a hangman's whip
To haud the wretch in order;
But where ye feel your honour grip,
Let that aye be your border.

BURNS, Epistle to a Young Friend. St. 8.

19 The devil is waiting for them, hell is gaping for them, the flames gather and flash about them. . . . When you come to be a firebrand of hell . . . you will appear as you are, a viper indeed. . . . Then will you as a serpent spit poison at God and vent your rage and malice in fearful blasphemies.

VI—Hell: The Hell Within

3 The heart of man is the place the devils dwell in: I feel sometimes a hell within my self.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 51.

4 The Hell within him, for within him Hell
He brings, and round about him, nor from Hell

One step no more than from himself can fly
By change of place.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 20.

5 Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell;
And in the lowest deep a lower deep
Still threat'ning to devour me opens wide,
To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 75.

6 I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:
And by and by my Soul return'd to me,
And answered, "I Myself am Heav'n and

HERACLITUS

³ One told me, Heraclitus, of thy death, and brought me to tears, and I remembered how often we two in talking put the sun to rest. Thou, methinks, Halicarnassian friend, art ashes long and long ago; but thy nightingales live still, whereon Hades, snatcher of all things, shall not lay his hand.

(Εἶπέν τις, Ἡράκλειτε, τὸν μὲν, εἰ δέ με δάκρυ ἤγαγεν, ἐμνήσθην ὅ' ὄσους ἀμφοτέρω φθιόν ἐν λίσσῃ κατεβύσαμεν· ἀλλὰ σὺ μὲν πῶν, ζῆν' Ἀλικαρνησέ, τετράπαλα· σποδὴ' αἱ δὲ τοαὶ ζῶουσιν ἀγρόναι, ἥσιν ὁ πάντων ἀρπακτὴς Ἄϊδος οὐκ ἐπὶ χεῖρα βαλεῖ.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams, No. 2. Quoted by Diogenes Laertius, ix, 17, where he gives a list of the persons called Heraclitus.

They told me, Herakleitos, thou wast dead.

What tears I shed!

As I remembered how we two as one
Talked down the sun.

Well, Halicarnassian friend, long since thou must
Have turned to dust;

Yet live thy nightingales, and Hades, who Doth all subdue,

Shall never until Time itself shall close

Lay hand on those.

CALLIMACHUS. (Basil L. Gildersleeve, tr., American Journal of Philology, Vol. xxiii, p. 111.)

They told me, Heraclitus, they told me you were dead,

They brought me bitter news to hear and bitter tears to shed.

I wept as I remembered how often you and I Had tired the sun with talking and sent him down the sky.

And now that thou art lying, my dear old Carian
guest,

A handful of grey ashes, long, long ago at rest,
Still are thy pleasant voices, thy nightingales,
awake;

For Death, he taketh all away, but them he cannot take.

CALLIMACHUS. (William Johnson-Cory, tr.)

One told me, Heraclitus, of thy fate;

He brought me tears, he brought me memories;

Alas, my Carian friend, how oft, how late,
We twain have talked the sun adown the skies,
And somewhere thou art dust without a date!

But of thy songs death maketh not his prize,
In death's despite, that stealeth all, they wait,
The new year's nightingales that never die.

CALLIMACHUS. (Andrew Lang, tr.)

They tell me, Heraclitus, thou art dead,
And many are the tears for thee I shed,
With memories of those summer nights oppress
When we together talked the sun to rest.
Alas! my gurst, my friend! no more art thou;
Long, long ago wert ashes, and yet now
Thy nightingales live on, I hear them sing,
E'en death spares them, who spares not anything.
CALLIMACHUS. (Lilla Cabot Perry, tr., From the Garden of Hellas, p. 80.)

HERMIT

¹ The hermit thinks the sun shines nowhere but in his cell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

² Hermit hoar, in solemn cell
Wearing out life's evening grey;
Smite thy bosom, Sage, and tell
What is bliss, and which the way.

Thus I spoke, and speaking sigh'd;—
Scarce repress'd the starting tear;—
When the smiling sage replied,
"Come, my lad, and drink some beer."
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 18 Sept., 1777.)

³ Far in a wild, unknown to public view,
From youth to age a reverend hermit grew;
The moss his bed, the cave his humble cell,
His food the fruits, his drink the crystal
well:

Remote from man, with God he pass'd the
days,
Prayer all his business, all his pleasure praise.

HERO AND HEROISM

I—Hero: Definitions

⁵ Heroism is the brilliant triumph of the soul over the flesh—that is to say, over fear. . . .
Heroism is the dazzling and glorious concentration of courage.

AMIEL, Journal, 1 Oct., 1849.

⁶ The hero is the world-man, in whose heart
One passion stands for all, the most indulged.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem, l. 114.

⁷ All actual heroes are essential men,
And all men possible heroes.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 151.

⁸ The Hero is he who lives in the inward sphere of things, in the True, Divine and Eternal, which exists always, unseen to most, under the Temporary, Trivial: his being is in that.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

There needs not a great soul to make a hero;
there needs a God-created soul which will be true to its origin; that will be a great soul.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Priest.

The Hero can be a Poet, Prophet, King, Priest or what you will, according to the kind of world
he finds himself born into.

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The

⁹ If Hero mean sincere man, why may not every one of us be a Hero?

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The
Hero as Priest*.

Thou and I, my friend, can, in the most flunky world, make, each of us, one non-flunky, one hero, if we like; that will be two heroes to begin with.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. i, ch. 6.

¹⁰ I am convinced that a light supper, a good night's sleep, and a fine morning, have sometimes made a hero of the same man, who, by an indigestion, a restless night, and rainy morning, would have proved a coward.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 April, 1748.

¹¹ He's of stature somewhat low—
Your hero always should be tall, you know.

¹³ There is no king nor sovereign state
That can fix a hero's rate.

R. W. EMERSON, Astraea.

The hero is not fed on sweets,
Daily his own heart he eats;
Chambers of the great are jails,
And head-winds right for royal sails.

R. W. EMERSON, Heroism.

The characteristic of genuine heroism is its persistency. All men have wandering impulses, fits and starts of generosity. But when you have resolved to be great, abide by yourself, and do not weakly try to reconcile yourself with the world. The heroic cannot be the common, nor the common the heroic.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

¹⁴ It is fortune (or chance) chiefly that makes heroes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Nor deem that acts heroic wait on chance,
Or easy were as in a boy's romance;
The man's whole life precludes the single deed
That shall decide if his inheritance
Be with the sifted few of matchless breed,
Our race's sap and sustenance,
Or with the unmotivated herd that only sleep and feed.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm.

¹⁵ Heroism is the self-devotion of genius manifesting itself in action.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth.

¹⁶ The greatest obstacle to being heroic is the doubt whether one may not be going to prove one's self a fool; the truest heroism is to resist the doubt, and the profoundest wisdom to know when it ought to be resisted, and when to be obeyed.

What more can you ask? He has invented history. (Que voulez-vous de plus? Il a inventé l'histoire!)

MADAME DU DEFFAND, of Voltaire, when some one remarked that he lacked invention. (FOURIER, VEsprit dans Histoire, p. 141.)

¹⁴ How history makes one shudder and laugh by turns!

WALPOLE, Letter to the Earl of Strafford, 1786. Don't you begin to think, Madam, that it is pleasanter to read history than to live it? Battles are fought and towns taken in every page, but a campaign takes six or seven months to hear, and achieves no great matter at last. I dare to say Alexander seemed to the coffee-houses of Pella a monstrous while about conquering the world.

WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Ossory, 8 Oct., 1777.

III—History: Its Truth

¹⁵ History indeed is the witness of the times, the light of truth. (Historia vero testis temporum, lux veritatis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 9.

Who does not know that it is the first law of history that it shall not dare to state anything which is false, and consequently that it shall not shrink from stating anything that is true? (Quis nescit primam esse historic legem, ne quid falsi dicere audeat, deinde ne quid veri non audeat?)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 15.

¹⁶ To be ignorant of what happened before you were born is to be ever a child. For what is man's lifetime unless the memory of past events is woven with those of earlier times?

CICERO, Orator. Sec. 34.

¹⁷ One may cover secret actions, but to be silent concerning what all the world knows and things which have had effects which are public and of so much consequence, is an inexcusable fault. (On peut couvrir les actions secretes; mais de taire tout ce que tout le monde sçait, et les choses qui ont tiré* des effets publiques et de telle consequence, c'est un défaut inexcusable.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 10. Of the duty of historians.

I hold it a noble task to rescue from oblivion those who deserve to be eternally remembered. (Quia mihi pulchrum in primis videtur non pati occidere.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 8. History should be guided by strict truth, and worthy actions require nothing more.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vii, epis. 33.

It is no great wonder if, in long process of time, while fortune takes her course hither and thither, numerous coincidences should spontaneously occur. If the number and variety of subjects be infinite, it is all the more easy for fortune, with such abundance of material, to effect this similarity of results.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Sertorius. Sec. 1.

The principal office of history I take to be this: to prevent virtuous actions from being forgotten, and that evil words and deeds should fear an infamous reputation with posterity.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 55.

I shall be content if those shall pronounce my history useful who wish to be given a view of events as they really happened, and as they are very likely, in accordance with human nature, to repeat themselves at some future time—if not exactly the same, yet very similar.

THUCYDIDES, Historia. Bk. i, sec. 2. Hence the phrase, "History repeats itself."

But I will trace the outlines of the chief events. (Sed summa sequar fastigia rerum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 342.

In due order I will describe the manners, the pursuits, the peoples, and the battles of the race. (Ordine gentis Mores et studia et populos, et prælia dicam.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 4.

In leaves, more durable than leaves of brass, Writes our whole history.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 275.

IV—History: Its Falsity

The vast Mississippi of falsehood.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays: History.

She was ever a notable wag at history.

AFRA BEAN, The Young King. Act i, sc. 1.

Referring to Fame.

History

With the supernatural element,—you know. ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Mad-dam."

Where history's pen its praise or blame supplies, And lies like truth, and still most truly lies.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 11.

History, a distillation of Rumour.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. vii, ch. 5.

How many histories are there filled with these marvels?

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

History shows you prospects by starlight, or, at best, by the waning moon.

RUFUS CHOATE, New England History.

Some write a narrative of wars, and feats Of heroes little known, and call the rant An history: describe the man, of whom His own coevals took but little note, And paint his person, character and views, As they had known him from his mother's womb.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 139.

Gossip which is written down is no more veracious than gossip which flies current. . . . Gossip is none the less gossip because it comes from venerable antiquity.

MANDELL CREIGHTON, Manuscript Notes.

Historians relate, not so much what is done, as what they would have believed.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

History fades into fable; fact becomes clouded with doubt and controversy; the inscription moulders from the tablet: the statue falls from the pedestal. Columns, arches, pyramids, what are they but heaps of sand; and their epitaphs, but characters written in the dust?

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch-Book: Westminster Abbey.

Seldom any splendid story is wholly true.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ii, p. 281.

Such bickerings to recount, met often in these our writers, what more worth is it than to chronicle the wars of kites or crows flocking and fighting in the air?

MILTON, History of Britain. Bk. iv.

By this time, like one who had set out on his way by night, and travelled through a region of smooth or idle dreams, our history now arrives on the confines, where daylight and truth meet us with a clear dawn, representing to our view, though at a far distance, true colours and shapes.

MILTON, History of Britain. Bk. i.

So difficult a matter is it to determine the truth of anything by history.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles.

1 Half-legend, half-historic.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 30.

2 Ancient histories, as one of our wits has said, are but fables that have been agreed upon. (Toutes les histoires anciens, comme le disait un de nos beaux esprits, ne sont que des fables convenues.)

VOLTAIRE, Jeannot et Colin.

There are no other ancient histories except fables. (Il n'y a point d'autres histoires anciennes que les fables.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter.

What is history but a fable agreed upon?

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings.

3 Anything but history, for history must be false.

ROBERT WALPOLE, when his secretary asked what he wished read to him as he lay on a sick-bed. (Walpoliana, No. 141.) Notes and Queries, No. 3, states that the correct version is, "Oh, do not read history, for that I know must be false."

4 Those old credulities, to nature dear,
Shall they no longer bloom upon the stock
Of History, stript naked as a rock
Mid a dry desert?

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Italy: No. 4, Regrets. Alluding to Niebuhr and other modern historians.

V—History: A Record of Crime

5 I pore on musty chronicles,
And muse on usurpations long forgot,
And other historied dramas of high wrong!

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts, Pt. II, act I, sc. 8.

6 Sin writes histories, goodness is silent.

GOETHE, Table-Talk, 1810.

7 The long historian of my country's woes.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. III, l. 142. (Pope, tr.)

8 The history of the great events of this world is scarcely more than the history of crimes. (L'histoire des grands événements de ce monde n'est guère que l'histoire des crimes.)

VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs, (1753)

History is but a picture of crimes and misfortunes. (L'histoire n'est que le tableau des crimes et des malheurs.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Ingénue, Ch. 10. (1757)

On whatever side we regard the history of Europe, we shall perceive it to be a tissue of crimes, follies, and misfortunes.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 42. (1762)

History is, indeed, little more than the register of the crimes, follies, and misfortunes of mankind. GIBSON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 3. (1776)

VI—History: Happy the Nation Whose Annals Are Blank

9 Happy is the nation without a history.

BECCARIA, Trattato dei Delitti e Delle Pene: Introduction.

10 Blest is that Nation whose silent course of happiness furnishes nothing for history to say.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. XI, p. 180.

He is happiest of whom the world says least, good or bad.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 1786.

11 Happy the people whose annals are tiresome.

MONTESQUIEU, Maximes.

A paradoxical philosopher carrying to the utmost length that aphorism of Montesquieu's, "Happy the people whose annals are tiresome," has said "Happy the people whose annals are vacant."

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. I, bk. II, ch. 1.

Happy the people whose annals are blank.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. XVI, ch. 1.

12 How the best state to know?—it is found out

Like the best woman;—that least talked about.

SCHILLER, Votive Tablets: The Best Governed State.

The happiest women, like the happiest nations, have no history.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Mill on the Floss. Bk. VI, ch. 3.

VII—History: The Historian

13 It is the true office of history to represent the events themselves, together with the counsels, and to leave the observations and conclusions thereupon to the liberty and faculty of every man's judgment.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

Cæsar, in modesty mixed with greatness, did for his pleasure apply the name of a Commentary to the best history of the world.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

14 These gentle historians, on the contrary, dip their pens in nothing but the milk of human kindness.

EDMUND BURKE, A Letter to a Noble Lord.

15 Histories are as perfect as the Historian is wise, and is gifted with an eye and a soul.

CARLYLE, Cromwell's Letters and Speeches: Introduction.

In a certain sense all men are historians.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

16 Historians ought to be precise, faithful, and unprejudiced; and neither interest nor fear, batred nor affection, should make them swerve from the way of truth.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 9.

History owes its excellency more to the writer's manner than to the material of which it is composed.

GOLDSMITH, Life of Richard Nash.

The historian is a sort of talking ghost from out the past.

HOFFMAN, Doge and Dogressa.

Every great writer is a writer of history, let him treat on almost any subject he may.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Diogenes and Plato.

To be a really good historian is perhaps the rarest of intellectual distinctions.

MACAULAY, Essays: History.

I regard the writing of history as one of the most difficult of tasks. (In primis arduum videtur res gestas scribere.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Sec. 3.

The historian is a prophet looking backwards. (Der Historiker ist ein rückwärts gekehrter Prophet.)

SCHLEGEL, Athenæum: Berlin, i, ii, 20.

Anybody can make history. Only a great man can write it.

OSCAR WILDE, Aphorisms, p. 52.

Deal not in history, often I have said;
'Twill prove a most unprofitable trade.

JOHN WOLCOT, Benevolent Epistle.

HOLIDAY

There were his young barbarians all at play,
There was their Dacian mother—he, their sire,

Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 141.

Still thou playest:—short vacation
Fate grants each to stand aside;

Now must thou be man and artist,—
'Tis the turning of the tide.

EMERSON, Holidays.

The red-letter days now become, to all intents and purposes, dead-letter days.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

The holiest of all holidays are those
Kept by ourselves in silence and apart;

The secret anniversaries of the heart,
When the full river of feeling overflows;—

The happy days unclouded to their close;
The sudden joys that out of darkness start

As flames from ashes; swift desires that dart

Like swallows singing down each wind that blows!

LONGFELLOW, Holidays.

On a sunshine holiday.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 98.

For now I am in a holiday humour.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 69.

If all the year was playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 227.

A perpetual holiday is a good working definition of hell.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

Is this a holiday?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 1, l. 2.

The yearly course that brings this day about

Shall never see it but a holiday.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 82.

He speaks holiday.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 69.

Monday is parson's holiday.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 3 March, 1711.

Time for work,—yet take

Much holiday for art's and friendship's sake.

GEORGE JAMES DE WILDE, On the Arrival of Spring.

HOLINESS

See also Goodness

Things sacred should not only be untouched with the hands, but unviolated in thought. (Res sacros non modo manibus attingi, sed ne cogitatione quidem violari fas fuit.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. ii, sec. 4.

Holiness appeared to me to be of a sweet, pleasant, charming, serene, calm nature; which brought an inexpressible purity, brightness, peacefulness, and ravishment to the soul. In other words, that it made the soul like a field or garden of God, with all manner of pleasant flowers.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Holiness.

We believe that holiness confers a certain insight, because not by private, but by our public force can we share and know the nature of things.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Ascending thorough just degrees

To a consummate holiness,

As angel blind to trespass done,

And bleaching all souls like the sun.

EMERSON, Fragment: Life. Frag. 29.

¹ And many a holy text around she strews
That teach the rustic moralist to die.
THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 83.

² In the beauties of holiness.
Old Testament: Psalms, cx, 3.

³ But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Maries on his beads;
His champions are the prophets and apostles,
His weapons holy saws of sacred writ,
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canonized saints.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 3, l. 58.

⁴ What thou wouldst highly
That wouldst thou holily.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 22.

Our holy lives must win a new world's crown.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 1, l. 24.

⁵ Holiness is the architectural plan upon which God buildeth up His living temple.
C. G. SPURGEON, Holiness.

HOLLAND AND THE HOLLANDERS

⁶ A country that draws fifty foot of water,
In which men live as in the hold of Nature,
And when the sea does in upon them break,
And drowns a province, does but spring a leak. . . .

That feed, like cannibals, on other fishes,
And serve their cousin-germans up in dishes:
A land that rides at anchor, and is moor'd,
In which they do not live, but go aboard.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Description of Holland.

⁷ That water-land of Dutchmen and of ditches.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 63.

⁸ Well may they boast themselves an ancient nation,
For they were bred ere manners were in fashion.
DRYDEN, Satire on the Dutch, l. 31.

⁹ Embosom'd in the deep where Holland lies,
Methinks her patient sons before me stand,
Where the broad ocean leans against the land.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 282.

Then we upon our globe's last verge shall go
And see the ocean leaning on the sky.
DRYDEN, On the Royal Society.

¹⁰ The Scotch may be compared to a tulip planted in dung; but I never see a Dutchman in his own house but I think of a magnificent Egyptian temple dedicated to an ox.
OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Letter to Thomas Constantine, 1753.

¹¹ Holland . . . lies so low, they're only saved
by being dammed.

THOMAS HOOD, Up the Rhine.

¹² Holland, that scarce deserves the name of
land,

As but the off-scouring of the British sand;
And so much earth as was contributed
By English pilots, when they heaved the lead.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Character of Holland.
Who best could know to pump an earth so leak,
Him they their lord and country's father speak;
To make a bank was a great plot of state;—
Invent a shovel, and be a magistrate.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Character of Holland.

¹³ Adieu, canals, ducks, rabble! (Adieu, canaux, canards, canaille!)

VOLTAIRE, when leaving Holland, summing up his impressions of the country.

HOME

I—Home: Definitions

¹⁴ Home,—the nursery of the infinite.

W. E. CHANNING, Note-Book: Children.

Home interprets heaven. Home is heaven for beginners.

CHARLES PARKHURST, Sermons: The Perfect Peace.

¹⁵ My idea of a home is a house in which each member of the family can on the instant kindle a fire in his or her private room.

EMERSON, Journals.

¹⁶ Home is the place where, when you have to go
there,
They have to take you in.

ROBERT FROST, The Death of the Hired Man.

^{16a} It takes a heap o' livin' in a house t' make it home.

EDGAR A. GUEST, Home.

But meanwhile I ask you to believe that
It takes a heap of other things besides
A heap o' livin' to make a home out of a house.
To begin with, it takes a heap o' payin'.
OCCIE NASH, A Heap o' Livin'.

¹⁷ Home, in one form or another, is the great object of life.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Home.

No genuine observer can decide otherwise than that the homes of a nation are the bulwarks of personal and national safety.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Home.

¹⁸ A house full of books and a garden of flowers.
ANDREW LANG, Ballade of True Wisdom.

¹⁹ Home is where the heart is.
Attributed to PLINY. Claimed by ELBERT HUB-
BARD, Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 73.

Where we love is home,
Home that our feet may leave, but not our hearts.

O. W. HOLMES, Nomesick in Heaven, St. 5.

Home is the girl's prison and the woman's workhouse.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

The modern idea of home has been well expressed as the place one goes from the garage.

GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM. "I am sorry to say that sentence . . . is not original."—Letter to Compiler.

My House My Castle, see under HOUSE.

II—Home Sweet Home

Nor has the world a better thing,
Though one should search it round,
Than thus to live one's own sole king,
Upon one's own sole ground.

WILFRID SHAWEN BLUNT, The Old Squire.

But what on earth is half so dear—
So longed for—as the hearth of home?

EMILY BRONTË, A Little Whale.

Fare you well, old house! you're naught that can feel or see,
But you seem like a human bein'—a dear old friend to me;

And we never will have a better home, if my opinion stands,
Until we commence a-keepin' house in the house not made with hands.

WILL CARLETON, Out of the Old House, Nancy.

Old homes! old hearts! Upon my soul forever Their peace and gladness lie like tears and laughter.

MADISON CAWEIN, Old Homes.

Whom God loves, his house is sweet to him.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote Pt. ii, ch. 43.

Wherever smoke wreaths Heavenward curl—
Cave of a hermit, Hovel of churl,
Mansion of merchant, princely dome—
Out of the dreariness,
Into its cheeriness,
Come we in weariness
Home.

STEPHEN CHALMERS, Home.

No place is more delightful than one's own fireside. (Nullus est locus domestica sede jucundior.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Familiares. Bk. iv, epis. 8.

When the flower is i' the bud and the leaf is on the tree,
The lark shall sing me hame in my ain coun-
tree;

Hame, hame, hame, hame fain wad I be,
O hame, hame, hame, to my ain countree!
ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, Hame, Hame, Hame.

Blest be that spot, where cheerful guests retire

To pause from toil, and trim their ev'ning
fire;

Blest that abode, where want and pain repair,

And every stranger finds a ready chair.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 13.

Of a' roads to happiness ever were tried,
There's name half so sure as ane's ain fireside.

ELIZABETH HAMILTON, My Ain Fireside.

My ain fireside, my ain fireside,
O, there's naught to compare wi' ane's ain fireside.

His home, the spot of earth supremely blest,
A dearer, sweeter spot than all the rest.

MONTGOMERY, West Indies. Pt. iii, l. 67.

Round the hearth-stone of home, in the land
of our birth,

The holiest spot on the face of the earth.

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, Land Ho!

A bleazing ingle, and clean hearth-stane.
ALLAN RAMSAY, Gentle Shepherd. Act i, sc. 2.

To fireside happiness, to hours of ease,
Blest with that charm, the certainty to please.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 335.

A comfortable house is a great source of happiness. It ranks immediately after bealth and a good conscience.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Lord Murray, 29
Sept., 1843.

I read within a poet's book

A word that starred the page,

"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage."

Yes, that is true, and something more:

You'll find, where'er you roam,

That marble floors and gilded walls
Can never make a home.

But every house where Love abides

And Friendship is a guest,

Is surely home, and home, sweet home;

For there the heart can rest.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Home Song.

Type of the wise, who soar, but never roam—

True to the kindred points of Heaven and Home!

WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.

Let us make resound the sweet song of "Home." (Dulce domum resonemus.)

UNKNOWN, Concinamus, O sodales (Comrades, Let us Sing Together). Sung at Winchester and other English schools on the eve of the holidays. "Dulce domum" is sometimes improperly used for "sweet home."

III—Home: Be It Never so Homely

HAME's hame, be it never so homely.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Law a Bottomless Pit. Pt. iii, ch. 4. (1712)

Home is home, be it never so homely.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 35. (1848)

For home, though homely 'twere, yet it is sweet.

ARISTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto xxix, st. 61. (Harington, tr., 1591.)

Though home be homely, it is more delightful than finer things abroad.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains. Vol. ii, p. 285. (1680)

Home is homely, though it be poor in sight.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

Is not a small house best? Put a woman into a small house, and after five years she comes out large and healthy.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 47.

My house, my house, though thou art small, Thou art to me the Escorial.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum.

God oft hath a great share in a little house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum. Perhaps from the French proverb, "En petite maison a Dieu grand part."

I've read in many a novel, that unless they've souls that grovel—

Folks prefer in fact a hovel to your dreary marble halls.

C. S. CALVERLEY, In the Gloaming.

Joy dwells beneath a humble roof;

Heaven is not built of country seats

But little queer suburban streets.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, To the Little House.

'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,

Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, Home, Sweet Home.

From the first act of his opera, Clari, The Maid of Milan, produced at Covent Garden, London, 8 May, 1823.

The banishment was overlong,

But it will soon be past;

The man who wrote home's sweetest song

Is coming home at last.

WILL CARLTON, Coming Home at Last. John

Howard Payne, the author of Home, Sweet Home, died in Tunis, 9 April, 1852, and was buried there. Thirty years later, the body was exhumed, shipped to the United States, and re-buried in the chapel of Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, D. C., on the ninety-second anniversary of his birth, 9 June, 1883.

A little house well fill'd, a little land well till'd, and a little wife well will'd, are great riches.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Just the wee cot—the cricket's chirr—
Love and the smiling face of ber.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Ike Walton's Prayer.

Though home be but homely, yet huswife is taught
That home hath no fellow to such as have aught.

IV—Home: East, West, Hame's Best

Now will I to home and household hearth
Move on, and first give thanks unto the Gods,
Who led me forth and brought me back again.

ÆSCHYLUS, Choëphori, l. 824. (Plumptre, tr.)

He who is truly happy should bide at home
(and he who fares ill, he too should bide at home.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 177.

But wheresoe'er I'm doomed to roam,
I still shall say—that home is home.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xxvi.

For the whole world, without a native home,

Is nothing but a prison of larger room.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To the Bishop of Lincoln.

If solid happiness we prize,

Within our breast this jewel lies,

And they are fools who roam.

The world has nothing to bestow;

From our own selves our joys must flow,

And that dear hut, our home.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. St. 3.

Cleave to thine acre; the round year

Will fetch all fruits and virtues here.

Fool and foe may harmless roam,

Loved and lovers bide at home.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Who bides at home, nor looks abroad,
Carries the eagles, and masters the sword.

EMERSON, Destiny.

That each should in his house abide,

Therefore was the world so wide.

EMERSON, Fragments: Life. Frag. 37.

Stay at home. The way to have large occasional views is to have large habitual views.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

Oh, to be home again, home again, home again!
Under the apple-boughs, down by the mill!
J. T. FIELDS, In a Strange Land.

Way down upon de Swanee ribber,
Far, far away,
Dere's wha my heart is turning ebber,
Dere's wha de old folks stay.
Ail up and down de whole creation,
Sadly I roam,
Still longing for de old plantation,
And for de old folks at home.

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, Old Folks at Home.

However we toil, or wherever we wander, our

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiii, l. 30. (Pope, tr.)

Peace and rest at length have come,
All the day's long toil is past;
And each heart is whispering, "Home,
Home at last!"

THOMAS HOOD, Home At Last.

To be happy at home is the ultimate result of all ambition.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 68.

Goethe once said, "He is happiest, king or peasant, who finds his happiness at home." And Goethe knew—because he never found it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

And Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree.

Old Testament: 1 Kings, iv, 25.

And then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig tree.

Old Testament: 11 Kings, xviii, 31.

They shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree.

Old Testament: Micah, iv, 4.

Cling to thy home! If there the meanest shed
Yield thee a hearth and shelter for thy head,
And some poor plot, with vegetables stored,
Be all that Heaven allots thee for thy board,
Unsavoury bread, and herbs that scatter'd grow
Wild on the river-brink or mountain-brow;
Yet e'en this cheerless mansion shall provide More heart's repose than all the world beside.

LEONIDAS, Cling to Thy Home.

Over the hills of home, laddie, over the hills of home.

LILLIAN LEVERIDGE, A Cry from the Canadian Hills.

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest,
For those that wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care;
To stay at home is best.

LONGFELLOW, Song, St. 1.

He never cares to wander from his own fire-
side,

He never cares to wander or to roam.

With his baby on his knee,

He's as happy as can be,

For there's no place like home, sweet home.

FELIX MCGLENNON, He Never Cares to Wander from His Own Fireside. (1892)

Far from all resort of mirth,
Save the cricket on the hearth.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 81.

The Cricket on the Hearth.

CHARLES DICKENS. Title of a Christmas book.

Who has not felt how sadly sweet
The dream of home, the dream of home,
Steals o'er the heart, too soon to fleet,
When far o'er sea or land we roam?
THOMAS MOORE, The Dream of Home.

The bird, let loose in eastern skies,
When hast'ning fondly home,
Ne'er stoops to earth her wing, nor flies
Where idle warblers roam;
But high she shoots through air and light,
Above all low delay,
Where nothing earthly bounds her flight,
Nor shadow dims her way.

THOMAS MOORE, The Bird, Let Loose.

So sung he joyously, nor knew that they Must wander yet for many an evil day
Or ever the dread gods should let them come Back to the white walls of their long-left home.

WILLIAM MOORE, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. ix, l. 330.

¹ Happy the man, whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air
In his own ground.
POPE, Ode on Solitude.

² Nor hell nor heaven shall that soul surprise,
Who loves the rain,
And loves his home,
And looks on life with quiet eyes.
FRANCES SHAW, Who Loves the Rain.

³ East and West, Home is best.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 13.
Seek home for rest, For home is best.
THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Housewifery.

⁴ Here is our home, here our country! (His domus, hæc patria est.)
VIRGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 122.
None love their country, but who love their home.

V—Home, Wife, and Children

⁵ As much as I converse with sages and heroes, they have very little of my love and admiration. I long for rural and domestic scenes, for the warbling of birds and the prattling of my children.
JOHN ADAMS, Letter to His Wife, 16 March, 1777.

⁶ At length his lonely cot appears in view
Beneath the shelter of an aged tree;
Th' expectant wee things, toddlin', stacher through
To meet their dad, wi' firtherin' noise an' glee.
BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. St. 3.

To make a happy fireside clime
To weans and wife,
That's the true pathos and sublime
Of human life.
BURNS, Epistle to Dr. Blacklock.

⁷ 'Tis sweet to hear the watch-dog's honest bark
Bay deep-mouth'd welcome as we draw near home;
'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark
Our coming, and look brighter when we come.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 123.

⁸ For altars and hearths; for hearth and home.
(Pro aris et focis.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Sec. 5. A common saying, meaning the defense of one's nearest and dearest. Among the Romans, the family or household gods (Penates) had their altars (aris) in the open court about which each house was built, and the tutelary deities of each dwelling (Lares) their niches round the hearth or ingle-nook (foci).

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 76. (Murray, tr.)

¹⁴ A night-cap deck'd his brows instead of bay.
A cap by night,—a stocking all the day!
GOLDSMITH, Description of an Author's Bed-chamber. (Citizen of World. No. 30. 1760.)

The white-wash'd wall, the nicely sanded floor,
The varnish'd clock that click'd behind the door;
The chest contriv'd a double debt to pay,
A bed by night, a chest of drawers by day.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 127. (1770)

What if in Scotland's wilds we veil'd our head,
Where tempests whistle round the sordid bed;
Where the rug's two-fold use we might display,
By night a blanket, and a plaid by day.

EDWARD BURNABY GREENE, The Satires of Juvenal Paraphrastically Imitated. (1764)

¹⁵ At night returning, every labour sped,
He sits him down, the monarch of a shed:
Smiles by his cheerful fire, and round surveys
His children's looks, that brighten at the blaze;
While his lov'd partner, boastful of her hoard,

Displays her cleanly platter on the board.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 191.

Dark is the night, and fitful and dreadfully
Rushes the wind, like the waves of the sea!
Little care I, as here I sit cheerily,
Wife at my side and my baby on knee:

KING, king, crown me the king!

Home is the kingdom and love is the king!

WILLIAM RANKIN DUNYEA, A Song for Hearth and Home. Awarded a prize for the best poem on home, by the Home Journal, New York, in 1865.

¹ How small, of all that human hearts endure,
That part which laws or kings can cause or cure!

Still to ourselves in every place consign'd,
Our own felicity we make or find:
With secret course, which no loud storms annoy,

Glides the smooth current of domestic joy.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH AND SAMUEL JOHNSON,
The Traveller, l. 429. Johnson indicated to Boswell that he had written the last ten lines of the poem with the exception of the last couplet but one. (BOSWELL, Life, Feb., 1766.)

² Home and a pleasing wife. (Domus et placens Uxor.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 21.

A house and a woman suit excellently.

³ The happiness of the domestic fireside is the first boon of mankind; and it is well it is so, since it is that which is the lot of the mass of mankind.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 220.

⁴ The many make the household,
But only one the home.

J. R. LOWELL, The Dead House. St. 9.

It takes a hundred men to make an encampment,
but one woman can make a home.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Woman.

What is the fireside if it warm but one?
R. U. JOHNSON, O Made for Love.

⁵ No more shall thy family welcome thee home
Nor around thee thy wife and sweet little ones come,

All clamoring joyous to snatch the first kiss,
Transporting thy bosom with exquisite bliss.
(Nam jam non domus accipiet te læta, neque uxor

Optima, nec dulces occurrent oscula nati
Præripere, et tacita pectus dulcedine tangent.)

Lucretius, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 907.
(King, tr.)

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
Or busy housewife ply her evening care;
No children run to kiss their sire's return,
Or climb his knees the envied kiss to share.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 21.

⁶ Subduing and subdued, the petty strife,
Which clouds the colour of domestic life;
The sober comfort, all the peace which springs
From the large aggregate of little things;
On these small cares of daughter, wife or friend,

The almost sacred joys of home depend.

HANNAH MORE, Sensibility.

⁷ The eagle nestles near the sun;
The dove's low nest for me!—
The eagle's on the crag; sweet one,
The dove's in our green tree!
For hearts that beat like thine and mine
Heaven blesses humble earth;—
The angels of our Heaven shall shine
The angels of our Hearth!

JOHN JAMES PIATT, A Song of Content.

⁸ We have wrought for glory and for beauty and for pleasure,
And have builded little houses for the women
we hold dear.

VICTOR STARBUCK, The Little Houses.

⁹ God looks down well pleased to mark
In earth's dusk each rosy spark,
Lights of home and lights of love,
And the child the heart thereof.

KATHERINE TYNAN, A Night Thought.

¹⁰ Meantime his sweet children hang upon his

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 523.

His little children, climbing for a kiss,
Welcome their father's late return at night;
His faithful bed is crowned with chaste delight.
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 523. (Dryden, tr.)

VI—Home: Its Drawbacks

¹¹ The largest part of mankind are nowhere greater strangers than at home.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

I am now no more than a mere lodger in my own house.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act I.

¹² Be thou thine own home, and in thyself dwell;
Inn anywhere, continuance maketh hell.
And seeing the snail, which everywhere doth roam,

Carrying his own house still, still is at home,
Follow (for he is easy-paced) this snail,
Be thine own palace, or the world's thy jail.
JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton, l. 47.

¹³ Every spirit makes its house, but afterwards
the house confines the spirit.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

A man builds a fine house; and now he has a master, and a task for life: he is to furnish, watch, show it, and keep it in repair, the rest of his days.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Weeks and Days.

¹⁴ Who hath not met with home-made bread,
A heavy compound of putty and lead—
And home-made wines that rack the head,

And home-made liqueurs and waters?
Home-made pop that will not foam,
And home-made dishes that drive one from
home, . . .

Home-made by the homely daughters?

Home-made physic that sickens the sick;
Thick for thin and thin for thick;—
In short each homogeneous trick

For poisoning domesticity?

And since our Parents, called the First,
A little family squabble nurst,
Of all our evils, the worst of the worst
Is home-made infelicity.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Misery.

There's no place like home, and many a man is glad of it.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

Three things there be that doth a man by strength

For to see his own house as Holy Writ sheweth,

That one is a wicked wife that will not be chasted;

Her husband fleeth from her for fear of her tongue.

And if his house be untiled and rain on his bed,

He seeketh and seeketh till he sleep dry.

And when smoke and smoulder smite in his
sight,

It doth him worse than his wife or wet to sleep.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman, xvii, 315.

(1377) The Latin original of this saying, which is a combination of Proverbs x, 26,
xix, 13, and xxvii, 15, will be found in De
Contemptu Mundi, i, 18.

Three things drive a man out of his house: that is to say, smoke, dropping of rain, and wicked wives.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibens. Sec. 15. (c. 1386)

It is for homely features to keep home,
They had their name thence; coarse complexions

And cheeks of sorry grain will serve to ply
The sampler and to tease the buswife's wool.
What need a vermeil-tinctur'd lip for that,
Love-darting eyes, or tresses like the morn?

MURON, Comus, l. 748.

I find by all you have been telling,
That 'tis a house, but not a dwelling.

Pope, On the Duke of Marlborough's House.

Where small experience grows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
3, sc. 2, l. 30.

Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
Were 't not affection chains thy tender days
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,
I rather would entreat thy company
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Than, living dully sluggardized at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act I, sc. 1, l. 2.

He that lives always at home, sees nothing but
home.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works. Vol. II, ch. 7. (1618)

How much a dunce, that has been sent to roam,
Excels a dunce that has been kept at home.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 415.

Our lives are domestic in more senses than we think. From the hearth, the field is a great distance. It would be well, perhaps, . . . if the poet did not speak so much from under a roof, or the saint dwell there so long. Birds do not sing in caves, nor do doves cherish their innocence in dovecotes.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

One rubber plant can never make a home,
Not even when combined with brush and comb,

And spoon, and fork, and knife,

And graphophone, and wife—

Not! Something more is needed for a home.

JEROME-SCHWARTZ. Title of popular song.
(1901)

Oh, it was pitiful!

Near a whole city full

Home she had none.

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs.

The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

New Testament: Matthew, viii, 20.

Horses, oxen, have a home

When from daily toil they come;

Household dogs, when the wind roars,

Find a home within warm doors;

Asses, swine, have litter spread,

And with fitting food are fed;

WORDSWORTH, Guilt and Sorrow. St. 41.

HOMER

I—Homer: His Birthplace

² As to Homer's native city, there is a very great divergence of opinion. Some say that he was from Colophon, some from Smyrna; others assert that he was an Athenian, still others, an Egyptian; and Aristotle declares that he was from the island of Ios.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, epis. 11, sec. 6.

³ Colophon asserts that Homer is her citizen, Chios claims him for her own, Salamis appropriates him, while Smyrna is so confident that he belongs to her that she has dedicated a shrine to him. (Homerum Colophonii civem esse dicunt suum, Chii suum vindecant, Salaminii repetunt, Smyrnæi vero suum esse confirmant, itaque etiam delubrum ejus in oppido dedicaverunt.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. 8, sec. 19.

Seven cities warred for Homer, being dead, Who, living, had no roof to shroud his head.

THOMAS HAYWOOD, On Homer's Birthplace. (1546)

⁵ Great Homer's birthplace seven rival cities claim,

Too mighty such monopoly of Fame.

THOMAS SEWARD, On Shakespeare's Monument at Stratford-upon-Avon.

Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead, Through which the living Homer begged his bread.

THOMAS SEWARD, On Homer.

Homer himself must beg if he wants means, as by report he sometimes did "go from door to door and sing ballads, with a company of boys about him."

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 6.

⁶ Seven cities strive for the learned root of Homer:

Smyrna, Chios, Colophon, Ithaca, Pylos, Argos, Athens.

(Ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν μέγαρον σοφῶν διὰ Ἰθάκην Ὀμήρου, Σμύρναν, Χίον, Κολοφών, Ἰθάκην, Πύλον, Ἀργεῖον, Ἀθήνας.)

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 298. Epigrams 293-299 are concerned with Homer's birthplace.)

⁷ Thou askest me that which is unknown to thee, the parentage and country of the ambrosial Siren. A certain Ithaca was the seat of Homer, Telemachus was his father, and his mother Nestor's daughter, Polycaete.

Oft of one wide expanse had I been told
That deep brow'd Homer ruled as his de-mesne:

Yet did I never breathe its pure serene Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and
bold:

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He star'd at the Pacific—and all his men
Look'd at each other with a wild surmise—
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

Man is his own star; and that soul that can
Be honest is the only perfect man.

BLAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune: Epilogue.

⁶ An honest man may like a glass,
An honest man may like a lass,
But mean revenge, an' malice fause,
He'll still disdain.

BURNS, Epistle to the Rev. John M'Math.

⁷ The modest front of this small floor,
Believe me, reader, can say more Than many a braver marble can,—
"Here lies a truly honest man."

RICHARD CRASHAW, Epitaph upon Mr. Ashton.

⁸ Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 3, l. 97.

¹⁰ There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 66.

HONOR

1—Honor: Definitions

Honor's a fine imaginary notion,
That draws in raw and unexperienced men
To real mischiefs, while they hunt a shadow.

ADDISON, Cato. Act II, sc. 5.

The sense of honour is of so fine and delicate a nature, that it is only to be met with in minds which are naturally noble, or in such as have been cultivated by good examples, or a refined education.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 161.

Honor is like an island, rugged and without a beach; once we have left it, we can never return.

(L'honneur est comme une île escarpée et sans bords;
On n'y peut plus rentrer dès qu'on en est dehors.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. x, l. 167.

Honor was but ancient riches.

NICHOLAS BRETOM, Court and Country, 190.

Honor's but a word
To swear by only in a Lord.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto II, l. 389.

Honor's a lease for lives to come,
And cannot be extended from
The legal tenant.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. I, canto III, l. 1043.

HONOUR IS LIKE A WIDOW WOE, see WIDOW:
WOODRO.

What is fitting is honorable, and what is honorable is fitting. (Quod decet honestum est, et quod honestum est, decet.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 27, sec. 94.

It is beyond question that expediency can never conflict with honor. (Dubitandum non est, quin numquam possit utilitas cum honestate contendere.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. III, ch. 3, sec. 11.

Honor nourishes the arts, and all are incited to study by the desire of glory. (Honos alit artes, omnesque incenduntur ad studia gloria.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. I, ch. 2, sec. 4.

Sayeth not the proverb, Honours nourish arts?

FRANCIS THYNNE, Pride and Lowliness, 22.

(1570)

Honor is a public enemy, and conscience a domestic; and he that would secure his pleasure, must pay a tribute to one, and go halves with t'other.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act III, sc. 14.

As to honour—you know—it's a very fine medieval inheritance, which women never get hold of. It wasn't theirs.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Chance. Ch. 2.

Honor but an empty bubble.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 100.

Honor is a baby's rattle.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking Glass. Act III, sc. 2.

Some things the honorable man cannot do, never does. He never wrongs or degrades a woman. He never oppresses or cheats a person weaker or poorer than himself. He never betrays a trust. He is honest, sincere, candid and generous.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, The Durable Satisfaction of Life, p. 6.

Purity is the feminine, truth the masculine of honor.

A. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. See also under CEAITY.

Honor is but an itch in youthful blood
Of doing acts extravagantly good.

SIR ROBERT HOWARD, The Indian Queen.

Honor is the very breath in our nostrils.

JEFFREY HUDSON, page to Queen Henrietta Maria, on the occasion of a duel.

What is most honorable is also safest. (Quod pulcherrimum idem tutissimum est.)

LIVE, History. Bk. XXXIV, ch. 14.

Honor is purchas'd by the deeds we do;
... Honor is not won

Until some honourable deed be done.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander.
Sec. i, l. 276.

Nobody can acquire honor by doing what is wrong.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 444.

¹ Honour, the spur that pricks the princely mind.

GEORGE FREEL, The Battle of Alcasar. Act i.

² Honour and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part: there all the honour lies.
POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 193.

³ Without money honor is nothing but a malady.
(Sans argent l'honneur n'est qu'une maladie.)

⁴ Honour, the darling but of one short day.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, A Farewell to the Vanities of the World.

⁵ Be noble-minded! Our own heart, and not other men's opinions Forms our true honor.
SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. (Coleridge, tr.)

⁶ Abroad in arms, at home in studious kind,
Who seeks with painful toil, shall Honour soonest find.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto iii, st. 40.

⁷ I sent to know from whence, and where
These hopes and this relief?
A spy inform'd, Honour was there,
And did command in chief.

"March, march," quoth I, "the word straight give,

Let's lose no time, but leave her;

That giant upon air will live,
And hold it out for ever."

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Siege of a Heart.

⁸ Honour's a mistress all mankind pursue;
Yet most mistake the false one for the true:
Lured by the trappings, dazzled by the paint,
We worship oft the idol for the saint.

PAUL WHITEHEAD, Honour.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxiii, 22.

¹³ The louder he talked of his honor, the faster we counted our spoons.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

¹⁴ Costar: Pray now, what may be that same bed of honour?

Kite: Oh, a mighty large bed! bigger by half than the great bed of Ware: ten thousand people may lie in it together and never feel one another.

FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act i, sc. 1.

If he that in the field is slain,
Be in the bed of honour lain,
He that is beaten may be said
To lie in honour's truckle-bed.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1047.

Although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 2, 49.

¹⁵ All is lost save honor. (Tout est perdu fors l'honneur.)

FRANCIS I OF FRANCE, in a letter to his mother, the morning after the disastrous battle of Pavia, accompanying a safe conduct given to the Viceroy of Naples for the Commander Penalosa. Tradition has altered Francis's words to the form given above, but what he really wrote was: "Nothing remains to me save honor and life." (De toutes choses ne m'est demeuré que l'honneur et la vie.) The letter is printed in Dulaure's Histoire de Paris. (See also Siamondi, xvi, 241.) Napoleon is said to have quoted this epigram to Caulaincourt after Waterloo; and Louis XVIII repeated it in reply to a proposal that he renounce his claim to the French throne. (BOURRIENNE, Memoirs of Napoleon, ii, 25.)

And all at Worcester but the honour lost.
DRYDEN, Astræ Redux, l. 74.

We have lost all, yet life is still left. (Omnia perdidimus, tantummodo vita relicta est.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 16, l. 49.

¹⁶ It is a worthier thing to deserve honour than to possess it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia:

¹⁷ To those whose god is honour, disgrace alone is sin.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

¹⁸ I could not love thee, Dear, so much
Lov'd I not Honour more.

RICHARD LOVELACE, To Lucasta, Going to the Wars.

¹⁹ How many sacrifice honor, a necessity, to glory, a luxury!

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 38.

²⁰ I am myself the guardian of my honour.

³ As the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honour peereth in the meanest habit.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 176.

⁴ Honour should be concerned in honour's cause.
THOMAS SOUTHERN, Oroonoko, Act v, sc. 3.

⁵ The shackles of an old love straiten'd him,
His honour rooted in dishonour stood,
And faith unfaithful kept him falsely true.

TENNYSO, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 870.
Upon this fatal quest

Of honour, where no honour can be gain'd.
TENNYSO, Geraint and Enid, l. 702.

III—Honor: Greater Than Life

⁶ Better to die ten thousand thousand deaths,
Than wound my honour.

ANDERSON, Cato, Act i, sc. 4.
⁷ When honour's lost, 'tis a relief to die;
Death's but a sure retreat from infamy.

GARTER, The Dispensary, Canto v, l. 321.
⁸ Honour alone we cannot, must not lose;
Honour, that spark of the celestial fire,
That above nature makes mankind aspire;
Ennobles the rude passions of our fame
With thirst of glory, and desire of fame:
The richest treasure of a generous breast,
That gives the stamp and standard to the rest.

LORD HALIFAX, The Man of Honour.
⁹ Count it the greatest of infamies to prefer life to honor, and to lose, for the sake of living, all that makes life worth having. (Summum crede nefas animam præferre pudori, Et propter vitam vivendi perdere causas.)

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. viii, l. 83.
¹⁰ This day beyond its term my fate extends,
For life is ended when our honour ends.

LACTANTIUS, Prologus, (Goldsmith, tr. from the ¹² If I lose mine honour, I lose myself.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, Act iii,
sc. 4, l. 32.

¹² Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, Act i, sc. 2, l. 86.
Mine honour is my life; both grew in one;
Take honour from me, and my life is done.

Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try:
In that I live, and for that will I die.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act i, sc. 1, l. 182.

For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 154.

Life every man holds dear; but the brave man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, Act v, sc.
3, l. 27.

¹³ When faith is lost, when honor dies,
The man is dead!
WHITTIER, Ichabod, St. 8.

IV—Honor: The Man of Honor
¹⁴ Lo, one who loved true honour more than fame.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STERLING,
Doomsday: The Eighth Hour, St. 100.

¹⁵ There may be danger in the deed,
But there is honour too.
W. E. AYTON, The Island of the Scots.

He that is valiant and dares fight
Though drubbed, can lose no honour by't.
BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1041.

¹⁶ Thine is the self-approving glow
Of conscious honour's part.
BURNS, To Chloë.

¹⁷ If honour calls, where'er she points the way,
The sons of honour follow and obey.

Not to woo honour, but to wed it.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 14.

The heavens hold firm
The walls of thy dear honour.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 67.

3 By heaven, methinks it were an easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced moon,
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 201.

4 The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 22.
By Jove, I am not covetous for gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;
It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires:
But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

5 SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 24.
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act v, sc. 5, l. 45.

6 I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Than you should such dishonour undergo.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

7 Worth, courage, honor, these indeed
Your sustenance and birthright are.
E. C. STEEDMAN, Beyond the Portals. Pt. x.

8 A true man, pure as faith's own vow,
Whose honour knows not rust.
SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. i, st. 1.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2540.

Honour and profit lie not all in one sack.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Honour will buy no beef.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc.

3. Cited as "the excellent proverb."

12 Honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? no; or an arm? no; or take away the grief of a wound? no. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? no. What is honour? a word. What is in that word honour?
what is that honour? air. A trim reckoning!
Who hath it? he that died o' Wednesday.
Doth he feel it? no. Doth he hear it? no. 'Tis insensible, then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? no. Why? detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it.
Honour is a mere scutcheon: and so ends my catechism.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 130.

13 In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 184.

For Brutus is an honourable man;

So are they all, all honourable men.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 87.

14 Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 92.

15 I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of God on the left hand and hiding mine honour in mine necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 33.

But why should honour outlive honesty?

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 245.

Honour sits smiling at the sale of truth.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iv, l. 218.

16 Don't you think we may as well leave honour out of the argument?

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act iv, sc. 3.

17 When vice prevails and impious men bear sway,

The post of honour is a private station.

ANDERSON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

Give me, kind heav'n, a private station,
A mind serene for contemplation,

Title and profit I resign;
The post of honour shall be mine.
JOHN GAY, Fables: The Vulture and Sparrow.

With all its beauteous honours on its head.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 557. (Pope, tr.)

7
Since all must life resign,
Those sweet rewards, which decorate the brave,
'Tis folly to decline,
And steal inglorious to the silent grave.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lines Added to an Ode by Sir William Jones.

8
Great honours are great burdens, but on whom they are cast with envy, he doth bear two loads.
His cares must still be double to his joys,
In any dignity.
BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 1.

Honours and great employments are great burthens.
MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act i, sc. 3.

It is the fashion to seek honor for disgraceful conduct. (Petere honorem pro flagitio more fit.)
PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 28.

17
He died full of years and honors, as illustrious for those he refused as for those he accepted. (Et ille quidem plenus annis abiit, plenus honoribus, illis etiam, quos recusavit.)
PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1.

A studious decliner of honours and titles.
JOHN EVELYN, Diary: Introduction.

18
Honours thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers: the mere word's a slave
Debosh'd on every tomb; on every grave,
A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb
Where dust and damn'd oblivion is the tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 142.

19
And all the budding honours on thy crest
I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.
SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 72.

And bears his blushing honours thick upon him.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 354.

20
New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of use.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 144.

Now, while the honour thou hast got
Is spick and span new.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 397.

21
Let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.
O, that estates, degrees and offices

Were not derived corruptly, and that clear honour
 Were purchased by the merit of the wearer!

 An outward honour for an inward toil.
 SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 79.
 1 Honors change manners. (Honores mutant mores.)
 POLYDORUS VERGIL, Proverbiorum Libellus. No. 202.
 So they verify the saying, Honores mutant mores.
 HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 437. (1552)
 Lord Rutland said to my father (Sir Thomas More), in his acute sneering way: "Ah, ah, Sir Thomas, Honores mutant Mores;" to which my father replied, "Not so, in faith, but have a care lest we translate the proverb and say, 'Honours change Manners.'"
 MARGARET MORE, Diary, October, 1524. The point of the jest will be better appreciated when it is remembered that Manners was Lord Rutland's family name.
 This good creature is resolved to show the world, that great honour cannot at all change his manners; he is the same civil person he ever was.
 ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 259.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 33.

Hope deceives, enjoyment undecives.

JOSEPH ROUR, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Joy. No. 9.

And thus Hope me deceived, as she deceiveth all.

SCOTT, Harold the Dauntless. Canto iii, st. 1.

¹¹ Hope is a kind of cheat: in the minute of our disappointment we are angry; but upon the whole matter there is no pleasure without it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 236.

¹² Reflected on the lake, I love

To see the stars of evening glow;

So tranquil in the heavens above;

So restless in the wave below.

Thus heavenly hope is all serene,

But earthly hope, how bright so'er,

Still fluctuates o'er this changing scene,

As false and fleeting as 'tis fair.

REGINALD HEHR, On Heavenly and Earthly Hope.

¹³ It is natural to man to indulge in the illusions of hope. We are apt to shut our eyes against a painful truth, and listen to the song of that siren, till she transforms us into beasts.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. (Arranged by William Wirt, 1818.)

¹⁴ Put aside trifling hopes. (Mitte levis spes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 8.

¹⁵ He that raises false hopes to serve a present purpose, only makes a way for disappointment and discontent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Patriot.

Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow,—attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 1.

¹⁶ Hoppers go to hell.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs.

¹⁷ I write nil ultra to my proudest hopes.

PHILIP MASSINGER, a New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act iv, sc. 1.

¹⁸ Where peace

And rest can never dwell, hope never comes,
That comes to all.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 65.

Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 808.

¹⁹ Hope, once conceived, is long-lived; a treacherous goddess is she, but a timely one. (Spes tenet in tempus, semel est si credita, longum: Illa quidem fallax, sed tamen apta dea est.)

OVIN, Art Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 445.

Hope, great deceiver as she is, at least serves to carry us to the end of life by a pleasant road.

(L'espérance, toute trompeuse qu'elle est, sert au moins à nous mener à la fin de la vie par un chemin agréable.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 168.

Hope is generally a wrong guide, though it is very good company by the way.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 236.

¹ Careless of things which are near, we pursue eagerly things which are far away. (Proximorum incuriosi, longinqua sectamur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii. ep. 20.

² Many a hopeful man has hope beguiled. (Qui speraverint spem decepisse multos.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 401. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

³ Our hopes, like towering falcons, aim
At objects in an airy height.

MATTHEW PRIOR, To Charles Montague.

⁴ I cultivated hope, and see it wither day by day. What serves it, alas! to water the leaves when the tree is severed at the root? (Je cultivais l'espérance, et la vois sécher tous les jours. Que sert, hélas! d'arroser le feuillage quand l'arbre est coupé par le pied?)

ROUSSEAU, La Nouvelle Héloïse. Pt. i. Letter 25.

⁵ The hour when you too learn that all is vain,
And that Hope sows what Love shall never reap.

D. G. ROBERTS, The House of Life. Sonnet xlv.

⁶ The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon Turns Ashes—or it prospers; and anon,
Like Snow upon the Desert's dusty Face,
Lighting a little hour or two—is gone.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubāiyāt. St. 16. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

⁷ What madness to plot out far-reaching hopes!
(Quanta dementia est spes longas inchoantium!)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliū. Epist. ci, sec. 4.

⁸ Lined himself with hope,
Eating the air on promise of supply.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 27.

Cosening hope: he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper back of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hope lingers in extremity.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 69.

⁹ Hope is the fawning traitor of the mind, while, under colour of friendship, it robs it of its chief force of resolution.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. iii.

¹⁰ When we have discovered a continent, or crossed a chain of mountains, it is only to find another ocean or another plain upon the further side. . . O toiling hands of mortals!

O wearied feet, travelling ye know not whither! Soon, soon, it seems to you, you must come forth on some conspicuous hill-top, and but a little way further, against the setting sun, descry the spires of El Dorado.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque: El Dorado.

¹¹ Races, better than we, have leaned on her wavering promise,
Having naught else but Hope.

ESAIAS TROTTER, The Children of the Lord's Supper, l. 230. (Longfellow, tr.)

¹² Hope doubtful of the future. (Spes incerta futuri.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii, l. 580.

You feed an idle hope. (Spes pascis inanes.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 627.

¹³ Is Man
A child of hope? Do generations press
On generations, without progress made?

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. v, l. 465.

Confiding tho' confounded; hoping on,
Untaught by trial, unconvinc'd by proof,
And ever looking for the never-seen.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 126.

¹⁴ Hopes, what are they?—Beads of morning
Strung on slender blades of grass;

Or a spider's web adorning
In a strait and treacherous pass.

WORDSWORTH, Inscriptions. No. 10.

¹⁵ Restless hope, for ever on the wing.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 133.

¹⁶ Hope told a flattering tale
That joy would soon return;

Ah, naught my sighs avail
For love is doomed to mourn.

UNKNOWN, Hope Told a Flattering Tale. (Universal Songster. Vol. i, p. 320.) The song was introduced by John Wolcot into the opera Artaxerxes.

Hope tells a flattering tale,
Delusive, vain and hollow.

Ah! list not hope prevail,
Lest disappointment follow.

MARY WROTHER, Hope. (Universal Songster. Vol. ii, p. 86.)

Hope told a flattering tale,
Much longer than my arm,
That love and pots of ale

In peace would keep me warm.

WILLIAM BARNES REYNOLDS, Bombastes Furioso.

VII—Hope and Fear

¹⁷ Our greatest good, and what we least can spare,

Is hope: the last of all our evils, fear.

JOHN AARSTRAND, Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iv, l. 318.

Entertaining hope Means recognising fear.

ROBERT BROWNING, Two Poets of Crotch, l. 158.

1 Far greater numbers have been lost by hopes,
Than all the magazines of daggers, ropes,
And other ammunitions of despair,
Were ever able to dispatch by fear.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 483.

2 If hopes were dupes, fears may be liars;
It may be, in yon smoke concealed,
Your comrades chase e'en now the fliers,
And, but for you, possess the field.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Say Not the Struggle Nought Availeth.

3 He has no hope who never had a fear.
COWPER, Truth, l. 799.

For where no hope is left, is left no fear.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 206.

But I strode on austere;
No hope could have no fear.
JAMES THOMSON, City of Dreadful Night. Pt. iv.
So farewell hope, and with hope farewell fear.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 108.

4 Cease to hope and you will cease to fear.
(Desines timere, si sperare desieris.)
HICATO, Fragments. Frag. 25. (SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Ep. v, sec. 7.)

5 Hope and fear are inseparable; there is no fear without hope, no hope without fear.
(L'espérance et la crainte sont inséparables, et il n'y a point de crainte sans espérance, ni d'espérance sans crainte.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 515.

6 Let the fearful be allowed to hope. (Liceat sperare timent.)
LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 14.

7 Yet, where an equal poise of hope and fear
Does arbitrate th' event, my nature is
That I incline to hope, rather than fear.
MILTON, Comus, l. 410.

8 Hope and fear bring trust and mistrust by turns. (Alternant spesque timorque fidem.)
OVID, Heroides. Ep. vi, l. 38.

9 Fear made her devils, and weak hope her gods.
POPE, Essay on Man. Ep. iii, l. 256.

10 Hope is brightest when it dawns from fears.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iv, st. 1.
Her hopes, her fears, her joys were all
Bounded within the cloister wall.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 3.
As hope and fear alternate chase
Our course through life's uncertain race.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 2.

11 Just as the same chain fastens the prisoner and the soldier who guards him, so hope and fear keep step together: fear follows hope.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Ep. v, sec. 8.

12 Most wretched 'tis to fear when you can hope for naught. (Miserrimum est timere, cum speres nihil.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 425.

13 And other hopes and other fears
Effaced the thoughts of happier years.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, To Mary.

14 The kind wise word that falls from years that fall—

"Hope thou not much, and fear thou not at all."

A. C. SWINBURNE, Hope and Fear.

VIII—Hope and Despair

15 It is to hope, though hope were lost.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Song: Come Here, Fond Youth.

16 The heart bowed down by weight of woe
To weakest hope will cling.

ALFRED BURN, The Bohemian Girl: Song.

17 Work without Hope draws nectar in a sieve,
And Hope without an object cannot live.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Work Without Hope.

18 Still desiring, we live without hope. (Senza speme vivemo in desio.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto iv, l. 42.

19 Hope is cheap as despair.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2542.

It is better to hope than to despair. (Ist besser hoffen als verzweifeln.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 197.

Like strength is felt from hope and from despair.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 852. (Pope, tr.)

20 Homely phrases, but each letter
Full of hope and yet of heart-break.
LONGFELLOW, Huswath: Introduction.

21 The setting of a great hope is like the setting of the sun. The brightness of our life is gone.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 1.

22 Our dearest hopes in pangs are born,
The kingliest Kings are crown'd with thorn.
GERALD MASSEY, The Kingliest Kings.

23 What re-inforcement we may gain from hope,
If not, what resolution from despair.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 190.

24 Do not hope without despair, nor despair without hope. (Nec speraveris sine desperatione nec desperaveris sine spe.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Ep. civ, 12.

He who can hope for nothing, let him despair of nothing. (Qui nil potest sperare, desperet nihil.)
SENECA, Medea, l. 163.

1 Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 9.

2 Worse than despair,
Worse than the bitterness of death, is hope.
SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act v, sc. 4.

3 It's best to hope the best, though of the worst affrayd.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto 6, st. 37.

4 Though sick with weighty cares, he feigns hope in his face. (Curisque ingentibus æger Spem voltu simulat.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 208.

5 We did not dare to breathe a prayer
Or to give our anguish scope!
Something was dead in each of us,
And what was dead was Hope.
OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol. Pt. iii, st. 31.

6 Hope, eager hope, th' assassin of our joy,
All present blessings treading under foot,
Is scarce a milder tyrant than despair.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 107.

HORACE

7 Then farewell, Horace; whom I hated so,
Not for thy faults, but mine.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 77.

8 Serene and clear, harmonious Horace flows,
With sweetness not to be expressed in prose.
WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 41.

9 But, oh, the echoes of those songs
That soothed our cares and lulled our hearts!
Not to that age nor this belongs
The glory of what heaven-born arts
Speak with the old distinctive charm
From yonder humble Sabine farm!
EUGENE FIELD, Epilogue.

10 Then finish, dear Chloe, this pastoral war;
And let us, like Horace and Lydia, agree:
For thou art a girl as much brighter than her,
As he was a poet sublimer than me.
MATTHEW PRIOR, To Chloe Jealous.

HORSE

I—Horse: Apothegms

11 That man has the horse of Sejanus. (Ille homo habet equum Sejanum.)
AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, ch. 9,

sec. 6. Referred to as a proverb, which originated from the misfortunes which befel the owners of a famous horse which had belonged originally to GNEIUS SEJANUS.

12 They are manifest asses, but you, good Leech, you are a horse of another colour.
R. H. BARRAM, Leech of Folkestone.

Farmer Gripper thinks we can live upon nothing, which is a horse of another colour.
C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 51.

13 A horse mistused upon the road
Calls to Heaven for human blood.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

14 A true Philip, a lover of horses.
JOHN BROWN, Horæ Subsecivæ: Presence of Mind. A reference to the Greek meaning of Philip, or Phil-hippos.

15 The seat on a horse makes gentlemen of some and grooms of others.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

16 Ride not a free horse to death.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71.

Spur a free horse, he'll run himself to death.
BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub, iii, 4.

A pair of good spurs to a borrowed horse is better than a peck of haver [oats].
GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 83.

LOOK NOT A GIFT HORSE IN THE MOUTH, see under GIFT.

17 Noblest of the train
That wait on man, the flight-performing horse.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 423.

18 'Orses and dorgs is some men's fancy. They're wittles and drink to me.
CHARLES DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 19.

19 I know the gall'd horse will soonest wince.
RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias.

There is a common saying that when a horse is rubbed on the gall, he will kick.
HUGH LATIMER, Sermon on St. Andrew's Day, 1552.

Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 253.

20 A good horse should be seldom spurred.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 156.

A good horse oft needs a good spur.
JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, p. 93.

It is the bridle and spur that makes a good horse.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3021.

21 Altogether upon the high horse.
DAVID GARRECK, Correspondence. Vol. i, p. 203.

Why vent ye on the generous steed your rage?
Does not his service earn your daily bread?
Your wives, your children, by his labours fed!
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 233.

² Yet if man, of all the Creator planned,
His noblest work is reckoned,
Of the works of His hand, by sea or by land,
The horse may at least rank second.
A. L. GORDON, Hippodromania. Pt. 1, st. 3.

³ Good horses make short miles.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum.

⁴ A short horse is soon curried.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 1, ch. 10. (1546);
JOHN FLETCHER, Valentinian. Act ii, sc. 1.
When the steed is stolen, shut the stable door.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 1, ch. 10. See also WISDOM: AFTER THE EVENT.
All lay the load on the willing horse.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 532.

⁵ Saddle-leather is in some respects even preferable to sole-leather. . . . One's hepar, or, in vulgar language, liver, . . . goes up and down like the dasher of a churn in the midst of the other vital arrangements, at every step of a trotting horse. The brains also are shaken up like coppers in a money-box.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 7, p. 166.

The Squire will wind up . . . with an apocryphal saying which he attributes to Lord Palmerston—'There's nothing so good for the inside of a man as the outside of a horse.'

G. W. E. RUSSELL, Social Sketches. Ch. 32.
Attributed also to Dr. John Abernethy and to Oliver Wendell Holmes.

⁷ Be wise in time, and turn loose the ageing horse, lest at the last he stumble amid jeers and break his wind. (Solve senescentem mature sanus equum, ne Peccet ad extremum ridendus et illa ducat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. 1, epis. 1, l. 8.

⁸ The ear of a bridled horse is in his mouth. (Equi frenato est auris in ore.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. 1, epis. 15, l. 13.

⁹ A four white-foot horse is a horse for a fool;
A three white-foot horse is a horse for a king;
And if he hath but one, I'll give him to none.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 13. (1659)

One white foot, buy a horse;

Two white feet, try a horse;

Three white feet, look well about him;

Four white feet, do without him.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. (Notes and Queries.

Ser. 5, vol. vii, p. 64.)

¹⁰ Hast thou given the horse strength? hast thou clothed his neck with thunder?

Old Testament: Job, xxxix, 19.

¹¹ They say Princes learn no art truly, but the art of horsemanship. The reason is, the brave beast is no flatterer. He will throw a Prince as soon as his groom.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Illiteratus Princeps.

¹² Eaten up by horses. (Præda caballorum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 193. By the expense of keeping horses.

¹³ Here were we fallen in a great question of the law, whether the grey mare may be the better horse or not.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Dialogue. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1528)

The grey mare is the better horse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. 1, ch. 4. (1546)
Used by Butler, Fielding, Prior, Steele, and many others.

The vulgar proverb, that the grey mare is the better horse, originated, I suspect, in the preference generally given to the grey mares of Flanders over the finest coach horses of England.

MACAULAY, History of England. Bk. 1, ch. 3, note.

¹⁴ The valiant horse races best, at the barrier's fall, when he has others to follow and o'erpass. (Tum bene fortis equus reserato carcere currit, Cum quos prætereat, quosque sequatur, habet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 595.

Competition makes a horse-race.

OVID, Ars Amatoria, iii, 595. (Young, tr.)

The spirited horse, which will of its own accord strive to win the race, will run still more swiftly if encouraged.

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 21.

¹⁵ You have set spurs to a willing horse. (Adidisti calcaria sponte currenti.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. 1, epis. 8.

¹⁶ An horse is a vain thing for safety.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxiii, 17.

¹⁷ The blind horse is hardest.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

The blind horse is fittest for the mill.

THOMAS SOUTHWELL, Maid's Last Prayer. Act iii, sc. 1.

¹⁸ Woe worth the chase, woe worth the day,
That costs thy life, my gallant grey.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto 1, st. 9

Dear to me is my bonny white steed;

Off has he helped me at pinch of need.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel, iv, 10.

²⁰ Spur not an unbroken horse.

SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 25.

²¹ O for a horse with wings!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 49

- Give me another horse: bind up my wounds.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 177
- A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 4, l. 7.
- Villain, a horse—
Villain, I say, give me a horse to fly,
To swim the river, villain, and to fly.
GEORGE PEELE, Battle of Alcasar. Act v, l. 104.
- I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;
And so I do command you to their backs.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 39.
- He doth nothing but talk of his horse.
SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice. i, 2, 44.
- Whose only fit companion is his horse.
WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation. l. 412.
- Whose laughs are hearty, tho' his jests are coarse,
And loves you best of all things—but his horse.
POPE, Epistle to Mrs. Teresa Blount on Her Leaving Town. l. 29.
- He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force,
Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse.
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. l. 49.
- Go anywhere in England where there are natural, wholesome, contented, and really nice English people; and what do you always find? That the stables are the real centre of the household.
BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii.
- It is a good horse that never stumbles.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 10.
- A horse thou knowest, a man thou dost not
know.
TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette. l. 453.
- Trust not the horse, ye Trojans. (Equo ne credite, Teucri.) VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii. l. 48. Meaning the wooden horse, by which the Greeks got into Troy.
- And the hoofs of the horses as they run shake the crumbling field. (Quadrupedumque putrem cursu quatit ungula campum.) VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 875. A famous example of onomatopoeia.
- There is no good horse of a bad color.
ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 5. Quoted as a proverb.
- Who is he that may water the horse and not drink himself?
UNKNOWN, Old English Homilies. Ser. i, p. 9. (c. 1175.)
- A man may lead a horse to the water, but he'll choose to drink.
UNKNOWN, Jack Drum. Act i. (1616)
- A man may well bring a horse to the water,

But he cannot make him drink without he will.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

One man may lead a horse to the water, but twenty cannot make him drink.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 14 July, 1763.

II—Horse: Descriptions

- This horse was of extraordinary size, with a lofty neck, bay in color, with a thick, glossy mane; but that same horse was of such a fate or fortune that whoever possessed it came to utter ruin, as well as his whole house and all his possessions.
AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, ch. 9.
- Cob was the strongest, Mob was the wrongest, Chittabob's tail was the finest and longest!
R. H. BARNHAM, The Truants.
- She was iron-sinew'd and satin-skin'd,
Ribb'd like a drum and limb'd like a deer,
Fierce as the fire and fleet as the wind—
There was nothing she couldn't climb or clear.
A. L. GORDON, Romance of Britomarte. St. 6.
- Gamarra is a dainty steed,
Strong, black, and of a noble breed,
Full of fire, and full of bone,
With all his line of fathers known;
Fine his nose, his nostrils thin,
But blown abroad by the pride within!
His mane is like a river flowing,
And his eyes like embers glowing
In the darkness of the night,
And his pace as swift as light.
BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Blood Horse.
- Hurrah, hurrah for Sheridan!
Hurrah, hurrah for horse and man!
And when their statues are placed on high,
Under the dome of the Union sky,—
The American soldier's Temple of Fame,—
There with the glorious General's name
Be it said in letters both bold and bright:
"Here is the steed that saved the day
By carrying Sheridan into the fight,
From Winchester,—twenty miles away!"
THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Sheridan's Ride.
- I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns, Ça, ha! he bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs, le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les harines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes. . . .
He is pure air and fire . . . the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch and his countenance enforces homage.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 11.

It is a most absolute and excellent horse.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act III, sc. 7, l. 28.

1 Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,

Broad breast, full eye, small head and nostril wide,

High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,

Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:

Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,

Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 295.

2 I saw them go; one horse was blind,

The tails of both hung down behind,

Their shoes were on their feet.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, The Baby's Début.

Parody of Wordsworth.

3 Steeds decked with purple and with tapestry,
With golden harness hanging from their necks,

Champing their yellow bits, all clothed in gold.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 277. Describing the gifts sent by King Latius to Æneas.

4 His neck is high and erect, his head replete with intelligence, his belly short, his back full, and his proud chest swells with hard muscle. (Ardua cervix, Argutumque caput, brevis alvos, obesaque terga, Luxuriatque toris animosum pectus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 79.

HORSEMANSHIP

5 Men will keep going on their nerve or their head,

But you cannot ride a horse when he's dead.

LEONARD BACON, Colorado Morton's Ride.

6 So that his horse, or charger, hunter, hack,
Knew that he had a rider on his back.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 32.

7 A canter is the cure for every evil.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. ii, ch. 11.

8 If you ride a horse, sit close and tight,
If you ride a man, sit easy and light.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

9 A jolly wight there was, that rode

Upon a sorry mare.

THOMAS HOOD, The Epping Hunt.

10 A horseman better than Bellerophon himself.
(Equus ipso melior Bellerophonte.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 12, l. 7. Bellerophon was the rider of Pegasus.

11 The driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he driveth furiously.

Old Testament: II Kings, ix, 20. Hence "Jehu" for a fast driver; used especially of drivers of hansom cabs and other public vehicles.

I like, my dear Lord, the road you are travelling, but I don't like the pace you are driving; too similar to that of the son of Nimshi. I always feel myself inclined to cry out, Gently, John—gently down hill. Put on the drag.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Lord John Russell.

Spark the lash, my boy, and hold the reins more firmly! (Parce, puer, stimulis, et fortius utere loris!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 127.

12 Lord Ronald said nothing; he flung himself from the room, flung himself upon his horse and rode madly off in all directions.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, Nonsense Novels: Gertrude the Governess.

13 He grew unto his seat;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,

As he had been incorpse and demi-natured
With the brave beast.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 86.

I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his seat
As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus
And witch the world with noble horsemanship.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 104.

Well could he ride, and often men would say
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes."

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 106.

14 A rider unequalled—a sportsman complete,
A run one to follow, a bad one to beat.

G. J. WHEAT-MELVILLE, Hunting Song.

I—Hospitality: Apothegms

15 The merry, but unlook'd for guest,

Full often proves to be the best.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax's Tour in Search of Consolation. Canto xxix.

16 Hospitality consists in a little fire, a little food, and an immense quiet.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1856.

17 For whom he means to make an often guest,
One dish shall serve; and welcome make the rest.

JOSEPH HALL, Come Dine with Me.

¹ Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unaware.

Old Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 2.

² 'Tis equal wrong if a man speed on a guest who is loath to go, and if he keep back one that is eager to be gone. One should make welcome the present guest, and send forth him that would go.

(ἴσον τοι κακὸν ἐστ', εἰ τ' οὐκ ἔδωλοντα πείθεαι ξείνον ἐποτρύνει καὶ δὲ ἑσσύμενον κατερίκει, χρὴ ξείνον παρεόντα φιλεῖν, ἔδωλοντα δὲ πέμπειν.)

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. xv, l. 72.

Alike he thwarts the hospitable end
Who drives the free, or stays the hasty friend:
True friendship's laws are by this rule express'd,
Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest.

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. xv, l. 81. (Pope, tr.)

For I, who hold sage Homer's rule the best,
Welcome the coming, speed the going guest.

*POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires, Bk. ii,
sat. 2, l. 159.*

To the guests that must go, bid God's speed and brush away all traces of their steps.

RAINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener, No. 45.

³ Wherever the storm carries me, I go a willing guest. (Quo me cumque rapit tempestas, deferor hospes.)

HORACE, Epistles, Bk. i, epis. i, l. 15.

As drives the storm, at any door I knock,
And house with Montaigne now, or now with Locke.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, i, l. 25.

⁴ There is room for several uninvited guests.
(Locus est et pluribus umbris.)

HORACE, Epistles, Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 28. The "umbræ" were the uninvited guests who came with a man of high station.

Unbidden guests

Are often welcome when they are gone.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 55.

⁵ A host is like a general: mishaps oft reveal his genius. (Sed convivoris, uti ducis, in-genium res adversæ nudare solent.)

HORACE, Satires, Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 73.

⁶ As welcome as flowers in May.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, Bk. i, No. 60. (1645)

You are as welcome as the flowers in May.

SCOTT, Rob Roy, Ch. 8.

⁷ In good company you need not ask who is the master of the feast. The man who sits in the lowest place, and who is always industrious in helping every one, is certainly the man.

DAVID HUMER, Essays: Rise and Progress of Arts.

Sometimes, when guests have gone, the host remembers

Sweet courteous things unsaid.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Faithful.

⁸ Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men!

Old Testament: Jeremiah, ix, 2.

HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD, see under PHILANTHROPY.

⁹ It is more disgraceful to turn out a guest than not to admit him. (Turpius ejicitur, quam non admittitur hospes.)

OVIN, Tristia, Bk. v, eleg. 6, l. 13.

¹⁰ Given to hospitality.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 13.

A lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate.

New Testament: Titus, i, 8.

He kept no Christmas-house for once a year,
Each day his boards were fill'd with Lordly fare:
He fed a rout of yeomen with his cheer,
Nor was his bread and beef kept in with care;
His wine and beer to strangers were not spare,
And yet beside to all that hunger grieved,
His gates were ope, and they were there relieved.

ROBERT GREENE, A Maiden's Dream, l. 232.

¹¹ No guest is so welcome that he will not become a nuisance after three days in a friend's house. (Nam hospes nullus tam in amici hospitium devorti potest, Quin, ubi triduum continuum fuerit, jam odiosus siet.)

*PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 741. (Act iii, sc.
1.)*

The first day a man is a guest, the second a burden, the third a pest.

LABOULAYE, Abdallah, Ch. 9.

Fish and guests in three days are stale.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 307. (1580)

Like some poor nigh-related guest,
That may not rudely be dismissed;
He hath out-stayed his welcome while,
And tells the jest without the smile.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age.

¹² My master is of churlish disposition
And little reckes to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act ii, sc. 4, l. 80.

¹³ I am your host;
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act iii, sc. 7, l. 39.

Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast pretended.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 575.

¹⁴ Bear Welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act i, sc. 5, l. 65.

Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 28.

You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making,
Tis given with welcome.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act iii, sc. 4, l. 33.

See, your guests approach:
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act iv, sc. 4, l. 52.

A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1125.

Macbeth: Here's our chief guest.

Lady Macbeth: If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act iii, sc. 1, l. 11.

His worth is warrant for his welcome.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 102.

Hospitality sitting with Gladness.

TEGNÉR, BISHOP OF WEXIÖ, Fritiof's Saga. Pt.
i. (Longfellow, tr.)

II—Hospitality: Its Praise

Stay is a charming word in a friend's vocabulary.

A. B. ALCOCK, Concord Days: June.

The courteous host, and all-approving guest.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 29.

When friends are at your hearthside met,
Sweet courtesy has done its most
If you have made each guest forget
That he himself is not the host.

T. B. ALDRICH, Hospitality.

If my best wines mislike thy taste,
And my best service win thy frown,
Then tarry not, I bid thee haste;
There's many another Inn in town.

T. B. ALDRICH, Quills.

Come in the evening, or come in the morning,
Come when you're looked for, or come without warning,
Kisses and welcome you'll find here before

you,
And the oftener you come here the more I'll adore you.

THOMAS O. DAVIS, The Welcome.

There's an organ in the parlor, to give the house
a tone,

And you're welcome every evening at Maggie
Murphy's home.

EDWARD HARRIGAN, Maggie Murphy's Home.
The song hit of Reilly and the 400, which opened at Harrigan and Hart's Theatre, December, 1890.

"God save all here!" my comrade cries,
And rattles on the raised latch-pin;
"God save you kindly!" quick replies
A clear sweet voice, and asks us in.
SAMUEL FRASERSON, *The Pretty Girl of Loch
Dow*.

Hail Guest! We ask not what thou art;
If Friend, we greet thee, hand and heart;
If Stranger, such no longer be;
If Foe, our love shall conquer thee.

ARTHUR GUTTERMAN, Old Welsh Door Verses.

A stone jug and a pewter mug,
And a table set for three!
A jug and a mug at every place,
And a biscuit or two with Brie!
Three stone jugs of Cruiskeen Lawn,
And a cheese like crusted foam!
The Kavanagh receives to-night!
McMurrough is at home!

RICHARD HOVEY, The Kavanagh.

For it's always fair weather
When good fellows get together,
With a stein on the table and a good song ringing
clear.

RICHARD HOVEY, A Stein Song.

So saying, with despatchful looks in haste
She turns, on hospitable thoughts intent.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 331.

A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,
And I could laugh; I am light and heavy:
Welcome.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 200.

Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes ye all: . . . he would have all as merry
As first good company, good wine, good welcome
Can make good people.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, Act i, sc. 4, l. 1.

Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore I scrub this breathing courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, Act v,
sc. 1, l. 139.

From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome!
SHAKESPEARE, Trilus and Cressida, Act iv, sc.
5, l. 171.

I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide
Of knives once more; my cook and I'll provide.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 118.

You must come home with me and be my
guest;

You will give joy to me, and I will do
All that is in my power to honour you.

SHELLEY, Hymn to Mercury. St. 5.

The lintel low enough to keep out pomp and
pride;

The threshold high enough to turn deceit
aside;

The doorband strong enough from robbers to defend;

This door will open at a touch to welcome every friend.

No man will learn anything at all,
Unless he first will learn humility.

OWEN MEREDITH, Vanina, l. 328.

Nearest the throne itself must be
The footstool of humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility.

Fairest and best adorned is she
Whose clothing is humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility.

Humility, that low, sweet root,
From which all heavenly virtues shoot.

THOMAS MOORE, Lovers of the Angels: The Angel's Story.

No more lessen or dissemble thy merit, than overrate it; for though humility be a virtue, an affected one is not.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

Humility is to make a right estimate of one's self. It is no humility for a man to think less of himself than he ought, though it might rather puzzle him to do that.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings: Humility.

Let not this weak unknowing hand
Presume thy bolts to throw,
And deal damnation round the land
On each I judge thy foe.

If I am right, thy grace impart

Still in the right to stay;

If I am wrong, oh teach my heart

To find that better way!

POPE, Universal Prayer. Sta. 7, 8.

She should be humble, who would please,
And she must suffer, who can love.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Chloe Jealous. St. 5.

There is no humiliation for humility.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 5.

Humility is a virtue all men preach, none practise, and yet everybody is content to bear. The master thinks it good doctrine for his servants, the laity for the clergy, and the clergy for the laity.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Humility.

And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act I, sc. 2, l. 43.

ESLIE PARKER BUTLER, Jaded Meeker, Humorist. Referring to Mark Twain.

¹¹ Unconscious humour.
SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Life and Habit. (1877) Butler claims to have coined this phrase.

A sense of humour keen enough to show a man his own absurdities will keep him from the commission of all sins, or nearly all, save those that are worth committing.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Life and Habit.
¹² The essence of humour is sensibility; warm tender fellow-feeling with all forms of existence.

CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.

HUMOR

True humour springs not more from the head than from the heart; it is not contempt, its essence is love; it issues not in laughter, but in still smiles, which lie far deeper. It is a sort of inverse sublimity, exalting as it were, into our affections what is below us, while sublimity draws down into our affections what is above us.
CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.

Humour has justly been regarded as the finest perfection of poetic genius.
CARLYLE, Essays: Schiller.

HUNTING

I—Hunting: Apothegms

¹ There is a passion for hunting something deeply implanted in the human breast.
DICKENS, Oliver Twist, Ch. 10.

² Don't think to hunt two hares with one dog.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

³ He was a mighty hunter before the Lord; wherefore it is said, Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the Lord.
Old Testament: Genesis, x, 9.

Proud Nimrod first the bloody chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man.
POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 61.

⁴ What he hit is history,
What he missed is mystery.
THOMAS HOON, Impromptu. In reference to a guest's shooting stories.

⁵ It is folly to take unwilling dogs out to hunt.
(Stultitia est venatum ducere invitos canes.)
PLAUTUS, Stichus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 83.

⁶ Huntsman, rest! thy chase is done.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 32.
Back limped with slow and crippled pace,
The sulky leaders of the chase.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 10.

⁷ Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

⁹ Oh, Sir Thomas Lucy,
Your venison's juicy.
Juicy is your venison;
Hence I apply my benison.
UNKNOWN. Old bit of doggerel, sometimes humorously attributed to Shakespeare, referring to Sir Thomas Lucy, who prosecuted Shakespeare for poaching.

II—Hunting: Its Pleasures

¹⁰ The mellow autumn came, and with it came
The promised party, to enjoy its sweets.
The corn is cut, the manor full of game;
The pointer ranges, and the sportsman beats

In russet jacket;—lynx-like is his aim;
Full grows his bag, and wonder/u his feast.
Ah, nut-brown partridges! Ah, brilliant pheasants!

And ah, ye poachers!—"Tis no sport for peasants.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 75.

¹¹ By perilous paths in coomb and dell,
The heather, the rocks, and the river-bed,
The pace grew hot, for the scent lay well,
And a runnable stag goes right ahead,
The quarry went right ahead—
Ahead, ahead, and fast and far;
His antlered crest, his cloven hoof,
Brow, bay and tray and three aloof,
The stag, the runnable stag.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Runnable Stag.

A stag of warrant, a stag, a stag,
A runnable stag, a kingly crop,
Brow, bay and tray the three on top,
A stag, a runnable stag.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Runnable Stag.

¹² The dusky night rides down the sky
And ushers in the morn:
The hounds all join in glorious cry,
The huntsman winds his horn;
And a-hunting we will go.
HENRY FIELDING, A-Hunting We Will Go.

¹³ Soon as Aurora drives away the night,
And edges eastern clouds with rosy light,
The healthy huntsman, with the cheerful horn,
Summons the dogs, and greets the dappled Morn.

JOHN GAY, Rural Sports. Canto ii, l. 93.

¹⁴ Yet if once we efface the joys of the chase
From the land, and outroot the Stud,
Good-bye to the Anglo-Saxon race,
Farewell to the Norman blood!
A. L. GORDON, Ye Wearie Wayfarer. Fytte 7.

¹⁵ Hunting I reckon very good
To brace the nerves, and stir the blood: . . .
Hygeia's sons with hound and horn,
And jovial cry awake the Morn.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 67.

¹⁶ Oh, who will stay indoor, indoor,
When the horn is on the hill?
With the crisp air stinging, and the huntsmen singing,
And a ten-tined buck to kill!

RICHARD HOVY, King Arthur: Hunting-Song.

¹⁷ A wild bear chase didst never see?
Then thou hast lived in vain.
Thy richest hump of glorious glee
Lies desert in thy brain.
ABRAHAM LINCOLN, The Bear Hunt. (1844)

¹⁸ With a hey, ho, chevy!
Hark forward, hark forward, tantivy!
This day a stag must die!
JOHN O'KEEFE, Cesar Peter: Song. Act i, sc. 4.

¹ Good and much company, and a good dinner; most of their discourse was about hunting, in a dialect I understand very little.
SAMUEL PEPPY, Diary, 22 Nov., 1663.

² The chase I follow far,
Tis mimicry of noble war.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto II, st. 26.

³ The horn, the horn, the lusty horn
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 18.

⁴ Theseus: We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.
Hippolyta: I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,

When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear . . .
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act IV, sc. 1, l. 113.

⁵ Rose-cheeked Adonis bled him to the chase;
Hunting he loved, but love he laughed to scorn.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 3.

⁶ My hoarse-sounding horn
Invites thee to the chase, the sport of kings,
Image of war, without its guilt.
WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chase. Bk. I.

⁷ Come out, 'tis now September,
The hunter's moon's begun,
And through the wheaten stubble
Is heard the frequent gun.
UNKNOWN, All Among the Barley.

⁸ D'ye ken John Peel with his coat so gay?
D'ye ken John Peel at the break of the day?
D'ye ken John Peel when he's far, far away,
With his hounds and his horn in the morning?

III.—Hunting: Its Cruelty and Stupidity

⁹ Assassins find accomplices. Man's merit
Has found him three, the hawk, the hound, the ferret.

WILFRID SCAMMEN BLUNT, Assassins.

¹⁰ For what were all these country patriots born?

To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?

BYRON, The Age of Bronze. St. 14.

He thought at heart like courtly Chesterfield,
Who, after a long chase o'er hills, dales, bushes,
And what not, though he rode beyond all price,

Ask'd next day, "If men ever hunted twice?"
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 35.

¹¹ And though the fox he follows may be

A mere fox-follower never is reclaim'd.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 409.

Detested sport,
That owes its pleasures to another's pain.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. III, l. 326.

¹² Hunting has now an idea of quality joined to it and is become the most important business in the life of a gentleman. Anciently it was quite otherways. M. Fleury has severely remarked that this extravagant passion for hunting is a strong proof of our Gothic extraction, and shows an affinity of humour with the savage Americans.

DRYDEN, Preface to the Pastorals of Vergil.
Sometimes attributed to William Walsh.

¹³ The woods are made for the hunters of dreams,
The brooks for the fishers of song;
To the hunters who hunt for the gunless game

The streams and the woods belong.
SAM WALTER FOSS, Bloodless Sportsmen.

¹⁴ Wild animals never kill for sport. Man is the only one to whom the torture and death of his fellow creatures is amusing in itself.

J. A. FROUDE, Oceana: Passengers' Amusements.

¹⁵ Of horn and morn, and hark and bark,
And echo's answering sounds,
All poets' wit hath ever writ
In dog-rel verse of hounds.

Nor like a Craven yeeld his Breath
Under the Jawes of Dogges and Death!

THOMAS HOOD, The Fall of the Deer.

¹⁷ It is very strange, and very melancholy, that the paucity of human pleasures should persuade us ever to call hunting one of them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. I, p. 288.

Hunting was the labour of the savages of North America, but the amusement of the gentlemen of England.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (KENSLEY, Johnsoniana, 606.)

¹ He did not know that a keeper is only a poacher turned inside out and a poacher a keeper turned outside in.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Water Babies. Ch. 1.

² To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish, and indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heaved forth such groans,

That their discharge did stretch his leathern
coat

Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act II, sc. 1, l. 33.

I was a stricken deer that left the herd
Long since: with many an arrow deep infix'd
My panting side was charg'd, when I withdrew
To seek a tranquil death in distant shades.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. III, l. 308.

A herd-abandoned deer, struck by the hunter's dart.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 33.

Faluting, breathless toil,
Sick seizes on his heart: he stands at bay, . . .
The big round tears run down his dappled face;
He groans in anguish.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 451.

³ Everybody can see that the people who hunt

Never to say a word about them more.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto I, st. 29.

⁸ Wedded she was some years, and to a man
Of fifty, and such husbands are in plenty;
And yet, I think, instead of such a one,
'Twere better to have two of five-and-twenty, . . .

Ladies, even of the most uneasy virtue,
Prefer a spouse whose age is short of thirty.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto I, st. 62.

⁹ Until the hours of absence should run through,

And truant husband should return, and say,
"My dear, I was the first who came away."

²⁰ Hero: My heart is exceeding heavy.

Margaret: 'Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

Hero: Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Margaret: Of what, lady? of speaking bonourably? . . . Is there any harm in "the heavier for a husband?"

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act III, sc. 4, l. 26.

Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,

And for thy maintenance commits his body
To painful labour both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;

And craves no other tribute at thy hands
But love, fair looks and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince
Even such a woman oweth to her husband; . . .

I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war where they should kneel for peace,
Or seek for rule, supremacy and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, v, 2, 146.

I am thine husband—not a smaller soul,
Nor Lancelot, nor another.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 563.

The husband who desires to surprise is often very much surprised himself. (Mari qui veut surprendre est souvent fort surpris.)

VOLTARE, La Femme Qui a Raison. Act II, sc. 2.

If he [the husband] takes a chance and returns home suddenly, he is the master, but it is imprudent and in bad taste, for he exposes himself to unhappy surprises.

(Si, par mégarde, il se hasarde,
À rentrer chez lui tout à coup,
Il est le maître, Mais c'est peut-être
Imprudent et de mauvais goût;
Car il s'expose À . . . triste chose!)

HENRY MEILHAC AND LUDOVIC HALÉVY, La Belle Hélène. Act II.

Husband! thou Dull unpitied miscreant,
Wedded to Noise, to Misery, and Want;
Sold an eternal Vassal for thy life,
Oblig'd to Cherish and to Heat a Wife:
Repeat thy loath'd embraces every Night,
Prompted to Act by Duty, not delight. . . .
The wretch is marry'd, and has known the worst.

And now his Blessing is, he can't be Curst.
UNKNOWN, Against Marriage. (c. 1690)

HYACINTH

If of thy mortal goods thou art bereft,
And from thy slender store two leaves alone to thee are left,
Sell one, and with the dole

Buy hyacinths to feed thy soul.

SADR, Gulistan: Garden of Roses.

If thou of fortune be bereft
And in thy store there be but left
Two leaves—sell one, and with the dole
Buy hyacinths to feed thy soul.

JAMES TERRY WHITE, *Not by Bread Alone:
After Hippocrates*. (Century Magazine, Aug., 1907.)

If thou hast a loaf of bread, sell half and buy the flowers of the narcissus; for bread nourish-eth the body, but the narcissus the soul.

but give us Roses!

JAMES OFFENHEIM, Bread and Roses.

The hyacinth's for constancy wi' its unchanging blue.

BURNS, The Poie. St. 3.

Come, evening gale! the crimson rose
Is drooping for thy sigh of dew;
The hyacinth woos thy kisse to close
In slumber sweete its eye of blue.
GEORGE CHOLY, Inscription for a Grotto.

Here hyacinths of heavenly blue

Shook their rich tresses to the morn.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Adventure of a Star.

And the hyacinth purple, and white, and blue,
Which hung from its bells a sweet peal anew
Of music so delicate, soft, and intense,
It was felt like an odour within the sense.

I—Hypocrisy: Definitions

Your cold hypocrisy's a stale device,
A worn-out trick; would'st thou be thought in earnest,

Clothe thy feign'd zeal in rage, in fire, in fury!
ADOLPH, Calio. Act I, sc. 3.

Spun from the cobweb fashion of the times,
To hide the feeling heart.

MARK AKENSIDE, Pleasures of Imagination. Bk.
II, l. 147.

Of all villainy, there is none more base than that of the hypocrite, who, at the moment he is most false, takes care to appear most virtuous.
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 13, sec. 41.

A hypocrite is in himself both the archer and the mark, in all actions shooting at his own praise or profit.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and Profane
States: The Hypocrite*.

The only vice that cannot be forgiven is hypocrisy. The repentance of a hypocrite is itself hypocrisy.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 256.

There is some virtue in almost every vice, except hypocrisy; and even that, while it is a mockery of virtue, is at the same time a compliment to it.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 274.

A hypocrite despises those whom he deceives, but has no respect for himself. He would make a dupe of himself, too, if he could.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 398.

He never used his arms against the stream, nor uttered the unfettered thoughts of his mind, nor devoted his life to the cause of truth.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 89.

When a man puts on a Character he is a stranger to, there's as much difference between what he appears, and what he really is, as there is between a Vizard and a Face.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 11.

One is never so ridiculous for the qualities he has as for those he pretends to have. (On n'est jamais si ridicule par les qualités que l'on a que par celles que l'on affecte d'avoir.)

Hypocrisy is a homage which vice pays to virtue. (L'hypocrisie est un hommage que le vice rend à la vertu.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 218.

Affectation is an awkward and forced imitation of what should be genuine and easy, wanting the beauty that accompanies what is natural.

LOCKE, On Education. Sec. 66.

Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 5.

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 25.

For neither man nor angel can discern Hypocrisy, the only evil that walks invisible, except to God alone.

I want that gift and silly art
To speak and purpose not.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 1, l. 227.

To beguile the time,
Look like the time; . . . look like the innocent
flower,
But be the serpent under 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act I, sc. 5, l. 63.

Away, and mock the time with fairest show;
False face must hide what the false heart doth
know.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act I, sc. 7, l. 81.

I am a woman of the world, Hector, and I can assure you that if you will only take the trouble always to say the perfectly correct thing, you can do just what you like.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act I.

Face-flatterer and back-biter are the same.
And they, sweet soul, that most impute a crime

Are proneest to it.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 822.

How inexpressible is the meanness of being a hypocrite! how horrible is it to be a mischievous and malignant hypocrite.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Philosopher. Sec. i.

I hope you have not been leading a double life, pretending to be wicked, and being really good all the time. That would be hypocrisy.

Oh, for a forty-parson power to chant
Thy praise, Hypocrisy!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 34.

Be hypocritical, be cautious, be
Not what you seem but always what you see.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 86.

Till Cant cease, nothing else can begin.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. II, bk. III,
ch. 7.

It is now almost my sole rule of life to clear myself of cant and formulas, as of poisonous Nessus shirts.

CARLYLE, Letter to His Wife, 2 Nov., 1835.

My dear friend, clear your mind of cant. You may talk as other people do, . . . but don't think foolishly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 15 May, 1783.)

Sworn foe of Cant, he smote it down
With trenchant wit uberring,
And, mocking, rent with ruthless hand
The robe Pretence was wearing.
J. G. WHITTIER, Randolph of Roanoke.

Great King of Cant!
AMBROSE BURNES, An Impostor. Referring to Andrew Carnegie.

How cheerfully he seems to grin,
How neatly spreads his claws,
And welcomes little fishes in

New Testament: Luke, x, 31.

Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.
New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 24. The correct reading, used in the revised version is "strain out a gnat," the allusion being to straining wine: but insects should be inadvertently swallowed.

⁸ The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart:
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act I,
sc. 3, l. 99.

But then I sigh; and, with a piece of Scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With old odd ends, stolen out of holy writ;
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act I, sc. 3, l. 334.

⁹ He is no less than a stuffed man.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
I, sc. 1, l. 58.

¹⁰ O, what authority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal!
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 36.

When devils will the blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 357.

¹¹ So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue, . . .

He liv'd from all attainder of suspect.

ICE

¹ In things that are tender and unpleasing, it is good to break the ice, by some whose words are of less weight, and to reserve the more weighty voice, to come in, as by chance.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning.

When I had but broke the ice of my affection, she fell over head and ears in love with me.

JAMES SMURLEY, Love Tricks. Act iii, sc. 1.

To break the ice in making the first overture.

ALFRED, Gusman, I, 173.

"If he would have the goodness to break the—in point of fact, the ice," said Cousin Feenix.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 61.

² Yet all how beautiful! Pillars of pearl
Propping the cliffs above, stalactites bright
From the ice roof depending; and beneath,
Grottoes and temples with their crystal spires
And gleaming columns radiant in the sun.

WILLIAM HENRY BURLEIGH, Winter.

³ Motionless torrents! silent cataracts!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni.

⁴ And ice, mast-high, came floating by
As green as emerald.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. I.

⁵ In skating over thin ice our safety is in our speed.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

⁶ Some say the world will end in fire,
Some say in ice.

From what I've tasted of desire,
I hold with those who favor fire.

But if it had to perish twice,
I think I know enough of hate
To say that for destruction ice
Is also great

And would suffice.

ROBERT FROST, Fire and Ice.

⁷ When it cracks, it bears; when it bends, it breaks.

UNKNOWN. An old proverb, referring to ice.

⁸ Trust not one night's ice.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculus Prudentum.

⁹ What a sea Of melting ice I walk on!

MARSHWATER, Maid of Honour. Act III, sc. 3.

¹⁰ O'er the ice the rapid skater flies,
With sport above and death below,

Where mischief lurks in gay disguise
Thou'lt lightly touch and quickly go.

(Sur un mince cristal l'hiver conduit leurs pas,
Telle est de nos plaisirs la légère surface,
Glissez, mortels; n'appuyez pas!)

PIERRE CHARLES ROY, Lines, beneath a print of a picture by Lancret. (Samuel Johnson, tr.)

Three children sliding on the ice,

Upon a summer's day,

As it fell out, they all fell in,

The rest they ran away.

³ Pastime, like wine, is poison in the morning.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. II, ch. 13.

⁴ Woe to the idol shepherd that leaveth the flock!

Old Testament: Zechariah, xi, 17.

Alas! what boots it with incessant care
To tend the homely, slighted shepherd's trade,
And strictly meditate the thankless Muse?
Were it not better done, as others use,
To sport with Amaryllis in the shade,
Or with the tangles of Nemea's hair?

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 64.

⁵ Both gods and men are angry with a man who lives in idleness, for in nature he is like the stingless drones who waste the labor of the bees, eating without working.

HERODOTUS, Works and Days, l. 303.

Not, like a cloistered drone, to read and doze,
In undeserving, undeserved repose.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, To the Rev. Dr. Ayscough.

A glorious lazy drone, grown fat with feeding
On others' toil.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act I, sc. 2.

⁶ What heart can think, or tongue express,
The harm that groweth of idleness?

JOHN HAYWOOD, Idleness.

⁷ To do nothing is the way to be nothing.

NATHANIEL HOWE, A Chapter of Proverbs.

⁸ To be idle and to be poor have always been reproaches, and therefore every man endeavours with his utmost care to hide his poverty from others, and his idleness from himself.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 17.

Time, with all its celerity, moves slowly to him whose whole employment is to watch its flight.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 21.

Money and time are the heaviest burdens of life, and . . . the unhappiest of all mortals are those who have more of either than they know how to use.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 30.

Gloomy calm of idle vacancy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 8 Dec.,

⁹ The Camel's hump is an ugly lump
Which well you may see at the Zoo;
But uglier yet is the hump we get
From having too little to do.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Just-So Stories: The Camel's Hump.

Kiddies and grown ups too-oo-oo,
If we haven't enough to do-oo-oo,
We get the hump,

Cameelious hump,

The hump that is black and blue!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Just-So Stories: The Camel's Hump.

¹⁰ Drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 21.

Laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes him.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Way to Wealth. Pt. I.

Idleness is the mother of poverty.

UNKNOWN, Rich Cabinet, p. 73. (1616)

¹¹ Of other tyrants short the strife,
But Indolence is King for life.

HANNAH MORE, Florio. Pt. i.

¹² Idleness wastes the sluggish body, as water is corrupted unless it moves. (Cernis ut ig-navum corrumpant otia corpus, Ut capiant vitium, ni moveantur, aquæ.)

OVID, Epistula ex Pontico. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 5.

¹³ Thee, too, my Paridel! she mark'd thee there,
Stretch'd on the rack of a too easy chair,
And heard thy everlasting yawn confess
The pains and penalties of Idleness.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 341.

¹⁴ A man who has no office to go to—I don't care who he is—is a trial of which you can have no conception.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot. Ch. 18.

of narrow fortunes. (Pigra extulit arctis Haud unquam sese virtus.)

SILIUS, Punica. Bk. xiii, l. 733.

¹⁶ How dull it is to pause, to make an end,
To rust unburnish'd, not to shine in use,—
As tho' to breathe were life!

TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 22.

¹⁷ There is no remedy for time misspent;
No healing for the waste of idleness,
Whose very languor is a punishment
Heavier than active souls can feel or guess.

AUBREY DE VERE, A Song of Faith.

¹⁸ But how can he expect that others should.
Build for him, sow for him, and at his call

Love him, who for himself will take no heed at all?
WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence.
St. 6.

IDOLATRY

1 Four species of idols beset the human mind:
idols of the tribe; idols of the den; idols of the market; and idols of the theatre.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum: Summary of the Second Part. Aphorism 39.

Mankind are an incorrigible race. Give them but bugbears and idols—it is all that they ask.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 76.

2 God keeps a niche
In Heaven to hold our idols; and albeit
He brake them to our faces, and denied
That our close kisses should impair their white,

I know we shall behold them raised, complete,

The dust swept from their beauty,—glorified,
New Memnons singing in the great God-light.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets: Futurity.

3 Spurn every idol others raise: before thine own Ideal bow.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st.
20.

4 Her overpowering presence made you feel
It would not be idolatry to kneel.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 74.

Her spirit is devout, and burns
With thoughts averse to bigotry;
Yet she herself, the idol, turns
Our thoughts into idolatry.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Verses on Our Queen.

5 Ah, spare your idol! think him human still.
Charms he may have, but he has frailties too!

Dote not too much, nor spoil what ye admire.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 496.

6 There's a one-eyed yellow idol to the north of Khatmandu,

There's a little marble cross below the town,
There's a broken-hearted woman tends the grave of Mad Carew,

And the yellow god forever gazes down.

J. MILTON HAYES, The Green Eye of the Yellow God.

7 What though the spicy breezes
Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle;
Though every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile:

In vain with lavish kindness
The gifts of God are strown;
The heathen, in his blindness,

Bows down to wood and stone.

REGINALD HEYER, From Greenland's Icy Mountains.

The 'eathen in 'is blindness bows down to wood an' stone;

'E don't obey no orders unless they is 'is own.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, The 'Eathen.

Ey'n them who kept thy truth so pure of old,
When all our fathers worship't stocks and stones.

MILTON, On the Late Massacre in Piedmont.

8 In that day a man shall cast his idols . . .
to the moles and to the bats.

Old Testament: Isaiah, ii, 20.

9 Yet, if he would, man cannot live all to this world. If not religious, he will be superstitious. If he worship not the true God, he will have his idols.

TREPORE PARKER, Critical and Miscellaneous
Writings: A Lesson for the Day.

10 Idolatry is in a man's own thought, not in the opinion of another.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Idolatry.

11 The god of my idolatry.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 114.

She is the goddess of my idolatry.

FANNY BURNEY, Letter to Miss S. Burney, 5
July, 1778.

Was this the idol that you worship so?

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 144.

12 An idiot holds his bauble for a god.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 79.

'Tis mad idolatry

To make the service greater than the god.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 56.

13 He who slays a king and he who dies for him are alike idolaters.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

14 And taking . . . a crooked piece of wood, and full of knots, hath carved it diligently,
. . . and fashioned it to the image of a man;
Or made it like some vile beast, laying it over with vermilion; . . . and when he had made a convenient room for it, set it in a wall. . . Then maketh he prayer for his goods, for his wife and children, and is not ashamed to speak to that which hath no life.

I—Ignorance: Definitions

15 Ignorance is not innocence, but sin.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Inn Album. Canto v.

¹ By ignorance we know not things necessary; by error we know them falsely.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

² The truest characters of ignorance
Are vanity, and pride, and arrogance.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 88.

³ Ignorance is the mother of admiration.

CHAPMAN, The Widow's Tears. Act ii, sc. 4.

Ignorance is the mother of impudence.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 2.

Impudence is the bastard of ignorance.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remarks, ii, 213. (1680)

⁴ Ignorance is the mother of devotion.

HENRY COLE, Dean of St. Paul's, Disputation with the Papists at Westminster, 31 March, 1559. (JEWELL, Works, Vol. iii, p. 1202.) Cole was one of the eight Romanist disputants at Westminster Abbey; BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, 4, 1. (1621); JEREMY TAYLOR, To a Person Newly Converted to the Church of England, 1657.

Your ignorance is the mother of your devotion to me.

DAYDEN, The Maiden Queen. Act i, sc. 2.

⁵ Ignorance and superstition ever bear a close, and even a mathematical, relation to each other.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, Jack Tier. Ch. 13. See also under SUPERSTITION.

⁶ If there are two things not to be hidden—love and a cough—I say there is a third, and that is ignorance, when once a man is obliged to do something besides wagging his head.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola.

⁷ Ignorance is the dominion of absurdity.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

⁸ The recipe for perpetual ignorance is: be satisfied with your opinions and content with your knowledge.

¹⁵ Blind and naked Ignorance

Delivers brawling judgments, unashamed,
On all things all day long.

TENNYSOON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 662.

¹⁶ For thus the saying goes, and I hold so:
Ignorance only is true wisdom's foe.

GEORGE WITKER, Abuses Stript and Whipt. Bk. ii, sat. 1. (1613)

¹⁷ I know that the multitude walk in darkness. I would put into each man's hand a lantern, to guide him; and not have him set out upon his journey depending for illumination on abortive flashes of lightning, or the coruscations of transitory meteors.

WORDSWORTH, Letter to Matthew.

IV—Ignorance of Ignorance

5
To be ignorant of one's ignorance is the malady of the ignorant.
A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Discourse.
See also KNOWLEDGE: ITS LIMITATIONS.

With Ignorance wage eternal war, to know thyself for ever strain,
Thine ignorance of thine ignorance is thy fiercest
foe, thy deadliest bane;
That blunts thy sense, and dulls thy taste; that deafens thine ears, and blinds thine eyes;
Creates the thing that never was, the Thing that ever is defies.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix,
st. 14.

6
I am not ashamed to confess that I am ignorant of what I do not know. (Nec me pudet fateri nescire quod nesciam.)

I drink the wine of aspiration and the drug of illusion. Thus I am never dull.
JOHN GALSWORTHY, The White Horn Mountain.

Impell'd with steps unceasing to pursue
Some fleeting good, that mocks me with the view;
That, like the circle bounding earth and skies,
Allures from far, yet, as I follow, flies.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 25.

13
Death only grasps; to live is to pursue,—
Dream on! there's nothing but illusion true!
O. W. HOLMES, The Old Player.

Feeling is deep and still; and the word that floats on the surface
Is as the tossing buoy, that betrays where the anchor is hidden.
Therefore trust to thy heart, and to what the world calls illusions.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. 2, l. 112.

14
Rob the average man of his life-illusion, and you rob him also of his happiness.
HENRIK IBSEN, The Wild Duck. Act v.

15

tite for life, than a feast of reality and indigestion therewith.
H. A. OVERSTREET, The Enduring Quest, p. 197.

16
Nothing can justly be called an illusion which is a permanent and universal human experience.
J. C. POWYS, The Complex Vision, p. 352.

17
And here we wander in illusions;
Some blessed power deliver us from hence!
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 3, 42.

18
I have, alas, only one illusion left, and that is the Archbishop of Canterbury.
SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.

Eine tüchtige Kuh, die ihn mit Butter versorgt.)

SCHILLER, Wissenschaft.

7 This is a gift that I have, simple, simple;
a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms,
figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions: these are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pia mater; and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 137.

5
The lunatic, the lover, and the poet
Are of imagination all compact: . . .
Such tricks hath strong imagination,
That, if it would but apprehend some joy,
It comprehends some bringer of that joy;
Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush supposed a bear!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 7.

6
The best in this kind are but shadows; and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 213.

7
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life,
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate and full of life
Into the eye and prospect of his soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 226.

Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it

To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st:

Suppose the singing birds musicians;
The grass whereon thou tread'st the presence
strew'd,

The flowers fair ladies, and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure or a dance.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 286.

8
O, who can hold a fire in his hand,
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite

By bare imagination of a feast?

Or wallow naked in December snow

By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 294.

And twenty more such names and men as these
Which never were nor no man ever saw.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: In- duction. Sc. 1.

9
But thou, that didst appear so fair
To fond imagination,

Dost rival in the light of day

Her delicate creation.

WORDSWORTH, Yarrow Visited.

10
In mid-way flight imagination tires;
Yet soon re-prunes her wing to soar anew.

I—Immortality: Definitions

¹³ Immortality is the bravest gesture of our humanity toward the unknown. It is always a faith, never a demonstration.

Immortality*, p. 47.)

¹⁴ Immortality is a great affirmation of the soul of man.

mortality*, p. 45.)

¹⁵ There is nothing strictly immortal, but immortality.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v,
sec. 12.

¹⁶ That which is the foundation of all our hopes and of all our fears; all our hopes and fears which are of any consideration: I mean a Future Life.

JOSEPH BUTLER, Analogy of Religion.

¹⁷ Immortality is the glorious discovery of Christianity.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Immortality.

¹⁸ Immortality—twin sister of Eternity.

J. G. HOLLAND, *Gold-Foil: The Way to Grow
Old*.

¹ The idea of immortality . . . will continue to ebb and flow beneath the mists and clouds of doubt and darkness as long as love kisses the lips of death. It is the rainbow—Hope, shining upon the tears of grief.

ROBERT C. INGERSOLL, The Ghosts.

² Belief in the future life is the appetite of reason.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Marcus Tullius and Quintus Cicero.

³ There is no more mystery or miracle or supernaturalness . . . in the wholly unproved fact of immortality than there is in the wholly unexplainable fact of life or in the unimaginable fact of the universe.

III—Immortality: Belief

¹⁵ My flesh shall rest in hope.

New Testament: Acts, II, 26.

Immortal Hope dispels the gloom!

An angel sits beside the tomb.

SARAH FLOWER ADAMS, The Mourners Came at Break of Day.

On the cold cheek of Death smiles and roses are blending,

And Beauty immortal awakes from the tomb.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit. Last lines.

It must be so,—Plato, thou reason'st well!—

Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,
This longing after immortality?

Or whence this secret dread, and inward horror,

Of falling into nought? Why shrinks the soul

Back on herself, and startles at destruction?

'T is the divinity that stirs within us;

'T is Heav'n itself that points out an hereafter,

And intimates eternity to man.

ADDISON, Cato. Act V, sc. 1.

¹⁶ Singly they are mortal, collectively they are immortal. (Singillatim mortales; cunctim perpetui.)

APULEIUS, De Deo Socratis.

¹⁷ No, no! The energy of life may be Kept on after the grave, but not begun;

And he who flagg'd not in the earthly strife,

From strength to strength advancing—only

he,

His soul well-knit, and all his battles won,

Mounts, and that hardly, to eternal life.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Immortality.

¹⁸ Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust,

Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul.
LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

1 As to immortality, my conviction stands thus: If there be anything in me that is of permanent worth and service to the universe, the universe will know how to preserve it. Whatsoever in me is not of permanent worth and service, neither can nor should be preserved.

HORACE JAMES BRIDGES. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 176.)

2 There is surely a piece of Divinity in us, something that was before the elements, and owes no homage to the sun.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 11.

3 I go to prove my soul!
I see my way as birds their trackless way.
I shall arrive! what time, what circuit first,
I ask not: but unless God send his hail
Or blinding fireballs, sleet or stifling snow,
In some time, his good time, I shall arrive.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. i.

If I stoop
Into a dark tremendous sea of cloud,
It is but for a time; I press God's lamp
Close to my breast; its splendour, soon or late,
Will pierce the gloom: I shall emerge one day.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v.

Unfettered to the secrets of the stars
In thy good time.

JOHN DRINKWATER, A Prayer.

4 Fool! All that is, at all,
Lasts ever, past recall;
Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure:

What entered into thee,

That was, is, and shall be;

Time's wheel runs back or stops; Potter and clay endure.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 27.

And I shall thereupon

Take rest, ere I be gone

Once more on my adventure brave and new.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 14.

5 When mortal man resigns his breath,
And falls, a clod of clay,
The soul immortal wings its flight
To never-setting day.

MICHAEL BRUCE, The Complaint of Nature.

6 Cold in the dust this perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once shall never
die!

That spark unburied in its mortal frame,
With living light, eternal, and the same.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope.
Canto ii, l. 429.

7 I laugh, for hope hath happy place with me,
If my bark sinks, 'tis to another sea.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, A Poet's Hope.

8 If I err in my belief that the souls of men are immortal, I gladly err, nor do I wish this error, in which I find delight, to be wrested from me. (Si in hoc erro, qui animos hominum immortales esse credam, libenter erro, nec mihi hunc errorem, quo delector, dum vivo, extorqueri volo.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xxiii, sec. 85.

Whatever that may be which feels, which has knowledge, which wills, which has the power of growth, it is celestial and divine, and for that reason it must of necessity be eternal. (Quicquid viget, celeste et divinum, ob eamque rem eternum sit necesse est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 27, sec. 66.

9 For this corruptible must put on incorrup-tion, and this mortal must put on immortality.

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, xv, 53.

They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.

New Testament: 1 Corinthians, ix, 25.

10 Though life's valley be a vale of tears,
A brighter scene beyond that vale appears.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 881.

11 Believing as I do that man in the distant future will be a far more perfect creature than he now is, it is an intolerable thought that he and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such long-continued slow progress. To those who fully admit the immortality of the human soul, the destruction of our world will not appear so dreadful.

CHARLES DARWIN, Life and Letters.

12 If then all souls, both good and bad do teach
With general voice, that souls can never
die;

'Tis not man's flattering gloss, but Nature's speech,

Which, like God's oracles can never lie.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nozze Teispum. Sec. 30, st.
81.

13 For I never have seen, and never shall see, that the cessation of the evidence of existence is necessarily evidence of the cessation of existence.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Joseph Vance. Ch. 40.

14 Or ever the silver cord be loosed or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 6, 7.

¹ I believe in immortality fundamentally, not because I vehemently crave it for myself as an individual, but because its denial seems to me to land the entire race in a hopeless situation and to reduce philosophy to a counsel of despair.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 12.)

² Here is my Creed. I believe in one God, Creator of the Universe. That he governs it by his Providence. That he ought to be worshipped. That the most acceptable service we render him is doing good to his other children. That the soul of Man is immortal, and will be treated with justice in another life respecting its conduct in this.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Ezra Stiles, 9 March, 1790.

³ I am immortal! I know it! I feel it! Hope floods my heart with delight! Running on air, mad with life, dizzy, reeling, Upward I mount—faith is sight, life is feeling,

Hope is the day-star of might!

MARGARET WITTER FULLER, Dryad Song.

⁴ I shall not wholly die; large residue Shall 'scape the queen of death. (Non omnis moriar multaque pars mei Vitabit Libitinam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 30, l. 6.

⁵ Let us not be uneasy then about the different roads we may pursue, as believing them the shortest, to that our last abode, but following the guidance of a good conscience, let us be happy in the hope that by these different paths we shall all meet in the end.

Nox est perpetua una dormienda.)
CATULLUS, Ode. Ode v, l. 4.

¹⁷ The origin of the absurd idea of immortal life is easy to discover; it is kept alive by hope and fear, by childish faith, and by cowardice.

CLARENCE DARROW. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 111.)

I do not believe in immortality and have no desire for it. The belief in it issues from the puerile egos of inferior men.

H. L. MENCKEN. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 35.)

Life is pleasant and I have enjoyed it, but I have no yearning to clutter up the Universe after it is over.

H. L. MENCKEN. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 114.)

¹⁸ Human society may most wisely seek justice and right in this world without depending on any other world to redress the wrongs of this.

CHARLES W. ELIOT. (Greatest Thoughts on Immortality, p. 108.)

Other world! There is no other world! Here or nowhere is the whole fact.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

1
Lo, in my heart I hear, as in a shell,
The murmur of the world beyond the grave,
Distinct, distinct, though faint and far it be.
Thou fool; this echo is a cheat as well,—
The hum of earthly instincts; and we crave
A world unreal as the shell-heard sea.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Sea-Shell Murmurs.

2
The thought of life that ne'er shall cease
Has something in it like despair.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i, l. 42.

3
His last day places man in the same state as before he was born; nor after death has the body or soul any more feeling than they had before birth.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. lvi, sec. 1.

4
To desire immortality is to desire the eternal perpetuation of a great mistake.

SCHOPENHAUER, The World as Will. Vol. ii, p. 561.

5
After death there is nothing and death itself is nothing, the final goal of a course full swiftly run. (Post mortem nihil est ipsaque mors nihil. Velocis spatii meta novissima.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 397.

Dost ask where thou shalt lie when death has claimed thee? Where the unborn lie. (Queris quo jaceas post obitum loco? Quo non nata jacent.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 407.

6
If you wish to live forever you must be wicked enough to be irretrievably damned, since the saved are no longer what they were,
and in hell alone do people retain their sinful nature: that is to say, their individuality.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

If some devil were to convince us that our dream of perpetual immortality is no dream but a hard fact, such a shriek of despair would go up from the human race as no other conceivable horror could provoke. . . . What man is capable of the insane self-conceit of believing that an eternity of himself would be tolerable even to himself?

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

This little life is all we must endure,
The grave's most holy peace is ever sure,

We fall asleep, and never wake again;
Nothing is of us but the mouldering flesh,
Whose elements dissolve and merge afresh

In earth, air, water, plants, and other men.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. xiv.

8
I am a temporary enclosure for a temporary purpose; that served, my skull and teeth, my idiosyncrasy and desire, will disperse, I believe, like the timbers of a booth after a fair.

H. G. WELLS, First and Last Things.

VI—Immortality and the Soul

9
The soul secur'd in her existence, smiles
At the drawn dagger, and defies its point.
The stars shall fade away, the sun himself Grow dim with age, and Nature sink in years,

But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wreck of matter, and the crush of worlds.

ANDERSON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1.

10
Awake, my soul! stretch every nerve,
And press with vigour on;
A heavenly race demands thy zeal,
And an immortal crown.

PHILIP DODDRIDGE, Zeal and Vigour in the Christian Race.

11
Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit! rest thee now!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Dirge.

Dust, to its narrow house beneath!
Soul, to its place on high!
They that have seen thy look in death
No more may fear to die.

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Dirge.

12
Crocus and cowslip from earth's riven tomb
Flower in the sun; but thou, O soul, shalt bloom,

Waked by the Star of that perpetual Spring,
Beyond the seed-time and the harvesting.

THOMAS S. JONES, JR., Quatrains.

13
No, no, I'm sure,
My restless spirit never could endure
To brood so long upon one luxury,
Unless it did, though fearfully, espy
A hope beyond the shadow of a dream.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 853.

14
Either the soul is immortal and we shall not die, or it perishes with the flesh, and we shall not know that we are dead. Live, then, as if you were eternal.

ANDRÉ MAUROIS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 53.)

15
Who, as they sung, would take the prison'd soul

And lap it in Elysium.

MILTON, Comus, l. 256.

16
The soul, uneasy and confin'd from home,
Rests and expatiates in a life to come.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 97.

¹ Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 14, l. 51.

² I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
Add, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 67.

³ I swear I think now that everything without exception has an eternal soul!

The trees have, rooted in the ground! the weeds of the sea have! the animals!

WALT WHITMAN, To Think of Time.

IMPERIALISM

⁴ The burning issue of imperialism growing out of the Spanish War involves the very existence of the Republic and the destruction of our free institutions. We regard it as the paramount issue of the campaign.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, Platform, adopted at Democratic National Convention, 5 July, 1900.

⁵ Learn to think imperially.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, at Guildhall,
London, 19 Jan., 1904.

⁶ So that Lancashire merchants whenever they like

Can water the beer of a man in Klondike,
Or poison the beer of a man in Bombay;
And that is the meaning of Empire Day.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Songs of Education.

⁷ My idea of anti-imperialism is opposition to the fashion of shooting everybody who doesn't speak English.

RICHARD CROKER, Interview, during 1900 campaign.

⁸ I do not share in the apprehension held by many as to the danger of governments becoming weakened and destroyed by reason of their extension of territory . . . Rather do I believe that our Great Maker is preparing the world, in His own good time, to become one nation, speaking one language, and when armies and navies will no longer be required.

U. S. GRANT, Second Inaugural, 4 March, 1873.

⁹ Nursed by stern men with empires in their brains.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers: Mason and Siddell.

¹⁰ The mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Letter to General Otis,
21 Dec., 1898.

¹¹ We have bought ten million Malays at two dollars a head unpicked, and nobody knows what it will cost to pick them.

THOMAS B. REED, referring to the purchase of the Philippines. (ROBINSON, Life.)

¹² With a hero at head, and a nation
Well gagged and well drilled and well cowed,

And a gospel of war and damnation,
Has not Empire a right to be proud?

SWENBURN, A Word for the Country. St. 14.

¹³ Nerva has united two things long incompatible, Empire and liberty. (Nerva Cæsar res olim dissociabilis miscuerit, principatum ac libertatem.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. Cicero has "Liberta-tem imperiumque." (Philippicæ, iv, 4.)

Here the two great principles, Imperium et libertas, res olim insociabiles (saith Tacitus), began to encounter each other.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL, Divi Britannici, p.
349. (1675)

One of the greatest Romans, when asked what were his politics replied, "Imperium et libertas."
That would not make a bad program for a British Ministry.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Mansion House,
London, 10 Nov., 1879.

IMPOSSIBILITY

¹⁴ You cannot make a crab walk straight. (Ὁσῶτε τραχέας τὸν καρκίνον ὁρᾶν βαλῖται.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 1083.

¹⁵ It is a disease of the soul to be enamoured of things impossible of attainment.

BIAS. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Bias. Bk. i, 86.)

¹⁶ It is not a lucky word, this same impossible;
no good comes of those that have it so often in their mouth.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. iii, bk. 3, ch.
10.

¹⁷ There is no obligation to attempt the impossible. (Impossibilium nulla obligatio est.)

¹⁹ Consider nothing, before it has come to pass,

as impossible. (Nihil, ante quam evenierit, non evenire posse arbitrari.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 14, sec. 30.

And what's impossible, can't be,
And never, never comes to pass.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Maid of the Moor.

Apparently there is nothing that cannot happen.
MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. 1, p. 91.

I think, and think on things impossible,
Yet love to wander in that Golden Maze.

DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act iii, sc. 1.

Hope not for impossibilities.
